Last Thursday as Mrs. Will Rogers was returning from Rising Sun, she got out of the buggy just before here to adjust some of the harness, which had gotten out of place, and while out of the buggy the horse started and finding no hand on the lines, he began to increase his speed, when he was noticed by the writer coming at a mad gallop. Roberts the young couple came slowly from the parlor preceded by the officiating minister Rev. J. E. Roberts, of the M. E. church, a brother of the bride, and taking their position on the veranda under a canopy of autumn leaves and flowers, Rev. Rob erts in the beautiful marriage ceremony of the Methodist church pronounced the happy young couple husband and wife. The veranda was tastefully decorated with autumn leaves, flowers and ferns. The pretty young bride was handsomely attired in cerulean blue messaline silk with bead trimming, and wore white dress gloves and carried bride's roses. CHAPTER VI.

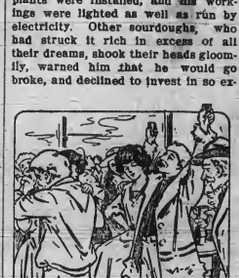
It was held by the thousands of hero-worshipping chechaquos that Daylight was a man absolutely without fear. But Bettles and Dan MacDonald and other sourdoughs shook their heads and laughed as they mentioned women. And they were right. He had always been afraid of them from the time, himself a lad of seventeen, when Queen Anne, of Juneau, made open and ridiculous love to him. For that matter, he never had known women. Born in a mining-camp where they were rare and mysterious, having no sisters, his mother dying while he was an infant, he had never been in contact with them.

But it was left to the Virgin to give him his final fright. She was found one morning dead in her cabin. A shot through the head had done it, and she had left no message, no explanation. Then came the talk. Some wit, voicing public opinion, called it a case of too much Daylight. She had killed herself because of him. Everybody knew this, and said so. The correspondents wrote it up, and once more Burning Daylight, King of the Klondike, was sensationally featured in the Sunday supplements of the United States. The Virgin had straightened up, so the feature-stories ran, and correctly so. Never had she entered a Dawson City dance-hall. When she first arrived from Circle City, she had earned her living by washing clothes. Next, she had bought a sewing-machine and made men's drill parkas, fur caps, and moosehide mittens. Then she had gone as a clerk into the First Yukon Bank. All this, and more, was known and told, though one and all were agreed that Daylight, while the cause, had been the innocent cause of her untimely end.

And the worst of it was that Daylight knew it was true. Always would he remember that last night he had seen her. He had thought nothing of it at the time; but, looking back, he was haunted by every little thing that had happened. In the light of the tragic event, he could understand everything—her quietness, that calm certitude as if all vexing questions of living had been smoothed out and were gone, and that certain ethereal sweetness about all that she had said and done that had been almost maternal. He remembered the way she had looked at him, how she had laughed when he narrated Mickey Doian's mistake in staking the fraction on Skookum Gulch. Her laughter had been lightly joyous, while at the same time it had lacked its old-time robustness. Not that she had been grave or subdued. On the contrary, she had been so patently content, so filled with peace. She had fooled him, fool that he was. He had even thought that night that her feeling for him had passed, and he had taken delight in the thought, and caught visions of the satisfying future friendship that would be theirs with this perturbing love out of the way.



And then, when he stood at the door, cap in hand, and said good night. It had struck him at the time as a funny and embarrassing thing, her bending over his hand and kissing it. He had felt like a fool, but he shivered now when he looked back on it and felt again the touch of her lips on his hand. She was saying good-by, an eternal good-by, and he had never guessed. At that very moment, and for all the moments of the evening, coolly and deliberately, as he well knew her way, she had been resolved to die. If he had only known it! Untouched by the contagious malady himself, nevertheless he would have married her if he had had the slightest inkling of what she contemplated. And yet he knew, furthermore, that here was a certain stiff-kneed pride that would not have permitted her to accept marriage as an act of philanthropy. There had already been no saving her, after all. The love-disease had fastened upon her, and she had been doomed from the first to perish of it.

Six thousand spent the winter of 1897 in Dawson, work on the creeks went on apace, while beyond the passes it was reported that one hundred thousand more were waiting for the spring. Late one brief afternoon, Daylight, on the benches between French Hill and Skookum Hill, caught a wider vision of things. Beneath him lay the richest part of Eldorado Creek, while up and down Bonanza he could see for miles. It was a scene of a vast devastation. The hills, to their tops, had been shorn of trees, and their naked sides showed signs of goring and perforating that even the mantle of snow could not hide. Beneath him, in every direction, were the cabins of men. But not many men were visible. A blanket of smoke filled the valleys and turned the gray day to melancholy twilight. Smoke arose from a thousand holes in the snow, where, deep down on bed-rock, in the frozen muck and gravel, men crept and scratched and dug, and ever built more fires to break the grip of the frost.

Devastation was what was needed, he decided; and his quick imagination sketched Eldorado Creek, from mouth to source, and from mountain top to mountain top, in the hands of one capable management. Even steam-thawing, as yet untried, but bound to come, he saw would be a makeshift. What should be done was to hydraulic the valley sides and benches, and then, on the creek bottom, to use gold-dredges. There was the very chance for another big killing. He had wondered just what was precisely the reason for the Guggenhammers and the big English concerns sending in their high-salaried experts. That was their scheme. That was why they had approached him for the sale of worked-out claims and allings. They were content to let the small mine-owners gopher out what they could, for there would be millions in the leavings.

And, gazing down on the smoky inferno of crude effort, Daylight outlined the new game he would play, a game in which the Guggenhammers and the rest would have to reckon with him. But along with the delight in the new conception came a weariness. He was tired of the long Arctic years, and he was curious about the Outside—the great world of which he had heard other men talk and of which he was as ignorant as a child. There were games out there to play. It was a larger table, and there was no reason why he with his millions should not sit in and take a hand. So it was that afternoon on Skookum Hill, that he resolved to play the last best Klondike hand and pull for the Outside. It took time, however. He put trusted agents to work on the heels of great experts, and on the creeks where they began to buy he likewise bought. Wherever they tried to corner a worked-out creek, they found him standing in the way, owning blocks of claims or artfully scattered claims that put all their plans to naught.

Followed wars, truces, compromises, victories, and defeats. By 1898, sixty thousand men were on the Klondike, and all their fortunes and affairs rocked back and forth and were affected by the battles Daylight fought. And more and more the taste for the larger game urged in Daylight's mouth. Here he was already locked in grapples with the great Guggenhammers, and winning, fiercely winning. Possibly the severest struggle was waged on Ophir, the veriest of moose-pastures, whose low-grade dirt was valuable only because of its vastness. The ownership of a block of seven claims in the heart of it gave Daylight his grip, and they could not come to terms. The Guggenhammer experts concluded that it was too big for him to handle, and when they gave him an ultimatum to that effect he accepted and bought them out. The plan was his own, but he sent down to the States for competent engineers to carry it out. In the Rinkability watershed, eighty miles away, he built his reservoir, and for eighty miles the huge wooden conduit carried the water across country to Ophir. Estimated at three millions, the reservoir and conduit cost nearer four. Nor did he stop with this. Electric power plants were installed, and his workings were lighted as well as run by electricity. Other sourdoughs, who had struck it rich in excess of all their dreams, shook their heads gloomily, warned him that he would go broke, and declined to invest in so extravagant a venture. But Daylight smiled, and sold out the remainder of his town-site holdings. He sold at the right time, at the height of the placer boom. When he prophesied to his old cronies, in the Moosehorn Saloon, that within five years town lots in Dawson could not be given away, while the cabins would be chopped up for firewood, he was laughed at roundly, and assured that the mother-lode would be found ere that time. But he went ahead, when his need for lumber was finished, selling out his sawmills as well. Likewise, he began to get rid of his scattered holdings on the various creeks, and without thanks to any one he finished his conduit, built his dredges, imported his machinery, and made the gold of Ophir immediately accessible. And he, who five years before had crossed over the divide from Indian River and threaded the silent wilderness, his dogs packing Indian fashion, himself living Indian fashion on straight moose meat, now heard the hoarse whistles calling his hundreds of laborers to work, and watched them toil under the white glare of the arc-lamps.

But having done the thing, he was ready to depart. And when he let the word go out, the Guggenhammers vied with the English concerns and with a new French company in bidding for Ophir and all its plant. The Guggenhammers bid highest, and the price they paid netted Daylight a clean million. It was current rumor that he was worth anywhere from twenty to thirty millions. But he alone knew just how he stood, and that, with his last claim sold and the table swept clean of his winnings, he had ridden his hunch to the tune of just a trifle over eleven millions.

His departure was a thing that passed into the history of the Yukon along with his other deeds. All the Yukon was his guest, Dawson the seat of the festivity. On that one last night no man's dust save his own was good. Drinks were not to be purchased. Every saloon ran open, with extra relays of exhausted bartenders, and the drinks were given away. A man who refused this hospitality, and persisted in paying, found a dozen fights on his hands. The veriest chechaquos rose up to defend the name of Daylight from such insult. And through it all, on moccasined feet, moved Daylight, hell-roaring Burning Daylight, overspilling with good nature and camaraderie, howling his he-wolf howl and claiming the night as his, bending men's arms down on the bars, performing feats of strength, his bronzed face flushed with drink, his black eyes flashing, clad in overalls and blanket coat, his ear-flaps dangling and his gauntleted mittens swinging from the cord across the shoulders. But this time it was neither an ante nor a stake that he threw away, but a mere marker in the game that he who held so many markers would not miss.

Continued.

There Will be Some Apples.

England's apple crop this season is one of the largest for many years. Pears and plums are also abundant. The apples are of finer quality than for a number of years.

—o—

One of the largest sales of apples made so far this year to a single buyer was made last week in Chicago when 10,000 barrels, or approximately 60 cars of central western fruit were sold at a good price to a Chicago fruit dealer.

—o—

Ross county's, (Ohio), bumper crop of apples is now being harvested and it is pronounced to be the best, both in quality and quantity, grown in thirty years. The yield for the entire county is estimated between 25,000 and 40,000 barrels, about 25 per cent. of which were summer and fall varieties which have already been marketed.

The West Virginia and northern Virginia apple picking season is now in full blast and the fruit is proving of excellent quality, although the crop is less than last year. Reports which have been sent out as to bitter rot have been grossly exaggerated, this is confined to a very few orchards and not to an appreciable percentage of the crop.

Corn a National Flower.

Rumor has been going the rounds of Washington that the Department of Agriculture will soon lend its energies to have Indian corn or maze made the official floral emblem of the United States. Of course it is not necessary for Uncle Sam to adopt any emblem at all, but other nations are represented by the shamrock, the thistle, the lily the chrysanthemum, etc. Seriously the Indian corn is a most beautiful and graceful plant and its adoption as a national flower would be appropriate since it is a native of America and occupies an important place in the prosperity of the country. Without corn the earlier inhabitants of the United States would have perished. Today corn is everything to the American. He eats it on the cob and off, uses it in many kinds of foods, turns it into hogs and cattle, and distils it into mountain dew. In its sturdy vigor corn represents all that is America. While it may droop under continued drouth, it regains new life when two or three rains have fallen and it yields a most magnificent harvest. Verily corn is the keystone of American prosperity and we could go a great distance before we could obtain a flower more appropriate as a national emblem.

The "culture" of the Finlanders is not incompatible, it would seem with an institution that savors strongly of the old slave markets of ancient Rome and the orient of more recent days. According to the account of a local newspaper, the Finnish poor law system puts up able-bodied paupers at auction, displaying them in the market place, where they are examined by employers of labor desirous of finding cheap workmen. The bidding works downward, the authorities handing over to the lowest bidder the chosen pauper, for the person acquiring the right to his labor receives an allowance from the authorities for his upkeep, the amount being that of the lowest tender."

Saved His Mother's Life.

"Four doctors had given me up," writes Mrs. Laura Gaines, of Avoca, La., "and my children and all my friends were looking for me to die, when my son insisted that I use Electric Bitters. I did so, and they have done me a world of good. I will always praise them." Electric Bitters is a priceless blessing to women troubled with fainting and dizzy spells, backache, headache, weakness, debility, constipation or kidney disorders. Use them and gain new health, strength and vigor. They're guaranteed to satisfy or money refunded. Only 50c at all dealers. X

Many persons passing through the Capitol and White House grounds of late having been led to wonder at the action of the men who were cutting away at the trunks of the trees; digging out hollows in them, boring holes and chipping away as if they were doing some queer kind of cabinet work. They were in fact. They were carpentering or doctering up diseased trees, cutting out the diseased wood, cleaning the cavities and filling them with cement. It's an improved and apparently a very effective process and many historic trees will live longer and be a continued joy to the people because of it.

The hog business may well be divided into two classes, the raising of market stock and the raising of pure breeding stock. It is a regretable fact that, on the whole the man who deals chiefly or solely with market stock shows much better judgment than do many of the breeders of pure bred stock. Excepting the chicken fanciers, the breeders of no other class of live stock pay more attention to useless fads or fancy points than do many swine breeders.

Teachers Meeting.

Boone County Teachers' Association met at Petersburg, Saturday, October 21. The following teachers were present: O. V. Brooks, Mrs. Bondurant, G. W. Skinner, J. H. Huey.

Devotional exercises were conducted by Bro. Brooks. Prayer by Bro. Bradley, pastor of the Methodist church.

The first on the program was a paper on "The Value and Methods of Physical Culture," by J. H. Huey. By request of Supt. Riley the following extracts are taken from the above paper:

"Physical Culture, or Physical Education, is the education which is directed to the object of giving strength, health and vigor to the bodily organs and powers, and to give dignity of bearing and grace of movement to the human body.

"In order to make plain how easily a student may school him or herself to live up to a standard of Physical Culture, I will mention ten rules, which no health seeker should neglect. Anywhere and any time can and must these rules be lived up to:

"1. Stretch every muscle in your body.

"2. Keep your spine flexible by spinal relation.

"3. Carry the weight of your body in a proper manner.

"4. Hold your neck in line with your back bone.

"4. Brace yourself with a firm body 'body grip.'

"10. Breathe daily, eat simple ragrm in a manner rhythmic and sustained.

"7. Walk with your body in line with your leading foot.

"8. Protect your body against ill health and weakness by muscular positiveness.

"9. Sleep flat on your chest.

"10. Breathe daily, eat simple food and take long walks."

After the above paper was read Supt. Riley made a short talk on School Hygiene.

Mr. Skinner then read an interesting paper on "Geography and Map Drawing," in which he gave some good suggestions as to methods of teaching geography in the different grades.

Bro. Bradley and Supt. Riley also offered valuable suggestions on Map Drawing.

In the afternoon Supt. Riley addressed the teachers, patrons and pupils on the subject of "Schools."

It was a great disappointment that more teachers and patrons were not present. X. X. X.

The Court of Appeals, last week, affirmed the judgment of the Boone Circuit Court in the case of Rogers against Flick. This was a controversy growing out of Flick claiming that he had a right of passway to and from some land of which he had possession and lies back of Rogers' land known as the Mike Clore farm at Bellevlew. The judgment of the Court of Appeals sustains Flick in his contention.

Sheriff B. B. Hume has distributed a large number of McCreary and McDermott buttons in the last few weeks. Every time he delivered a tax receipt he would pin one of the buttons on the taxpayer and it was seldom that he found a man who was not willing to wear the emblem.

Dirt roads are in a worse condition than usual at this time of the year, and it is so late in the season that it is very doubtful if they will be any better before the winter season begins, a fact that is very discouraging to those who use them daily.

A very large crowd of colored people and several whites attended the baptising in the creek near the creamery, last Sunday afternoon. The parties baptised, six in number, had united with the colored Baptist church during the protracted meeting of the two or three weeks last past.

Congressman A. B. Rouse represented the Burlington Masonic Lodge in the Grand Lodge at Louisville last week. Bore a hole an inch and a half in circumference as deep in the stump as you can, pour a tablespoonful of saltpeter, fill with water and plug up the hole. Let stand through the winter and in the spring fill hole with coal oil and light. It will be found the stump will be entirely consumed, roots and all. The saltpeter will penetrate the stump thorough ly and it will burn readily. The above is going the rounds of the papers and if you have some old stumps that you want to get rid of it might be worth a trial.

causes heartburn, sour stomach, nervousness, nausea, impure blood, and more trouble than many different kinds of diseases. The food you eat ferments in your stomach, and the poisons it forms are absorbed into your whole system, causing many distressing symptoms. At the first sign of indigestion, try

Come to Covington as Often As You Like

We'll Pay Your Railroad Fare in Cash or

We'll Pay You 3c A Mile If You Drive In.

OUR PROPOSTION:

We will refund Railroad fares, Trolly Car fares and Steam Boat fares, or will allow three cents per mile for persons driving into Covington and purchasing goods from any or all of the stores of the members of the Retail Merchants Association of the Industrial Club of Covington, on a basis of one mile for each dollar's worth of goods purchased.

To illustrate:—If you travel, say ten miles, you would be required to purchase at least $20.00 worth of goods in order to have your entire Railroad fare refunded, you having traveled ten miles each way, making a total of twenty miles.

If your total purchase amounts to a less number of dollars than the number of miles you travel, we will refund as many miles of your fare as the number of dollars you spend with members of our Association.

On the other hand, if you spend a greater number of dollars than miles you travel, in addition to your entire fare or mileage, we will refund one per cent on the purchase you make in excess of the amount necessary to secure the refund of your fare.

By this plan you not only have your Railroad fare or mileage paid, but you can take advantage of the many Special Sales that the members of our Association continually offer.

Covington merchandise has a State-wide reputation for excellence and up to-dateness—Covington values are always a bit better than most people expect—Covington prices are always a shade lower. And there is a reason for these better values and lower prices. Come to Covington and see.

We are members of the Retail Merchants Association of Covington, and will rebate fares on the plan as outlined above.

The Democrats of Boone county are a unit in their desire to see James B. McCreary elected Governor of Kentucky, and there is no better way in which they can emphasize that desire than by going to the polls on Tuesday, November 7th, and voting for him and the other nominees. McCreary has been tried as a public official all the way from a member of the Kentucky Legislature to and including the office of United States Senator, and has proven true to his constituents in every office. He is honest, upright and capable as are all the others on the Democratic ticket—just such a man as men should love to honor with their votes, as he measures up to the requirements of the times from every stand point. Turn out and vote for McCreary.

County Judge P. E. Cason came down to his office, the latter part of last week, it being his first appearance on the street since he came from the hospital in Cincinnati. He has not recovered sufficiently yet to do two men's work, but his trouble is disappearing gradually.

When you have a bad cold you want the best medicine obtainable so as to cure it with as little delay as possible. Here is a druggists opinion: "I have sold Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for fifteen years," says Enos Lollar of Saratoga, Ind., "and consider it the best on the market." For sale by all dealers. X

Whether it is because litigants are becoming more opulent and so able to pay for litigation or whether it is for some other reason the Supreme Court of the U. S. is becoming so clogged with business that it is difficult to get decisions within the life time of the litigants. The creation of new courts to help care for this press of business does not seem to give any appreciable relief.

Foley's Kidney Remedy vs. Hopeless Cases.

Hon. Ark. J. E. Freeman says: "I had a severe case of kidney trouble and could not work and my case seemed hopeless. One large bottle of Foley's Kidney Remedy cured me and I have never been bothered since. I always recommend it." For sale at Jones' drug store, Walton, Ky.

Foot Ball.

The game of foot ball played here last Friday afternoon by the Burlington and Erlanger High School foot ball teams was a one-sided affair, the score being 6 to 0 in favor of the visitors. In the third quarter of the game the Burlington team did put up a feeble contest at one time, but excepting that one spurt the Erlanger boys had everything their own way. It was the first game on the part of Burlington and the players were lost all the time, seldom knowing who had possession of the pig-skin. They could neither kick for or catch the ball, but with more training they will put up a better contest. Their opponents were not strong enough to bring out any of the gridiron talent on Erlanger's part.

The above teams will play at Erlanger next Friday afternoon.

Base Ball.

The Ft. Thomas base ball team came down last Saturday afternoon and was defeated by the local team 6 to 1. The features of the game were two sensational one-handed stops made by Elbert Clore at first, and the pitching of Allen Black and the second pitcher put in the box by Ft. Thomas. Knowing that he had an excellent catcher in the person of Slayback, Black pitched himself out of two or three bad propositions with ease. The first pitcher Ft. Thomas presented was easy, and the Burlington team proceeded to put the game on ice in the early innings, but the visitor's second occupant of the box was a spit-ball artist and held Burlington to two hits and one run in five innings he officiated. Several of the Ft. Thomas players had visited Burlington before and the base ball surroundings looked natural to them. They are a set of very pleasant gentlemen on the diamond as well as elsewhere.

Black allowed Ft. Thomas six hits and struck out thirteen of their men.

Manager Kirkpatrick has booked as the attraction at the ball park next Saturday afternoon, a strong combination team composed of Taylorsport and Constance players. Come out and see the game.

The game of ball at the park next Saturday afternoon will be called at 2 p. m., on account of the shortness of the afternoons.

Next Saturday the Grant county Democrats will have a big rally at Williamstown. One of the features of the day will be a big automobile parade, ladies occupying the machines.

...TY INCREASING

...Day 140 Years May Be ...d Life, Says Minister.

...ing that man reaches the ... of his usefulness at the age ... or anywhere near that mark ... branded as incorrect by Rev. ... Beresford in his sermon in ... First Universalist church Wal... Hills, yesterday. He deplored ... tendency which he said exists ...day by which youth is given ... power than maturity. This ... the era of the young man. ...turity is tending to be crowd... to the corner," said Dr. Beres...ford.

"Yet all the world is not in the hands of the young man. More people reach the age of 70 to-day than reached 40 three hundred years ago. The term of life is lengthening, and perhaps some day humanity will normally reach twice 70.

"With the advent of better hygiene, sanitation more rational rules of living, better food, human life is being steadily length...ened. Shakespeare retired and considered himself an old man at 45. The future, not the past, is to be the age of patriarchs. Some of the notable achievements of history, past and contemporary, are the deeds of those who have reached their three and four score. Youth has not all the glory.

Farmers Ought to Raise Sugar.

That the American public can forever deliver itself from the peril of high sugar prices, is the opinion of Secretary Wilson, of the Department of Agriculture, who says the great remedy lies in the production of more sugar, and he adds that the production of beet sugar in America is increasing at a remarkable rate, owing to the profit to the farmer and the increasing demand for the finished product.

He said beet factories could operate to advantage in connection with the dairy industry, in that the refuse from the beet sugar plants makes excellent feed for dairy cattle. In his opinion the American farmer can raise enough sugar to supply the world. He said:

"We ought to make our own sugar in this country, and this has been my theory ever since I went into the Department of Agriculture. Drought in Germany or revolution in Cuba could bring no panic to the American housewife if the American farmer seized his opportunity. Relief is even now in sight. When I went into the department the production of the entire country was 29,000 tons and now it is more than 500,000 tons.

"Beet sugar is as satisfactory as cane sugar from the housewife's standpoint, and the crop is one of the most profitable.

"The development of the sugar beet industry waits upon better farming. Twenty tons an acre can be grown by good farming. The present average in America is 10 tons. I have repeatedly said that if we could get the average up to 18 tons we could take the duty off and defy the foreign crop. But we must wait until the farmers know how."

Secretary Wilson has been experimenting with a seed which he hopes will be so perfect that there shall be but one germinating point per seed, thus ellminating the labor of thinning the crop, for the present seed has from one to five germinating points.

Apples are Wholesome.

All medical practitioners declare that the most wholesome of all fruits is the apple. It contains a principle—malic acid—which has a beneficial action upon the liver. The family apple supply is as essential as that of potatoes.

The system of the young child desires this luscious fruit, and his palate gives outward manifestation of that fact when he defies the bulldog and the farmer's wrath in order that he may appease his appetite for apples. We advise the sufferers from dyspepsia to eat apples, and cut down their dietary in other respects.

Sufferers from rheumatism are also benefitted by apples. Indeed, apple is opposed to a number of abnormal conditions. An old adage states than an apple a day will keep the doctor away. An apple eaten after the meal has a cleansing and refrigerant effect upon the mouth, and is in some ways an aid to the process of digestion.

Seed 1,000 Years Old Grows.

Long, black ears of corn grown in La Plata county from kernels 1,000 or more years old, found in cliff dwellings, will form an important exhibit from Colorado at the American Land and Irrigation Exposition, New York, next month.

The corn grown from this ancient seed is of an especially fine flavor, quite unlike any modern corn known. It has high nutritive values and is believed to have been the chief means of subsistence of the dolichocephalic or narrowheaded people who inhabitated this territory long ago.

They dwelt in great community houses three or four stories high, built on the brinks of canons and containing as many as 1,000 rooms. The corn was preserved in sealed jars found in the deserted homes.—Denver Times.

J. W. Copeland, of Dayton, O., purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for his boy who had a cold, and before the bottle was all used the boy's cold was gone. Is that not better than to pay a five dollar doctor bill? For sale by all dealers. X

ARE THEY AFRAID?

There are, in this neighborhood agents for several "bucket bowl" cream separators. "Bucket bowl" separators are the kind with wide mouth bowls, full of parts, set on top of their spindles. These agents say, to the farmers intending to buy a separator. "Look out for the Tubular," or "Don't try the Tubular," or "Beware of the Tubular." To hear them talk you would guess right away that is the best cream separator made, and that these "bucket bowl" fellows are afraid of it. And they are afraid of it. The Tubular surpasses every other separator in every particular, and you should take mighty good care you do see a Tubular before you buy a separator. We will be pleased to show you the latest Tubular and give you an illustrated catalog.

Observe the plumb bob on rear of the Tubular frame. It makes leveling quick, easy, accurate—enables you to keep the Tubular level and get the best work out of it.

Fattening Turkeys.

As turkeys are sold by weight on the general market, and the larger they are the more we can get per pound for them, every effort should be made by the turkey growers to raise large birds. Turkeys weighing 18 or 20 pounds at marketing time coin the money much faster than ones weighing 14 or 15 pounds. We should be careful, however, not to get the turkeys too large for breeding purposes, which is possible.

Turkeys that are to be sold on the market should be fed a small amount of grain, gradually increasing, before the insect season is destroyed by the frosts, in this way we can have them used to grain feed and ready for a full grain ration when the insect season is past. By this method the change in feed is gradual and the turkeys are not so liable to become sickly as when such a radical change is made in the feed. As soon as they are on full feed the turkeys should be fed in troughs as the grain feed must be alternated with mashes to produce fat very rapidly. Fattening turkeys should al so be provided with low broad roosting perches to prevent bumble foot. These roosts should be two or three feet from the ground and two feet apart. Do not have the roosts close enough to the feeding place so that the troughs will become filthy.

When fattening turkeys do not confine them, they will not be as healthy or do so well as when they have their freedom. Turkeys that are being fed all they will eat will soon get so they will not roam very far. If the soft feed can be moistened with milk instead of water the turkeys will relish them more and consequently do better. Keep plenty of charcoal and sharp grit near the feeding troughs.

A Reader.

Have you heard it said that ministers' sons turn out badly? Here is something which seems to prove the contrary.

A noted French scientist has studied this subject and he has a long list of names to prove that the sons of ministers make up the larger number of the world's great men.

Here, for instance, are some of the names: Agassiz, Hallam, Jonathan Edwards, Whately, the Wesleys, Beechers, and Spurgeons Cowper, Coleridge, Tennyson Lowell, Oliver Wendell Hohmes, Emerson, Charles Kingsley, Matthew Arnold, Dean Stanley, Macaulay (a grandson), Thackeray, Sir Christopher Wren, Sir Joshua Reynolds, Swift, Sterne, Hazlitt Presidents Cleveland and Arthur, Peter Stuyvesant, Morse, the inventor Lord Curzon, Viceroy of India, Sir Evelyn Wood, and many others in high places.

The matter of feeding the mare is quite an important consideration.

News In General.

Aviator Rodgers made 1,199 miles in twenty-one hours and 53 minutes. Many of his miles were made in forty-eight seconds.

On 'Change in Chicago the other day a $1,000 bill passed as a $100 bill through the hands of no less than eight business men before the mistake was noticed. It might be well for you to pay more regard to your $1,000 bills.

Silk stockings were first manufactured in Spain. When first introduced a Spanish [illegible] presented a pair to his Queen through the hands of her Minister of State. They were promptly returned by the Minister, who intimated to the grandee that he would do well to bear in mind that the "Queen of Spain had no legs." The earliest pair in England were worn by Edward VII,—a gift from the merchant prince of that age. Sir Thomas Gresham.

Superstitions about the weather declare that a mackerel sky will leave the ground dry; that between 12 and 2 you can tell what the day will do; that when apple skins are thick you may expect a cold winter; that a rainbow in the morning bids sailors take warning, while a rainbow at night is the sailor's delight; that the day of the month of the first snow indicates the number of snowstorms to be expected that season; and that if the wishbone of the turkey at Thanksgiving be light in color, you may expect great snowstorms during the ensuing winter.

Tips the Scales at 525 Pounds.

St. Louis, Mo., October 15.—Miss Gertrude Burk, of Chicago, largest woman in the world, weighing two and one-half times as much as President Taft, is visiting at the home of Mrs. H. W. Hayes, in Alton, Ill.

Miss Burk is 22 years old, weighs 525 pounds, stands 5 feet seven inches, and some of her measurements are: Arm, 28 inches; waist 54; bust, 75. She wears No. four and one-half shoes and No. seven gloves.

When she was born Miss Burk weighed 15 pounds and at eight years old she weighed 250. At the Hayes home she sits on two chairs placed facing each other.

Miss Burk goes through doors by turning sideways, and it is a pretty hard squeeze at that. The Hayeses have an iron bed which Miss Burk occupies and thus obviates the chances of her dreams being disturbed by crashing furniture.

Efforts have been made by showmen to get Miss Burk to exhibit herself, but she has never been tempted. Her parents left her an estate and she does not need the money.

It has been a long time since the Democratic party was as well nnited on its ticket at a State election in Kentucky as it is at present. Every candidate on the ticket is satisfactory to the party, and the ticket's defeat on the seventh inst. can only be brought about by the overconfidence on the part of the Democratic voters, who, if they turn out and go to the polls will pull up old time Democratic majority. The people of Kentucky are not satisfied with the conditions that have been brought about during the present administration of State affairs, and having perfect confidence in James B. McCreary and the other Democratic candidates they are disposed to have a new deal commencing with the first of the coming year. With McCreary as Governor, assisted by some of the very best men in Kentucky, and who are on the ticket with him, Kentucky will be given a business administration abreast with the times, and, at the same time an economy that will guard the welfare of the citizens will be observed from the first to delight in honoring with his

At the head of affairs the Democrats propose to place a man whose official career has been a credit to him and an honor to his constituents, and that man is James B. McCreary, whom every Kentuckian should delight in honoring him with his vote on the 7th inst. McCreary has been a favorite of Boone county Democrats for many years, and to their admiration of so worthy a man they should testify by giving him considerably above a normal majority at the election.

Seven States will vote for Governor or other State officers next Tuesday. Much interest centers in Massachusetts, where Eugene Foss is a candidate for reelection on the Democratic ticket.

CHAPTER VII.

In no blaze of glory did Burning Daylight descend upon San Francisco. Not only had he been forgotten, but the Klondike along with him. The world was interested in other things, and the Alaskan adventure, like the Spanish War, was an old story. He settled down in St. Francis Hotel, was interviewed by the cub-reporters on the hotel-run, and received brief paragraphs of [illegible] twenty-four hours.

Several months passed in San Francisco, during which time he studied the game and its rules, and prepared himself to take a hand.

Tiring of being merely an onlooker, he ran up to Nevada, where the new gold-mining boom was fairly started—"just to try a flutter," as he phrased it to himself. The flutter on the Tonopah Stock Exchange lasted just ten days, during which time his smashing, wild-bull game played ducks and drakes with the more stereotyped gamblers, and at the end of which time, having gambled Florida into his fist, he let go for a net profit of half a million. Whereupon, smacking his lips, he departed for San Francisco and the St. Francis Hotel. It tasted good, and his hunger for the game became more acute.

And once more the papers sensationalised him. BURNING DAYLIGHT was a big-letter headline again. Interviewers flocked about him. Old files of magazines and newspapers were searched through, and the romantic and historic Elam Harnish, Adventurer of the Frost, King of the Klondike, and Father of the Sourdoughs, strode upon the breakfast table of a million homes along with the toast and breakfast foods. Even before his elected time, he was forcibly launched into the game. Financiers and promoters, and all the flotsam and jetsam of the sea of speculation surged upon the shores of his eleven millions. In self-defence he was compelled to open offices. He dabbled in little things at first—"stalling for time," as he explained it to Holdsworthy, a friend he had made at the Alta-Pacific Club. Daylight himself was a member of the club, and Holdsworthy had proposed him. And it was well that Daylight played closely at first, for he was astounded by the multitudes of sharks—"ground-sharks," he called them—that flocked about him. He saw through their schemes readily enough, and even marveled that such numbers of them could find sufficient prey to keep them going. Their rascality and general dubiousness was so transparent that he could not understand how any one could be taken in by them.

So it was that he resolved to leave the little men, the Holdsworthys, alone; and, while he met them in good fellowship, he chummed with none, and formed no deep friendships. He did not dislike the little men, the men of the Alta-Pacific, for instance. He merely did not elect to choose them for partners in the big game in which he intended to play. What this big game was, even he did not know. He was waiting to find it. And in the meantime he played small hands, investing in several arid-lands reclamation projects and keeping his eyes open for the big chance when it should come along.

And then he met John Dowsett, the great John Dowsett. It was the first big magnate Daylight had met face to face, and he was pleased and charmed. There was such a kindly humanness about the man, such a genial democraticness, that Daylight found it hard to realize that this was the John Dowsett, president of a string of banks, insurance manipulator, reputed ally of the lieutenants of Standard Oil, and known ally of the Guggenhammers. Nor did his looks belie his reputation and his manner. Physically, he guaranteed all that Daylight knew of him. Despite his sixty years and snow-white hair, his hand-shake was firmly hearty, and he showed no signs of decrepitude, walking with a quick, snappy step, making all movements definitely and decisively.

It was not long afterward that Daylight came on to New York. A letter from John Dowsett had been the cause—a simple little typewritten letter of several lines. But Daylight had thrilled as he read it. The bald sentences seemed gorged with mystery. "Our Mr. Howison will call upon you at your hotel. He is to be trusted. We must not be seen together. You will understand after we have had our talk." Daylight conned the words over and over. That was it. The big game had arrived, and it looked as if he were being invited to sit in and take a hand. Surely, for no other reason would one man so peremptorily invite another man to make a journey across the continent.

They met—thanks to "our" Mr. Howison—up the Hudson, in a magnificent country home. Daylight, according to instructions, arrived in a private motor car which had been furnished him. Dowsett was already there, and another man whom Daylight recognised before the introduction was begun. It was Nathaniel Letton, and none other. Daylight had seen his face a score of times in the magazines and newspapers, and read about his standing in the financial world, and about his endowed University of

"I Must Say, Mr. Harnish, That You Whipped Us Roundly in That Affair."

Daratona. He, likewise, struck Daylight as a man of power, though he was puzzled in that he could find no likeness to Dowsett. Except in the matter of cleanness—a cleanness that seemed to go down to the deepest fibers of him—Nathaniel Letton was unlike the other in every particular. Thin to emaciation, he seemed a cold flame of a man. Not more than fifty, thatched with a sparse growth of iron-gray hair, he looked several times the age of Dowsett.

They drank—that is, Nathaniel Letton took mineral water; served by the smoothly operating machine of a lackey who inhabited the place, while Dowsett took Scotch and soda and Daylight a cocktail. Leon Guggenhammer arrived in the midst of the drink, and ordered Scotch. Daylight studied him curiously. This was one of the great Guggenhammer family; a younger one, but nevertheless one of the crowd with which he had locked grapples in the North. Nor did Leon Guggenhammer fail to mention cognizance of that old affair. He complimented Daylight on his prowess—"The echoes of Ophir came down to us, you know. And I must say, Mr. Daylight—er, Mr. Harnish, that you whipped us roundly in that affair."

Leon Guggenhammer was young and fat. Not a day more than thirty, his face, save for the adumbated puff sacks under the eyes, was as smooth and lineless as a boy's. The talk soon centered down to business. Dowsett broached the plan, aided by an occasional remark from the other two, while Daylight asked questions. Whatever the proposition was, he was going into it with his eyes open. And they filled his eyes with the practical vision of what he had in mind.

"They will never dream you are with us," Guggenhammer interjected, as the outlining of the matter drew to a close, his handsome Jewish eyes flashing enthusiastically. "They'll think you are raiding on your own in proper buccaneer style."

"Of course, you understand, Mr. Harnish, the absolute need for keeping our alliance in the dark," Nathaniel Letton warned, gravely.

Daylight nodded his head.

"And you also understand," Letton went on, "that the result can only be productive of good. The thing is legitimate and right, and the only ones who may be hurt are the stock gamblers themselves. It is not an attempt to smash the market. As you see yourself, you are to bull the market. The honest investor will be the gainer."

"Yes, that's the very thing," Dowsett said. "The commercial need for copper is continually increasing. Ward Valley Copper, and all that it stands for—practically one-quarter of the world's supply, as I have shown you—is a big thing, how big, even we can scarcely estimate. Our arrangements are made. We have plenty of capital ourselves, and yet we want more. Also, there is too much Ward Valley out to suit our present plans. Thus we kill both birds with one stone. Not only will you bull Ward Valley, but you will at the same time gather Ward Valley in. This will be of inestimable advantage to us, while you and all of us will profit by it as well. And as Mr. Letton has pointed out, the thing is legitimate and square. On the eighteenth the directors meet, and, instead of the customary dividend, a double dividend will be declared."

"There will be all sorts of rumors on the street," Dowsett warned Daylight, "but do not let them frighten you. These rumors may even originate with us. You can see how and why clearly. But rumors are to be no concern of yours. You are on the inside. All you have to do is buy, buy, buy, and keep on buying to the last stroke, when the directors declare the double dividend. Ward Valley will jump so that it won't be feasible to buy after that."

"And one other thing, Mr. Harnish," Guggenhammer said, "if you exceed your available cash, or the amount you care to invest in the venture, don't fail immediately to call on us. Remember, we are behind you."

"Yes, we are behind you," Dowsett repeated.

Nathaniel Letton nodded his head in affirmation.

CHAPTER VIII.

Back at his hotel, though nearly two in the morning, he found the reporters waiting to interview him. Next morning there were more. And thus, with blare of paper trumpet, was he received by New York. Once more, with beating of tom-toms and wild hullabalioo, his picturesque figure strode across the printed sheet. The King of the Klondike, the hero of the Arctic, the thirty-million-dollar millionaire of the North, had come to New York. What had he come for? To trim the New Yorkers as he had trimmed the Tonopah crowd in Nevada?

They were prepared for him to play, and, when heavy buying of Ward Valley began, it was quickly decided that he was the operator. Financial gossip buzzed and hummed. He was after the Guggenhammers once more. The story of Ophir was told over again and sensationalized until even Daylight scarcely recognized it. Still, it was all grist to his mill. The stock gamblers were clearly befooled. Each day he increased his buying, and so eager were the sellers that Ward Valley rose but slowly. A wildly exciting time was his during the week preceding Thursday the eighteenth. Not only was he gambling as he had never gambled before, but he was gambling at the biggest table in the world for stakes so large that even the case-hardened habitues of that table were compelled to sit up. In spite of the unlimited selling, his persistent buying compelled Ward Valley steadily to rise, and as Thursday approached, the situation became acute. Something had to smash. How much Ward Valley was this Klondike gambler going to buy? How much could he buy? What was the Ward Valley crowd doing all this time? Daylight appreciated interviews with them that appeared—interviews delightfully placid and non-committal. Leon Guggenhammer even hazarded the opinion that this Northland Croesus might possibly be making a mistake. But not that they cared, John Dowsett explained. "It is purely gambling from beginning to end," were Nathaniel Letton's words; "and we refuse to have anything to do with it or to take notice of it in any way."

During this time Daylight had several secret meetings with his partners—one with Leon Guggenhammer, one with John Dowsett, and two with Mr. Howison. Beyond congratulations, they really amounted to nothing; for, as he was informed, everything was going satisfactorily. But on Tuesday morning a rumor that was disconcerting came to Daylight's ears. It was also published in the Wall Street Journal, and it was to the effect, on apparently straight inside information, that on Thursday, when the directors of Ward Valley met, instead of the customary dividend being declared, an assessment would be levied. It was the first check Daylight had received. It came to him with a shock that if the thing were so he was a broken man. And it also came to him that all this colossal operating of his was being done on his own money. Dowsett, Guggenhammer and Letton were risking nothing. It was a panic, shortlived, it was true, but sharp enough while it lasted to make him remember Holdsworthy and the brick-yard, and to impel him to cancel all buying orders while he rushed to a telephone.

"Nothing in it—only a rumor," came Leon Guggenhammer's throaty voice in the receiver. "As you know," said Nathaniel Letton, "I am one of the directors, and I should certainly be aware of it were such action contemplated." And John Dowsett: "I warned you against just such rumors. There is not an iota of truth in it—certainly not. I tell you on my honor as a gentleman."

Heartily ashamed of himself for his temporary loss of nerve, Daylight returned to his task. The cessation of buying had turned the Stock Exchange into a bedlam, and down all the line of stocks the bears were smashing. Ward Valley, as the apex, received the brunt of the shock, and was already beginning to tumble. Daylight calmly doubled his buying orders. And all through Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday morning, he went on buying, while Ward Valley rose triumphantly higher. Still they sold, and still he bought, exceeding his power to buy many times over, when delivery was taken into account. What of that? On this day the double dividend would be declared, he assured himself. The pinch of delivery would be on the shorts. They would be making terms with him.

And then the thunderbolt struck. True to the rumor, Ward Valley levied the assessment. Daylight threw up his arms. He verified the report and quit. Not alone Ward Valley, but all securities were being hammered down by the triumphant bears. As for Ward Valley, Daylight did not even trouble to learn if it had fetched bottom or was still tumbling. Not stunned, not even bewildered, while Wall Street went mad, Daylight withdrew from the field to think it over. After a short conference with his brokers, he proceeded to his hotel, on the way picking up the evening papers and glancing at the head-lines. BURNING DAYLIGHT CLEANED OUT, he read; DAYLIGHT GETS HIS; ANOTHER WESTERNER FAILS TO FIND EASY MONEY.

He passed up to his rooms, ordered a Martini cocktail, took off his shoes, and sat down to think. After half an hour he roused himself to take the drink, and as he felt the liquor pass warmingly through his body, his features relaxed into a slow, deliberate, yet genuine grin. He was laughing at himself.

"Buncoed, by gosh!" he muttered.

Then the grin died away, and his face grew bleak and serious. Leaving out his interests in the several Western reclamation projects (which were still assessing heavily), he was a ruined man. But harder hit than this was his pride. He had been so easy. They had gold-bricked him, and he had nothing to show for it. The simplest farmer would have had documents, while he had nothing but a gentleman's agreement, and a verbal one at that. Gentleman's agreement! He snorted over it. John Dowsett's voice, just as he had heard it in the telephone receiver, sounded in his ears the words, "On my honor as a gentleman." They were sneak-thieves and swindlers, that was what they were, and they had given him the double-cross. The newspapers were right. He had come to New York to be trimmed, and Messrs. Dowsett, Letton and Guggenhammer had done it. He was a little fish, and they had played with him ten days—ample time in which to swallow him, along with his eleven millions. Of course, they had been unloading on him all the time, and now they were buying Ward Valley back for a song ere the market righted itself.

And Daylight sat and consumed cocktails and saw back in his life to Alaska, and lived over the grim years in which he had battled for his eleven millions. For awhile murder ate at his heart, and wild ideas and sketchy plans of killing his betrayers flashed through his mind. Daylight unlocked his grip and took out his automatic pistol—a big Colt's .44. He released the safety catch with his thumb, and, operating the sliding outer barrel, ran the contents of the clip through the mechanism. The eight cartridges slid out in a stream. He refilled the clip, threw a cartridge into the chamber, and with the trigger at full cock, thrust up the safety ratchet. He shoved the weapon into the side pocket of his coat, ordered another Martini, and resumed his seat.

At ten o'clock he arose and pored over the city directory. Then he put on his shoes, took a cab, and departed into the night. Twice he changed cabs, and finally fetched up at the night office of a detective agency. He superintended the thing himself, laid down money in advance in profuse quantities, selected the six men he needed, and gave them their instructions. Never, for so simple a task, had they been so well paid; for to each in addition to office charges, he gave a five-hundred-dollar bill, with the promise of another if he succeeded. Some time next day, he was convinced, if not sooner, his three silent partners would come together. To each one two of his detectives were to be attached. Time and place was all he wanted to learn.

"Stop at nothing, boys," were his final instructions. "I must have this information. Whatever you do, whatever happens, I'll see you through."

Returning to his hotel, he changed cabs as before, went up to his room, and with one more cocktail for a night-cap, went to bed and to sleep. In the morning he dressed and shaved, ordered breakfast and the newspapers sent up, and waited. But he did not drink. By nine o'clock his telephone began to ring and the reports to come in. Nathaniel Letton was taking the train at Tarrytown. John Dowsett was coming down by the subway. Leon Guggenhammer had not stirred out yet, though he was assuredly within. And in this fashion, with a map of the city spread out before him, Daylight followed the movements of his three men as they drew together. Nathaniel Letton was at his offices in the Mutual-Solander Building. Next arrived Guggenhammer. Dowsett was still on his own offices. But at eleven came the word that he also had arrived, and several minutes later Daylight was in a hired motor-car and speeding for the Mutual-Solander Building.

Saved Child From Death.

"After our child had suffered from severe bronchial trouble for a year," wrote G. T. Richardson, of Richardson's Mills, Ala., we feared it had consumption. It had a bad cough all the time. We tried many remedies without avail, and doctor's medicine seemed as useless. Finally we tried Dr. King's New Discovery, and are pleased to say that one bottle effected a complete cure, and our child is again strong and healthy." For coughs, colds, hoarseness croup lagrippe, asthma and sore lungs, its the most infallible remedy that's made. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all dealers.

While sweet corn will grow on almost all good farm land, yet it will yield larger ears on a deep sandy or river bottom loam.

Pig losses are invariably found to be much smaller where they are kept on pasture than under any other conditions.

Kentucky News.

Mr. J. W. Arrington, of this city is now growing popcorn that is already popped on the ear, doing away with the necessity of corn poppers.—Trenton Progress.

Mr. Wm. Preston has a pumpkin vine that is forty feet long, and the last three feet of it is perfectly flat and four inches wide and on the last three feet are twenty-four pumpkins. Mr. John Britton has also a freak sweet potato vine, a sprout from it being twenty-four yards long.—Harrodsburg Herald.

Mrs. Bailey Russell, of West Seventh street, reports the second crop of raspberries from the same bushes this season. The first crop was a fine one. During the long continued warm weather much new wood was grown by the bushes and the new branches put forth blooms which produced the second crop of berries, which were fine specimens and of excellent flavor.—Hopkinsville Kentuckian.

A few days ago Mr. O. G. Atherton, who resides six miles east of Elizabethtown, was here and related a very remarkable story about a pumpkin vine on his place. This vine has no less than eleven pumpkins growing on it and their average weight is from forty to fifty pounds. One of the pumpkins is near a blood red.—Elizabethtown News.

C. C. Eskridge, of Falls of Rough, when coming to court one day last week brought a jar of fine honey with him and left it at this office for a few hours. The jar of honey weighed eleven and one-half pounds and was put in the jar by the bees. A hole was cut in the top of the hive and the glass jar placed over the hole and the little fellows very accurately filled the can.—Hardinsburg Leader.

Mr. J. M. Wheatley, of near Sardis, brought us in a sample of the variety of beans he raised this year from seed he secured while on a visit to Alabama last year. The dry pod is twenty-seven inches in length and contains twenty-four beans, thus making them about one inch apart. It is called the yard bean probably on account of its wonderful growth, some being thirty-six inches in length.—Mt. Olivet Advance.

Reports from different sections of the county indicate that we may have a Thanksgiving turkey if we will only go after it with a little cash. The Herald is informed that turkey meat is plentiful, and, unfortunate for the farmer, low priced. We have seen a number of nice droves of these birds in the fields surrounding Hodgenville, and they were as pretty as pictures.—Hodgenville Herald.

I. B. Russell, of Maysville, was in Robertson county one day last week and purchased 120,000 pounds of broom corn at fancy prices. There is a considerable amount of broom corn raised in this county along Licking River in the northern portion of the county. Broom corn has been selling at extra good prices for the past two years, and the raising of it by farmers in this county should be a very profitable business.—Carlisle Advocate.

That a woman can farm successfully was shown this week when Miss Mary White, residing near Zion, sold over $700 worth of hogs. These hogs were bought by Preston Mann and the sale by Miss White was only part of one of the biggest deals in hogs for one day of which is local record. Miss White delivered a total of 11,445 pounds of hogs, the hogs averaging about 160 pounds and bringing $6.20 a hundred.—Henderson Journal.

Judge J. W. Cowgill claims to be the original sorghum maker of Fulton county. In 1857 his father ordered some seed and planted three or four acres to be used as feed for stock in the winter. In the fall of the year his son J. W., stripped some of it and crushed the stalks in a cider mill and boiled the juice in an iron kettle. At the county fair held in Hickman that year, he got a premium of $1 for a quart bottle, although no premium was offered, for the reason that none had been made in this county before.—Hickman Courier.

Resolutions of Respect.

Bellevieu Lodge No. 544, F. & A. M., McVille, Ky.

Death has again visited our lodge and taken from us our devoted brother, James R. Akins, who died on the 28th of September, 1911, aged 78 years. He was a zealous mason, devoted to its principles and the teachings of the order. He had filled all the principal stations in this lodge with dignity and honor. In the death of our beloved brother this lodge has met with a sad loss, the community an honored and respected citizen. We extend to his daughter and two sons our sympathy and to his two sons who are members of this lodge, our love and esteem, and will bid them to live such a life that will enable them to meet him in that celestial lodge above, where grief and sorrow is not known and where parting never comes.

Resolved, That a memorial page be placed upon the minute book a copy sent to his relatives and a copy sent to the Boone County Recorder for publication.

Night Schools in Rowan County.

Rowan county, once noted for feuds, has been in recent years becomingly civil and well behaved. Just at present there is a movement in progress there which promises to put Rowan county abreast of the most progressive counties in the State. A dispatch tells of the organization of night schools in the various districts for the benefit of persons 18 years of age and upward.

The object of this movement is to wipe out illiteracy in the county, and to that end it is stated that it "is being heartily supported by business and professional men, who are lending every assistance possible in relieving the county teachers, who have to teach both the day and the night schools." More than 1,000 pupils have been enrolled, their ages ranging from 18 to 50 years, and in cases where it is not possible for a "pupil" to get to school an instructor is to be sent to his home.

Rowan county has entered upon a most important undertaking. The plan is admirable, and if persisted in will benefit not only Rowan county, but other counties, which, seeing a good example set, may resolve to follow it. Already there is talk of a similar movement in other counties in Eastern Kentucky, and if Rowan keeps up the good work there is no doubt that its influence will spread. There are splendid possibilities in these night schools and they can be made a powerful agency for educational advancement. It is not so easy a matter to carry them on in the rural districts, perhaps, as in the centers of population, but when a small county like Rowan, a mountin region at that, can securre an enrollment of 1,000 in night-school work it is a hopeful indication of that general awakening to the importance of education which has been needed so long in Kentucky.

The people of Rowan are to be commended and congratulated on having set in motion so potential a force for future good. The night schools of Rowan constitute one of the most auspicious developments of the campaign for education.—Courier Journal.

Seems heavier when he has a weak back and kidney trouble. Fred Duhren, Mail Carrier at Atchinson, Kan., says: "I have been bothered with kidney and bladder trouble and had a severe pain across my back. Some time ago, I started taking Foley kidney Pills and since taking them I have gotten entirely rid of all my kidney trouble and am as sound now as ever." For sale at Jones' drug store, Walton.

Come to Covington as Often As You Like

We'll Pay Your Railroad Fare in Cash or

We'll Pay You 3c A Mile If You Drive In.

OUR PROPOSTION:

We will refund Railroad fares, Trolly Car fares and Steam Boat fares, or will allow three cents per mile for persons driving into Covington and purchasing goods from any or all of the stores of the members of the Retail Merchants Association of the Industrial Club of Covington, on a basis of one mile for each dollar's worth of goods purchased.

To illustrate:—If you travel, say ten miles, you would be required to purchase at least $20.00 worth of goods in order to have your entire Railroad fare refunded, you having traveled ten miles each way, making a total of twenty miles.

If your total purchase amounts to a less number of dollars than the number of miles you travel, we will refund as many miles of your fare as the number of dollars you spend with members of our Association.

On the other hand, if you spend a greater number of dollars than miles you travel, in addition to your entire fare or mileage, we will refund one per cent on the purchase you make in excess of the amount necessary to secure the refund of your fare.

By this plan you not only have your Railroad fare or mileage paid, but you can take advantage of the many Special Sales that the members of our Association continually offer.

Covington merchandise has a State-wide reputation for excellence and up to-dateness—Covington values are always a bit better than most people expect—Covington prices are always a shade lower. And there is a reason for these better values and lower prices. Come to Covington and see.

We are members of the Retail Merchants Association of Covington, and will rebate fares on the plan as outlined above.

"Chairman R. H. Vansant, of the Democratic Campaign Committee gives out the following statement:

"The contest for the Governorship and other State offices is drawing to a close. On Tuesday, November 7th, the people will render their verdict at the polls. The Campaign Committee has not reated from its labors since the beginning of this battle for the redemption of Kentucky from Republican mis-rule. Its members have worked unselfishly for the furtherance of party success. We have made a clean, fair fight in the open; held men to their public records, and have made no attack upon private character. The Campaign Committee is confident that the Democrats will be elected to every office of the State government from Governor down, and that the Legislature will be Democratic; thus assuring the election of Ollie James to the United States Senate.

"The members of the Campaign Committee (and I speak also for every candidate on the ticket) feel indebted to the Democratic press of Kentucky for their hearty and generous assistance. They have rendered invaluable aid, and without their assistance our best efforts would have failed of effect.

"The daily reports from the various County and Precinct Chairman are most gratifying. They bring assurance from every District of an increase in the Democratic vote.

"While I am supremely confident that we will secure a decisive majority, I want to warn my fellow-Democrats against over-confidence. It will take the united support of every Democrat to make the election sure. We are facing a wily, revengeful and desperate enemy. They realize that defeat in Kentucky this year will be fatal to the future supremacy of their party in this State, and that it will have a great influence on the Presidental election next year. They will fight until the last ballot is cast, and we must meet them at the polls in solid array, with not a man missing from the ranks."

Rufus H. Vansant, Chairman of the Democratic State Campaign Committee, accepts the challenge of John W. Langley, Chairman of the Republican State Campaign Committee, to throw the light of publicity on all books and records of contributions and expenditures before the campaign. In this letter of acceptance Chairman Vansant says that the Democratic committee has not received any contribution from either the whisky or tobacco trust to help finance the campaign in behalf of Senator James B. McCreary and the other Democratic candidates.

He says that the service of expert accountants suggested by Mr. Langley will be unnecessary, and invites Mr. Langley himself to come to the Democratic headquarters and look over the books.

His statement in full is as follows:

"Mr. John W. Langley, chairman of the Republican Campaign Committee, has addressed a card to the people of Kentucky in which he challenges the Chairman of the Democratic State Campaign Committee to submit all books, papers and records to two expert disinterested public accountants, who shall examine all receipts and expenditures of the campaign fund, said accountants to certify the names of each contributor and the amount secured by him, and, further, the chairman of each Campaign Committee, Republican and Democratic, to swear to the correctness of the records furnished them.

"I accept Mr. Langley's challenge and invitation. It will not be necessary for him or me to select an expert accountant to perform the service suggested. I hereby invite him to personally come to the Democratic headquarters, and pledge myself that all books, records and papers showing contributions made to the Campaign fund and disbursements of the same, shall be placed at his disposal. He can take as much time for the investigation as he can spare from his exacting duties and when he completes the work he can report to the public the result of his investigation, and I will not require him to swear to its correctness.

"So far as contributions made to the Republican campaign fund are concerned, I have no interest in them. I do not care to select any expert accountant to go over Mr. Langley's books, nor do I wish to examine them myself, nor will I make any personal or other inquiry into the financial conduct of his campaign. I do not care if his campaign fund is $100,000 or five times that amount. No sums that he can raise from contributions of Federal officeholders, or through the importunities of his friend McCulloch, President of the Kentucky Distillers' Association, can defeat Governor McCreary and the Democratic ticket, for it is going to be elected by the votes of unpurchaseable citizens, and this does not include the 70,000 votes which his candidate, Judge O'Rear, says are for sale in old Kentucky.

"I want to say for the further enlightment of Mr. Langley that this commitee nor no member of the Campaign Committee, nor any candidate for office, nor any other person, for himself, or in our behalf, has accepted, and none will accept one dollar from the Whiskey Trust, the Tobacco Trust, or any other corporation or interest.

"I will add further, that we have not spent a dollar for the purchase of any newspaper, either Republican or Democratic, to espouse our cause.

"I want to say to the people of Kentucky that I have endeavored to conduct a clean, hon[illegible] and that [illegible] succeed, and the [illegible] have countenanced no personal abuse, and have appealed only to the intelligence and conscience of the voters. I have no apologies to offer for my course. I have done my duty to the people and the party, and the white light of investigation has no terrors for me.

R. H. VANSANT,
Chairman Democratic Campaign Committee.

On the ballots that will be used next Tuesday the Democratic ticket under the rooster comes first. The second place on the ballot is the Republicans, with a log cabin as an emblem. Representative Arthur B. Rouse, of the Sixth Congressional District, has been in Louisville the week and spent considerable time at Democratic state headquarters. Mr. Rouse is very enthusiastic over Democratic prospects in Kenton and Campbell counties, and, in fact, throughout the counties of the Sixth District. He is of the opinion that the Democrats are going to increase their majority up there. Mr. Rouse, by the way, is widely known and popular in every section of the state. He could make a political race in nearly any congressional district of the state and could find nearly as many supporters as he can in his home district, where it is said that the Democrats are going to [illegible] for a [illegible]

The weather, last week, was decidedly of a fallish cast.

By this time next week it will be known who is who politically in Kentucky.

Both the Democrats and the Republicans are shelling the woods this week.

With the base ball season closed and the election over foot ball will have a clear track as regards public interest for the next few weeks.

Don't fail to come to Burlington next Monday and hear the speech of Hon. Edward J. McDermott, Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor.

Kasper Lehman, the shoemaker, of Elsmere, who has his shop on Lexington pike near toll gate at Erlanger, has an advertisement in this issue. Look for it and read it.

Remember that E. J. McDermott Democratic candidate for Lieutenant Governor, will speak in Burlington next Monday. Ladies are invited to come and hear the speech.

Earl Smith was the first local fan to get correct dope on the world's series. He had called the turn every time, and still there are those who say he was only guessing.

Joe Weaver, of Union neighborhood, as hale, hearty and good humored as ever was a caller at this office one day last week. Joe is a gentleman from the ground up.

Ernest Horton, son of David Horton, and Miss Irbie Snyder, daughter of Edward Snyder, of Florence, were married yesterday at 2 p. m. at Big Bone parsonage, Rev. William McMillan officiating.

If you are a Democrat it ought to be a pleasure for you to go to the polls and vote for such candidates as compose the Democratic ticket to be voted for on Tuesday of next week. The State never had a better ticket.

Covington is up-to-date in business houses and fine quality of goods, and as rents are cheaper than across the river better bargains are offered.

The Stay-at-Homes Will Decide It.

In the two State elections in Kentucky the stay-at-home votes have decided the election. When Beckham defeated Belknap by 27,000 majority it was largely because the Republicans stayed at home. Had Belknap received the same vote that Yerkes did four years before he would have defeated Beckham, as Beckham received a smaller vote against Belknap than he did against Yerkes. To state it another way it was the stay-at-home Republicans which defeated Belknap for Governor. In the race four years ago the reverse was true. It was the stay-at-home Democrats who defeated Judge Hager. Had Hager received the same vote that Bryan did the year following he would have defeated Willson and had he received the same vote that Beckham did eight years before he would have been chosen Governor. The election next month is likely to turn upon the same thing—the stay-at-home voters. On a strict party vote Kentucky is Democratic by about 15,000 majority but if 15,000 or 20,000 Democrats stay away from the polls it will elect the Republican ticket. The election will therefore depend as much upon those who stay at home as those who vote. The Democratic ticket will be elected by a handsome majority if all the Democrats do their duty by turning out on election day and voting, because the State is normally Democratic, but an average of five stay-at-home Democrats to a precinct would change the result. It is up to the Democrats not only to vote but to see that every Democrat in every precinct is at the polls and deposits his ballot with a stamp under the rooster.—Elizabethtown News.

GRANT COUNTY ITEMS

Judge J. W. Cammack made an order Wednesday morning for a special term of the Grant Circuit Court to be held the first week in January to try the murder case of John and Lindsay Webster, who were indicted this term on the charge of murdering Sam Collins at Elliston early in August. The case was called last Tuesday afternoon and Judge Cammack was anxious to try the case at this term and get it off the docket, but Messrs. Gray and Menefee, attorneys for the defendants, were not anxious to go into trial at once, and after a good deal of argument the trial was postponed. It is the opinion of those versed in law that it will be pretty hard to get a jury in Grant county to try this case, and a special venire from adjoining counties will be necessary. The court room was crowded last Tuesday afternoon when the case was called for trial.

The revival meeting which is being conducted at the Christian church by Rev. W. J. Clarke and the local pastor, Rev. Noel, has created intense interest, and the audience grew so large by Sunday night that in order to accommodate it, the meeting was adjourned from the Christian church to the court house, where the night meetings are being held. Even this building is none too large for the crowds attending.

J. Gruelle, a prosperous Dry Ridge farmer, has sold his farm of 100 acres on the Broad Ridge road, about two miles east of Dry Ridge, to J. M. Baker, who has been located in Ohio for the past several years. The consideration was $10,000 cash in hand. Possession will be given March 1st, 1912. Mr. Gruelle's farm is one of the best improved in the neighborhood in which he lives and contains buildings worth more than half of the purchase price.

Rockefeller Gifts.

New York, October 27.—Conditional appropriations aggregating $635,000 were granted to six colleges and universities by the Board of Trustees of the John D. Rockefeller fund for Education—the General Education Board—this afternoon.

Applications from twenty-four institutions were presented. From this list the board selected six among which is distributed conditionally the available funds as follows:

To Buckness University, Lewisburg, Penn., $35,000 toward $160,000; to Earlham College, Richmond Indiana, $75,000 toward $400,000; to Furman University, Greenville, S. C., $25,000 toward $100,000; to Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa $100,000 toward $500,000; to Smith College, Northampton, Mass. $200,000 toward $1,000,000; to Southern Methodist University, Dallas Texas $200,000 toward $1,000,000.

During the meeting attention was called to the fact that since Mr. Rockefeller made his first contribution to the board for the promotion of higher education in 1902 contributions have been made to 91 institutions of an aggregate amount of $7,925,000 toward a total of $35,909,512.

Both the Democrats and the Republicans have made a close canvass of the State, and from the headquarters of each party in Louisville are being sent out reports claiming a decisive victory. Of course one party or the other is destined to disappointment, but to make its predictions hold good each party is relying on every voter going to the polls and casting his ballot, as without a united support on the part of its advocates neither party can expect success. The stay-at-home vote is being feared by each party, and the ticket that gets the advantage in that respect is apt to be successful. Go to the polls on the seventh day of this month and vote. On a full vote Kentucky is Democratic beyond a doubt.

ARE THEY AFRAID?

Observe the plumb bob on rear of the Tubular frame. It makes leveling quick, easy, accurate—enables you to keep the Tubular level and get the best work out of it.

There are, in this neighborhood agents for several "bucket bowl" cream separators. "Bucket bowl" separators are the kind with wide mouth bowls, full of parts, set on top of their spindles. These agents say, to the farmers intending to buy a separator. "Look out for the Tubular," or "Don't try the Tubular," or "Beware of the Tubular." To hear them talk you would guess right away that is the best cream separator made, and that these "bucket bowl" fellows are afraid of it. And they are afraid of it. The Tubular surpasses every other separator in every particular, and you should take mighty good care you do see a Tubular before you buy a separator. We will be pleased to show you the latest Tubular and give you an illustrated catalog.

CARE OF DAIRY COWS

Much Depends on Autumn and Winter Management.

The autumn months are a critical time in the life of dairy cattle, yet few dairy farmers appear to realize the necessity of giving their cows any special care and attention at this time of the year. My own experience in feeding and caring for dairy cattle has convinced me that many of the complaints regarding the cattle coming thru the winter in a thin, emaciated flesh condition is due largely to their being kept out too long in the pasture or fields and then changing them into winter quarters and putting them on a ration of hay, dry forage and fodders.

The cow that is allowed to run outside until cold weather comes and compels her owner to put her in the stable for winter cannot regain her lost condition and flesh and become accustomed to her change and feed and surroundings in any short time. Then again, few dairymen practice a liberal system of feeding during the winter, more especially when the cows are dry, and for that reason they cannot recover their condition and go thru the calving period and come out in good condition to do efficient dairy work the coming season.

The average dairy farmer takes it as a matter of course that cows generally shrink during the fall and fall away in their flesh and therefore he makes no plans to remove the cause of the shrinkage and falling away in condition. Every thinking dairy farmer knows that there are certain essentials that cannot be neglected at any season of the year if the cows are kept up in a condition to give milk, and that if any or all of these essentials are neglected there is sure to be a falling away in milk yields. Cows that are expected to return a profit must be given plenty of feed and of the kinds suited to their needs. Dry and comfortable sleeping places are another essential of healthy and contented cows. The practice of allowing dairy cows to run over the whole of the farm and be herded by dogs and children and compelled to eat frosty clover and forage cannot be made to return a profit, even though they may consume waste forage and fodders, when this practice is followed.

To supply good food for the dairy it is necessary that we exercise forethought and plan for the fall season which is sure to come every year. Grass does not grow rapidly after the cold weather comes and what does grow contains bnt little nourishment. The dairy farmer who plans a system of supplemental forage crops to tide him over this period is wise indeed, but wiser still is the farmer who grows enough ensilage so that he can open a silo as soon as pastures begin to fail in the fall. The next best feed after ensilage is oats and peas sowed about the middle of July and allowed to stand as late as possible and cut and hauled to the stable and fed. To make the best use of oats and peas they should be fed when in milk stage of the oats development and this will require that the crop be sowed at various times so that one plot will be at the right state of growth at the time it is needed for feeding purposes. I generally sow one bushel of peas and two bushels of oats mixed to the acre. With the exception of alfalfa there is no kind of forage superior to peas and oats to keep up milk yields and flesh condition.

Sweet corn is an excellent food for early fall feeding. This may be sowed thicker than field corn and will make a good growth of fodder and furnish many ears which will add to its feeding value. Sweet corn makes a very palatable feed and the cows will eat large quantities of it. In many cases enough to make up for the deficiency of pasture grasses.

Another point that many overlook is making the cows comfortable during the fall months. I believe that as soon as the cold nights come they should be put in the stable every night, but I am in favor of allowing them to be out every day when the weather is favorable, for the extreme cold weather which is sure to come later compels us to keep them confined in the stable much longer than we realize. The man who allows his cows to go dry in the fall is cultivating a habit in them that will be hard to overcome, for once a heifer or cow is allowed to go dry after being milked a few months it is very hard to make her continue her period for a longer time after she drops her next calf. Her training as well as her breeding influence her future ability as a dairy cow.—L. J. Meredith in Indiana Farmer.

Is the World Growing Better?

Many things go to prove that it is. The way thousands are trying to help others is proof. Among them is Mrs. W. W. Gould, of Pittsfield, N. H. Finding good health by taking Electric Bitters, she now advises other sufferers, everywhere, to take them. "For years I suffered with stomach and kidney trouble," she writes. "Every medicine I used failed till I took Electric Bitters. But this great remedy helped me wonderfully." They'll help any woman. They're the best tonic and finest liver and kidney remedy that's made. Try them. You'll see. 50c at all dealers.

Milk for Babies.

Some years ago a celebrated chemist, after examining the milk of different cows, made the following report as to which was the best milk to raise babies on: The Jersey had too much cheese, and the milk from the Devons was the best, as it had more sugar in it and nearer the milk of the baby's mother, says the American Cultivator. Just then a young mother died leaving a baby twelve days old, and it so happened that the father read this report, so he rented a fresh Devon milk cow and fed the babe on the milk of that cow for more than two years. She grew up to be a fine, large healthy young lady, and at 15 years of age was two inches taller than her father, and in her class at school with girls much older than she was.

The Boone County Teachers' Association of Division No. 2, met at Big Bone church school house, Saturday afternoon, November 4th at two o'clock.

After devotional exercises conducted by Supt. Riley, Miss Minnette Stephens read an excellent paper on "The School as a Social Center," in which she insists that a child be educated to live in his community because statistics show that more than four-fifths of the children in this country spend their lives in the community in which they attend school.

An interesting paper on "How Make a Model Country School," Miss Josie Stephens showed the necessity of school training and said that of all the very necessary things that tend to make a school model, the teacher is by far the greatest factor.

Mrs. Meivin then gave a good talk upon School Questions in General, especially touching upon the deficiency of the school system in Kentucky and the great responsibility of a teacher in the public schools. She was followed by Mr. Stephens on the subject of What to do With Incorrigibles. Mr. Stephens declared that there are very few really bad children and that kindness and persuasion do a great deal more good than punishment.

The exercises closed with an explanatory address by our able Superintendent upon School Organization and Cooperation of Teachers.

Nearly all of the teachers of the division were present and pronounced the meeting a very helpful and enjoyable one.

Secretary.

Hay Unusually Scarce.

There have been many seasons when both timothy and clover hay have been scarce in small districts of country and even in sections covering whole states or several states, but this year the shortage of both crops is universal thruout the entire country. There are but few places where either clover or timothy was a full crop, and not many where there was a good half crop harvested. Large areas of country extending from ocean to ocean, and from the great lakes to the gulf were scarcely worth cutting.

The result is a great scarcity of hay and a consequent high price. To add to this and make matters still worse, summer was so dry that such crops as millet, sorghum, peas, etc., where sowed have generally failed to do much good. It is a peculiar situation and while some are well provided for, many must of a necessity resort to substitutes for winter provider or else dispose of much of their stock.

Is your husband cross? An irritable, fault finding disposition is often due to a disordered stomach. A man with good digestion is nearly always good natured. A great many have been permanently cured of stomach trouble by taking Chamberlain's Tablets. For sale by all dealers.

...of the year when ...institute meetings are be... or next winter, a ...concerning the work ...be helpful.

Although farmers' institutes are not a "new thing under the sun," there are still thousands of farmers who have had no direct contact with the work and consequently know very little of its merits. We still, occasionally, meet or hear of a man who characterizes the institute work as "paper farming," and believes it to be a useless expense. Such objectors are in the minority, so far as both numbers and influence are concerned, and might, therefore, be ignored; but, as the definite aim of the institute work is to improve every farm and every farm home, these doubting Thomases should receive some consideration. It is not expected that one or several newspaper articles will convert these people. They must, themselves "sample the goods." When Nathaniel said "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?" Philip wisely answered, "Come and see." So we say to these skeptical people, come and see. Attend two ot three live farmers' institutes and get in touch with your neighbors, who are trying to improve their farms, their live stock and their homes, and also striving to better the neighborhood conditions, financially, socially, intellectualy and morally. Visit the farms and homes of active institute workers, and note the improvement effected by means of better seed, better blood, better methods, better conveniences in the home and sanitary conditions in and around the farm buildings. Actual contact in the farmers' institute meetings, with these bright, earnest progressive men and women of the farm, who are seeking to improve home and neighborhood, will prove inspiring and helpful to every one. Not only will the very best practical farmers feel the uplift of such association but the indifferent or poor farmer and the lonely or discouraged farmer's wife will.—Indiana Farmer.

Advice to Tobacco Growers.

Silas Shelburne gives the following timely advice to burley tobacco growers:

The 1910 Burley crop grown in the Blue Grass district was one of the most inferior crops grown for many years and it seems that most of the farmers realized it when they began to strip, as it was badly classed. The bulk of it seemed to have been just pulled off the stalk and tied up. I assert that if the crop had been properly handled the average would have been worth fully one dollar a hundred more.

We are now just beginning another stripping season. Farmers have worked hard to grow the crop and should not make the mistake again of rushing the stripping. It would pay to take more pains in the handling and grading. They should be sure that the stems are well dried before they begin stripping, as the buyers will not pay much for tobacco with swollen stems. It should be tied in medium sized neat bundles.

We are expecting fair prices for the bright crops, and for all the bright grades, while all the heavy dark crops and red grades will sell low, so one can readily see the importance of separating the colors. They should put bright with bright, red with red green with green, and dark with dark. A great many of them seem to pull off so many leaves at the bottom of the plant. The dark rough stuff should be thrown out of the fines, so as to make as bright as possible, and all the red leaves should be thrown out of the trash and lug grades to give them more color, and less body. This bright leaf might be classed with bright lugs, but the heavy red leaves should be put with red grades leaving bright leaf with more color and with some body suitable for wrappers. Good smooth red leaf not too coarse and heavy, should also be graded for wrappers. The different curings in this crop will be very different in color and quality and should not be mixed in the grading.

Our market is now open and ready for the sale of the old tobacco in hogsheads. Some sales were made last week and were very satisfactory, the prices ranging from five to twelve and a half cents on common to medium crops. The market for new tobacco will probably open about the second week next month.—Blue Grass Clipper.

Hog Cholera.

When an outbreak of hog cholera occurs on a farm, the herd should be quarantined and all possible precautions taken against the spread of the infection in the neighborhood. The separation of the herd into small bunches of about a dozen animals is sometimes practiced. This is not advisable, as the work of caring for the animals is greatly increased and the infection scattered over a wide area, proportionately increasing the opportunity for infecting neighboring farms.

Experts are giving much study to the problem a solution of which would be of inestimable value to the wireless telegraph.

ARE THEY AFRAID?

There are, in this neighborhood agents for several "bucket bowl" cream separators. "Bucket bowl" separators are the kind with wide mouth bowls, full of parts, set on top of their spindles. These agents say, to the farmers intending to buy a separator. "Look out for the Tubular," or "Don't try the Tubular," or "Beware of the Tubular." To hear them talk you would guess right away that is the best cream separator made, and that these "bucket bowl" fellows are afraid of it. And they are afraid of it. The Tubular surpasses every other separator in every particular, and you should take mighty good care you do see a Tubular before you buy a separator. We will be pleased to show you the latest Tubular and give you an illustrated catalog.

Observe the plumb bob on rear of the Tubular frame. It makes leveling quick, easy, accurate—enables you to keep the Tubular level and get the best work out of it.

A Destructive Period.

The last two or three decades seems to have introduced an era of the appearance in nature of a swarm of new destructive agencies. In earlier days we used to hear of the Hessian fly damaging wheat to some extent, and now and then there was an army worm invasion, but neither of them was continuous or very serious. Orchards blossomed and bore fruit without serious molestation, and nothing ever interfered with the regularity of the potato or any of the other farm crops. Of course there were the ancient troubles of too little rain or too much, and there were always pestiferous weeds to be contended with, but the tiller of the soil had far fewer enemies that he has now to fight against. Among orchards and vines deciduous fruit nor grapes can be grown without extensive and constant spraying, and every potato hill has to be sprinkled. Nor is it fruit trees alone that have been attacked. New species of caterpillars are ravaging great stretches of forest, while the states and the United States spend millions in a vain effort to check them.

An unknown species of blight which nothing reaches is sweeping over the land, leaving not a chestnut tree alive in its path, and millions of feet of valuable lumber, which used to remain sound until it was wanted, are being ruined by borers, who simply live to kill in a brief space of time, the magnificent growth of generations.

New kinds of weeds, more persistent, pervasive and impossible to root out than the old ones, infest every sort of crop while the pastures are invaded by prolific and indestructible shrubs like hacmetac, which in spite of every possible resistance, take sole possession of the land and hold it against all comers.

The boll weevil, unknown to cotton growing "before the war," has already done almost incomputable injury and cannot be got under control. Turkey raising in the East has practically ceased where every farm had its flocks, and numerous and novel parasites and physical ills attack poultry and pigs, cattle and sheep. It is a steady fight, requiring almost a medical education, to keep vegetable and animal life going on the farm, and what makes it difficult and almost disheartening is the fact that the noxious harmful living things are infinitely more hardy and prolific than the useful. To bring the latter to maturity requires endless patience and perseverance, whereas the harmful not only thrive and flourish and multiply without aid till they drive the useful out but it is well-nigh impossible to exterminate them.

If we look at the moral and social aspects of the universe it will be found that a striking analogy exists between conditions there and those in the physical universe to which we have referred. In both there has been a process of slow development, with occasional cataclasmic outbreaks of resistless forces, and with the same continuing contest between influences tending to conserve and build up and those which disintegrate and destroy. And whether it be by pure coincidence or not there appears to have been at the same time a marked increase in the destructive forces in both spheres. Those in the realm of nature, many of them we have pointed out. If we look into the moral and social domain, while it may not be that we shall find as numerous new forms of evil as have of late appeared in nature—for humanity, in its long existence on earth, has sounded the entire gamut of evil propensities and possibilities—the old ones do seem to have taken on new vigor and to be manifesting themselves with increased activity in quarters which had remained comparatively exempt from their influence. In England, for example, poverty, the problem of the unemployed, the dead weight on the community of a growing class, helpless and hopeless by heredity, is pressing and perplexing as never before, and insanity is rapidly on the increase. In France, according to their own authorities, there has been going on a startling and most injurious change from the national habit of light wine drinking to a debasing and widely prevalent form of alcoholism, and socialistic theories of government utterly destructive in their tendencies are steadily gaining ground, as, indeed they are in Germany. If we turn to our own country we find some forms of destructive evil more rampant and harmful than ever before in our history. There is wide-spread rascality and graft in municipal affairs, and perhaps never was there so light an estimate widely held of the binding nature and sacredness of the marriage tie, and never before have parents and home life had so little influence as now in the formation of the character of children or been so little regarded by them.

Finding these correspondences in the two realms we also find in both influences at work which we can assist and strengthen to counteract the destructive tendencies observed. Men of science, backed by Government and by private munificence, are by study, investigation and experiment, doing their utmost to learn all about the harmful pests that nature is so prolific of and seems to cherish and provide for so carefully, and to, if not exterminate, at least get them under control. In some directions they have already been successful and we may hope that they will be universally so. On the social and moral side also there are numerous experts and philanthropists at work to check and get control of social and moral evils, and with all the manifest grounds for discouragement, there are even stronger grounds for hopefulness. One of these is that whereas in nature we must leave the work almost wholly to experts, here can every one of us do effective service for betterment, first by improving ourselves and then by recognizing every man as a brother and doing what we can to help them.

Joseph Pulitzer.

Joseph Pulitzer, millionaire publisher of the New York World and St. Louis Post-Dispatch, died on his yacht, at Charleston, South Carolina, of heart disease, aged 64 years. His wife and several children survive him.

Mr. Pulitzer was born in Budapest, Hungary, and when 17 years old determined to come to America and seek his fortune. He was poor and friendless—so poor, in fact, that he is said to have been without a cent when the ship that carried him to this country entered Boston Harbor.

Mr. Pulitzer knew that immigrants were required to possess a certain amount of money before they could enter this country. He determined, therefore to evade the immigration laws, if possible, and, when the ship neared Boston, the young man dived overboard and swam ashore.

His life history shows the great opportunities afforded in this country for the boy who is energetic and industrious and is determined to succeed:

1864—Landed, penniless in Boston.

1864—Enlisted in First New York Cavalry.

1865—Deck hand on St. Louis ferry boat.

1866—Manual laborer on Mississippi levee.

1867—Hostler in military barracks.

1868—Waiter in restaurant.

1868-9—Grave digger during cholera epidemic.

1870—Newspaper reporter.

1870—Representative in Missouri Legislature.

1870-8—Studied law, served as St. Louis police commissioner and acquired interest in Westliche Post

1878—Bought St. Louis Post and Dispatch.

1883—Became proprietor of New York World.

He had been blind for 24 years.

"Knitting Needle" Boys.

The average farmer is breeding too many boys with legs like a knitting needle and a chest expansion of a rubber door mat. Steam heat, hot baths and a diet of grape fruit, fruit and peanut butter are making the present generation look about as robust as a flamingo with weak lungs. The decline started with that cruel edict of fashion which abolished the feather bed and substituted the horse hair mattress and the home-tied comfortable. The boy who was made to crawl into the icy embrace of a feather bed with a full set of chilblains and was called out at 4 a. . to pail sixteen frost-bitten cows never had to have his chest massaged with clingstone turpentine until you couldn't tell him from a fresh cut round steak. After a boy had passed a New England winter in a feather bed which fitted his form like a wide hipped gent in a tin tub, he became as hardy as the Spanish mule, which can kick the hip pockets off of a greaser at the mellow age of 90 years. A life of luxurious ease is making the boy of today about as useful as belt straps on a pair of dress pants.—Ex.

For the Country All the Time.

Congressman Arthur B. Rouse, who is really representing the Sixth District better than it has been represented for years and who is paying special attention to the country counties in this campaign, was in Trimble last week and brought with him Hon. James Garnett, Democratic candidate for Attorney General. They spoke at Trout, Barebone and Palmyra. It is not often that a candidate for a State office can go to the country precincts to address the voters and it is due to Mr. Rouse's influence that Mr. Garnett came to Trimble. The Democrats of Trimble appreciate the attention shown them. Mr. Rouse left Trimble in order that he might spend two days in the country part of Campbell county. Mr. Rouse was born and raised and now lives in the country and he intends that the country people shall have what is coming to them if he can get it for them.—Trimble Democrat.

Should Have Good Teeth.

The horse that is being fitted for the market should have good teeth. Some of the horse fitters have rough teeth filed to prevent the teeth from cutting the flesh. In some cases they have a veterinarian pull the decayed teeth. These, if permitted to remain, interfere with the thrift of the animal. A buyer of thin horses says that it is remarkable how many horses there are that are thin in flesh on account of the poor condition of their teeth. Such horses improve very rapidly when once the trouble with the teeth has been remedied. The man with feeding horses for the purpose of fattening should remember that the stomach of the horse is small in proportion to his size. The horse cannot take at one time one-fourth as much into his stomach as can a steer of the same age. The horse that is being fed to get into condition should therefore be fed a little at a time, but frequently. It should also be kept in mind that it is a very easy matter to feed a horse too much corn fodder or other roughage.

Nearly 103 Years Old.

Mrs. Eliza Webster, of this county, is the oldest resident in the State. She is nearly 103 years of age. She has lived in this county for over 70 years. She is somewhat deaf, but as active as most people at 70 years of age. She lives with her son, Wm. Webster, and when harvest was on got after her son to clean out the potatoes as they were getting weedy. He told her as soon as they got out of the harvest he would have it attended to. But this did not suit her, so the next day she slipped off and when they found her she had just about cleaned out the weeds. She goes every where on the farm by herself. She eats but two meals a day—breakfast and a lunch about four o'clock. In the last three weeks she has visited several miles away from home.—Carrollton Democrat.

Cheep Feed For Cattle.

A bulletin of the Minnesota college of agriculture in referring to a cheap farm grown feed for cattle says that an acre of corn yielding 40 bushels will have 2,400 pounds of ear corn. It will have about 3,000 pounds of stover. It will cost approximately $10 per acre to grow, harvest and haul to the barn such a crop. This will mean a cost of 25 cents a bushel, with the stalks attached. A very liberal feeding for a fattening steer would be one peck of corn per day or 17 pounds. In connection with this 17 pounds of ear corn there would be approximately 20 pounds of stover. This would make a liberal day's feed at a cost of 6 or 7 cents.

This is a good illustration of the value of the corn crop that many times goes to waste in the field. Experience has shown that when the corn crop goes into the silo for feeding purposes the daily ration is considerably less than this in cost for cattle.

Is the World Growing Better?

Many things go to prove that it is. The way thousands are trying to help others is proof. Among them is Mrs. W. W. Gould, of Pittsfield, N. H. Finding good health by taking Electric Bitters, she now advises other sufferers, everywhere, to take them. "For years I suffered with stomach and kidney trouble," she writes. "Every medicine I used failed till I took Electric Bitters. But this great remedy helped me wonderfully." They'll help any woman. They're the best tonic and finest liver and kidney remedy that's made. Try them. You'll see. 50c at all dealers.

Claiming that martins left for the South earlier than usual, many papers throughout the state are giving this as a reason for an early winter. It is a fact that is known to those who have really observed the habits of the martin that they always leave for the South during the month of August, although some of our recent exchanges state the birds left later than usual this year, going southward about the middle of September. Years ago attention was called to the fact that martins desert their summer home in Kentucky during the month of August. Observant people say that the first fall month never finds the little bird in this section.

"It is a pleasure to tell you that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best cough medicine I have ever used," writes Mrs. Hugh Campbell, of Lavonia, Ga. "I have used it with all my children and the results have been highly satisfactory." For sale by all dealers.

High Priced Dogs.

James Slayback, who lives out on the Belleview pike, sold two young hunting dogs, last Friday, to men from the city for $75. Dogs seem to be pretty good property some times.

The two Mcs will make a good team.

The election passed off quietly in the entire county.

Ballot boxes began coming in early Wednesday morning.

Constance precinct gave an increased Republican majority.

James B. McCreary came back and with his old time majority.

Boone county did not put across her normal Democratic majority.

Noah Clore was one of the home-comers last Tuesday for election purposes.

In Burlington precinct the Democrats polled 76 and the Republicans 70 per cent of their vote.

The sweeping Democratic ticket in Kentucky, Tuesday, was the result of the party nominating its ticket.

J. W. Berkshire, for State Senator and G. E. Carroll, for representative having no opposition, had an easy race.

Walton's new city council will be composed of four Democrats, Diers, Watson, Bevarly and Allphin, and S. L. Edwards, Republican.

Voting began promptily on time in Burlington, G. W. Sandford, Frank Rouse, Dudley Blyth and Kirb Tanner, being the officers of election.

Old Sol came up smiling Tuesday morning, no doubt because he was fooling those who had predicted that Tuesday would be a bad day.

The voter who is a Democrat at a primary election and a Republican at a regular election, is a cross between a mugwump and a half breed insurgent.

The result of the election in Kentucky was known in Burlington by 8 o'clock Tuesday night, and the crowd of waiters disbanded and all went home.

Miss Nellie Kirkpatrick, one of the local telephone operators, got busy early Tuesday morning arranging for keeping tab on the election returns as they came in Tuesday night.

Henry Rice, colored, is blind, and when the officers of election asked him how he wanted his ballot stamped he said: "I want de cross put under de chicken,' and under the rooster it went.

The conditions were decidedly favorable for the polling of a large vote. The day was pleasant and the ground so wet that teams could not go into the fields for the purpose of gathering corn.

C. C. Hughe's first impulse was to vote the Democratic ticket and had stamped beneath the rooster, when he changed his notion and called for another ballot. He attributes his mistake to an improper adjustment of his eye glasses, but some say it was the first time that he ever had them on properly.

Local Happenings.

When it clears off you may expect rain again soon.

The wind and rain Wednesday knocked the leaves off of the trees in great quantities.

There will be preaching at Burlington Baptist church next Sunday morning at the usual hour.

The frosts the past week have done much towards putting corn in condition for putting in the crib.

The Hebron base ball team defeated the Delhi aggregation last Sunday on the grounds of the latter 3 to 2.

Don't neglect to read the advertisements in this issue. You will find it pays to read them every week.

Are you selecting any corn for an exhibit for the corn show at Florence on the 26th inst? If you are not you should be.

If the weather is favorable from now on there is grass enough in the pastures for stock for several weeks without any additional feeding.

Dr. John B. Grant, of Sparta, Ky., hay fever, asthma and nasal catarrh specialist, will be in Burlington every Thursday to treat patients until further notice.

A period of considerable dry weather is devoutly desired by the farmers, whose fall work has been seriously delayed by the continued rains.

The rain Sunday night and Monday morning kept a good many people from coming to Burlington that day, who, otherwise would have come.

It rained again Monday as has been the custom for several weeks past. When it rains on Monday it generally rains on two more days of the week.

Dr. Grant, who is making a speciality of treating asthma and catarrahal troubles will be in Burlington every Wednesday from now on to consult with his patients.

Remember the date of the Boone County Corn Show at Florence and have your entries made in time. Don't wait until the last minute. The premiums are liberal.

William Clore, of Locust Grove neighborhood, was in town last Friday afternoon. Some say he came to see the game of foot ball which began at an hour so late he could not remain.

The effects of the recent frosts are not so very plainly visible on vegetation. Conditions for a killing frost have been very favorable for some time, but a black frost has not put in its appearance.

About the hottest political campaign in this part of the State was that at Erlanger. It was sizzling hot for several days previous to its close. The contest was over the election of a town council.

James Beall, of Francesville, was an early caller at this office, last Monday morning, having come over early to bring his daughter, Miss Edna, who is one of the teachers in the local public school.

There is complaint that some persons who like to hunt are violating the law by killing quails and it is likely that the next grand jury will be called upon to call them to an account for violating the game law.

Those who have good guns and well trained bird dogs are anxiously awaiting the opening of the hunting season—that is some of them are waiting while others have been afield several times if the frequent discharge of guns is any indication.

A colored boy about 10 years old here in Burlington put some dynamite in a pipe last night and was smoking it when it exploded and blew out several of his teeth, tore his lip and left hand off and blew a large hole in one of his sides. The boy has been making his home with Kirb Tanner.

"There could be no better medicine than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. My children were all sick with whooping cough. One of them was in bed, had a high fever and was coughing up blood. Our doctor gave them Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and the first dose eased them, and three bottles cured them," says Mrs. R. A. Donaldson, of Lexington, Miss. For sale by all dealers.

A crowd of six Burlington young men visited Edgar Berkshire's fruit farm out on the Belleview pike, last Sunday, where they were received in a most hospitable manner. Mr. Berkshire put them in possession of his cider mill and gave them the run of the orchard, and the quantity of cider they made and consumed was considerable. They say he has the finest orchards in this part of the county. He keeps his trees in good condition and they pay well for their attention by fine yields.

The Public and Free School has long been recognized as an important factor in educating the masses of the people and wherever this system has been intelligently maintained and with a proper kind of Compulsory Law existing, we usually find a higher standard of education existing, therefore, it is of vital importance that we as public spirited citizens should at all times use our energy and all available means to help promote the general welfare of our public school system.

H. L. Harrison,
Chairman.

Mrs. Peramealia Clore Helm.

Mrs. Peramealia Clore Helm, died October 23d, 1911, aged 56 years.

Not all the loving ministrations of husband and friends could longer stay the destroyer's hand, and today, in her flower laden casket, all that was mortal of Mrs. Helm was laid to rest. She was warm hearted, loving and true to her kindred and friends, with a supreme love for her Saviour. Her christian character was an unquestioned heritage. As we turned from her grave with chastened hearts, the thought came that Death must come before resurrection, just as another spring tide will make all nature rejoice and be glad, so the life just gone will be renewed in the never fading gardens of that world which makes this one night. Until then, dear one, farewell.

Mr. Samuel Helm wishes through these columns to thank the relatives and friends who have been so thoughtful and kind during the long illness of his wife, who departed this life October 23d, 1911, leaving her husband, two brothers and four sisters and a host of loving friends to mourn her loss.

The Greater Kentucky Convention is to be held at Louisville, Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov. 14th and 15th, at which meeting many questions of vital importance to the future of Kentucky will be discussed, covering many of the State's needs. Every live, public spirited citizen in the State is invited to be present and participate in the discussion. An advisory committee covering nearly all of the State, and composed of the best citizens, has been appointed, and is now effecting arrangements for the convention. The joint chairman of the convention are George H. Cox, Owensboro, President of Kentucky Federation of Commercial Clubs, and J. W. Porter, of Lexington, President State Development Association. Denny B. Goode is the Secretary, 403 Courier-Journal Building, Louisville. There is an executive committee with a member from each congressional district. D. B. Wallace is the member from the Sixth District. There will be reduced railroad fares and a large attendance is expected.

Col. John Axby, the silver-tongued auctioneer, as is well known, is a hunter of no ill repute. On Monday night a flock of wild geese, seeking a warmer climate, became lost in the dense fog that enveloped the Ohio river and circled over the city for several hours. Early Tuesday morning a friend desirous of testing "Jack's" knowledge of wild game presented him with a magnificent specimen of sand hill crane which had been killed near the city on the previous day averring that it was a wild goose killed from the evening flock. And they actually say that Axby "tumbled" measuring the "goose" and telling his friends what a "whopper" it was.—Lawrenceburg Register.

Backache, Headachs, Nervousness and rheumatism, both in men and women, mean kidney trouble. Do not allow it to progress beyond the reach of medicine but stop it promptly with Foley Kidney Pills. Politics is off the board for a few months and the people of the State can turn their attention to business. The Presidential derby is the next event to be pulled off, during the preparation for which there will be big doings the country over.

A good crowd attended the sale of Charles Youell on the 31 ult. Everything advertised was sold without reserve, altho the animals in some instances did not bring the prices that their high grade should have commanded. Taking the sale as a whole Mr. Youell is very well satisfied with it. A first-class lunch was served at noon, and was especially enjoyed, as the weather was just such as was necessary to sharpen an appetite.

Below Petersburg and near the Aurora ferry landing there is a stretch of low bottom land running almost parallel with the Ohio which has every indication of having at one time been the bed of the river. For nearly one-third of a mile this depression is noticeable, and on each side there is a slope almost uniformly the same the entire distance. In the lowest portion water stands the year round and marsh grass grows in profusion.—Lawrenceburg Press.

The game of foot ball last Saturday afternoon was a one-sided affair again, Erlanger winning by a score of 72 to 0. It looks like Slater, of the Erlanger team with the assistance of any two of his teammates could clean up on the Burlington squad without much trouble. The Burlington team is not strong enough to break through Erlanger's line, and are slow on foot. They have the nerve to tackle but after securing the ball can not advance with it.

William Kirkpatrick took to market one day last week, a drove of very handsome cattle which he purchased of Bert Gaines, G. T. Gaines, and James R. Smith. The drove weighed over 25,000 pounds and brought a good price, as the three men from whom they were purchased produce no other kind of cattle, and, by the way there are few traders, if any, in livestock in this county, who handle more cattle, and good ones, than does Mr. Kirkpatrick.

Owing to the very inclement weather last Monday before noon a small crowd was in town to hear Hon. E. J. McDermott's speech that afternoon. It was one of the best campaign speeches that has been made in Burlington for a long time. Everybody was delighted with the speech, and many did not hesitate to pronounce it the best speech they ever heard. The speaker was met at the end of the traction line in an automobile by County Attorney N. E. Riddell and Dr. F. L. Peddicord, the latter chairman of the County Campaign Committee.

Mice came very near getting away with Volly Easton's roll of green backs a few days ago. He placed the roll of money, a considerable little amount, in the safe which mice frequented, and when he went to get it he was startled by finding it in a badly dilapidated condition, made so by the attacks of the mice. He collected the fragments and brought it to the bank to see what could be done with it, and by considerable work it was restored to its normal condition sufficiently to make it redeemable, consequently he lost nothing by the work of the rapatious little animals.

Having been annoyed so often in the past by the Hallow'eeners taking his wagon to pieces and concealing the parts, Chas. Westbay decided that no one should molest his wagon last Hallow'een night and to prevent the same he got together a horse blanket and an old shot gun and bunked in the wagon on which is a deep bed. He said it was the most uncomfortable night he ever spent and he thought that daylight which had always come too soon for him, would never put in its appearance. The boys were out about all night and he was afraid to try to sleep for fear he would wake up to find himself dumped in a hollow somewhere.

Can You Beat This.

Comes now Will F. Ward of Guilford with a Kiefer pear 5 1-2 inches in diameter and weighing 28 1-2 ounces, and signifies his willingness to make oath that the same grew on a tree in his orchard. He also states that there grew on the same tree, which is 23 years old, one-half bushel of pears each weighing over one-half pound. Mr. Ward is an enthusiastic orchardist, who believes it pays to couple science with labor in the farming business, particularly with the horticultural phase of it, and his results go to prove that he is right.—Lawrenceburg Press.

Baptist Mission Board Raised Sum of $50,000 to Pay for Work In Kentucky.

Louisville, Nov. 1.—The Baptist State Board of Missions closed its fiscal year last night entirely free of debt, the sum of $50,000 having been raised by contributions and pledges. The campaign came to a close last night, $10,000 having been given yesterday.

"It was the greatest day in the history of the State Board," said Dr. W. D. Powell, secretary. "Money came in by check, by telegraph and by telephone, pledged from over the entire State. For a while we were afraid it would be necessary to close the year in debt, but the people of the churches rallied splendidly to the support of the work."

The work for which the $50,000 had been spent was confined entirely to Kentucky, including mission work, mountain schools, various philanthropies and church building. During the year 107 churches have been assisted in building by the State Board, and the value of the churches erected is $200,000. In each instance the assistance given by the board acted, it is said, as an incentive, as the actual amount contributed in individual cases was small.

Approximately $160,000 has been raised by the Baptists of Kentucky during the year, as the sum of $77,000 was contributed in the spring for home and foreign missions.

Kentucky Crop Report.

Crop conditions throughout the State are above the average for this season, according to the October report of the Kentucky Department of Agriculture.

Seventy per cent. of the wheat crop and 78 per cent. of the rye crop have been sown. The acreage of wheat is 105 per cent. as compared with last year, while the acreage of rye is estimated at 95 per cent. Tobacco has been cut and is generally in good condition. The quantity is not so great as last year, but most of the county reports indicate that the quality is much better. The average of other crops is good; the pastures are flourishing and livestock is in first-class condition. While the early Irish potato crop was poor, the late crop is better, and sweet potato crops generally are fine. Soy beans, cowpeas and alfalfa average high.

Taking it all around, the October report is full of encouragement for the farmers and for everybody else, since all classes are largely dependent on the efforts of the farmers for prosperity. The annual Thanksgiving season is approaching and Kentucklans will have abundant cause to give thanks for the agricultural outcome of the year and for future prospects. Kentucky is a productive State and is adapted to a great variety of products It is hard to conceive of any limit to her possibilities in the agricultural line. Much of her fertile land is yet undeveloped and the vast body of her farmers have not learned the rudiments of scientific farming. For all that, Kentucky in this good year of 1911, as in previous years, will have "corn to sell and Keep" tobacco to supply the needs of the major portion of the world; livestock and other things for export and plenty of pretty much everything that is necessary for home consumption. All of which should make a glad Thanksgiving and a merry Christmas in the "Old Kentucky Home."—Courier-Journal.

Saved Child From Death.

"After our child had suffered from severe bronchial trouble for a year," wrote G. T. Richardson, of Richardson's Mills, Ala., we feared it had consumption. It had a bad cough all the time. We tried many remedies without avail, and doctor's medicine seemed as useless. Finally we tried Dr. King's New Discovery, and are pleased to say that one bottle effected a complete cure, and our child is again strong and healthy." For coughs, colds, hoarseness croup lagrippe, asthma and sore lungs, its the most infallible remedy that's made. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all dealers.

Edgar Berkshire, one of the posted men on fruit growing in this part of the country, presented the Recorder force with a jug of most excellent cider, a few days ago. It was made of some of the fine apples that are to be found in his large orchard, and handled in the most scientific manner.

CHAPTER IX.

Nathaniel Letton was talking when the door opened; he ceased, and with [illegible] gazed with consternation at Burning Daylight [illegible] The free, swinging movements of the trail-traveler were unconsciously exaggerated in that stride of his. In truth, it seemed to him that he felt the trail beneath his feet.

"Howdy, gentlemen, howdy," he remarked, ignoring the unnatural calm with which they greeted his entrance. He shook hands with them in turn, striding from one to another and gripping their hands so heartily that Nathaniel Letton could not forbear to wince. Daylight flung himself into a massive chair and sprawled lazily, with an appearance of fatigue. The leather grip he had brought into the room he dropped carelessly beside him on the floor.

"I've sure been going some," he sighed. "We sure trimmed them beautifully. It was real slick. And the beauty of the play never dawned on me till the very end. It was pure and simple knock down and drag out. And the way they fell for it was amazin'."

Letton made a dry sound in his throat. Dowsett sat quietly and waited, while Leon Guggenhammer struggled into articulation.

"You certainly have raised Cain," he said.

Daylight's black eyes flashed in a pleasant way.

"Didn't I, though!" he proclaimed, jubilantly. "And didn't we fool 'em! I was teetotally surprised. I never dreamed they would be that easy.

"And now," he went on, not permitting the pause to grow awkward, "we-all might as well have an accounting. I'm pullin' West this afternoon on that blamed Twentieth Century." He tugged at his grip, got it open, and dipped into it with both his hands. "But don't forget, boys, when you-all want me to hornswoggle Wall Street another flutter, all you-all have to do is whisper the word. I'll sure be right there with the goods."

His hands emerged, clutching a great mass of stubs, check-books, and brokers' receipts. These he deposited in a heap on the big table, and dipping again, he fished out the stragglers and added them to the pile. He consulted a slip of paper, drawn from his coat pocket and read aloud:

"Ten million twenty-seven thousand and forty-two dollars and sixty-eight cents is my figurin' on my expense. Of course that-all's taken from the winnings before we-all get to figurin' on the whack-up. Where's your figures? It must a' been a mighty big clean-up."

The three men looked their bepuzzlement at one another. The man was a bigger fool than they had imagined, or else he was playing a game which they could not divine.

Nathaniel Letton moistened his lips and spoke up.

"It will take some hours yet, Mr. Harnish, before the full accounting can be made. Mr. Howison is at work upon it now. We—ah—as you say, it has been a gratifying clean-up. Suppose we have lunch together and talk it over. I'll have the clerks work through the noon hour so that you will have ample time to catch your train."

Dowsett and Guggenhammer manifested a relief that was almost obvious. The situation was clearing. It was disconcerting, under the circumstances, to be pent in the same room with this heavy-muscled, Indian-like man whom they had robbed. They remembered unpleasantly the many stories of his strength and recklessness. If Letton could only put him off long enough for them to escape into the policed world outside the office door, all would be well; and Daylight showed all the signs of being put off.

"I'm real glad to hear that," he said. "I don't want to miss that train, and you-all have done me proud, gentlemen, letting me in on this deal. I just do appreciate it without being able to express my feelings. But I am sure almighty curious, and I'd like terrible to know, Mr. Letton, what your figures of our winning is. Can you-all give me a rough estimate?"

Nathaniel Letton did not look appealingly at his two friends, but in the brief pause they felt that appeal pass out from him. Dowsett, of sterner mold than the others, began to divine that the Klondiker was playing. But the other two were still under the blandishment of his child-like innocence.

"It is extremely—er—difficult," Leon Guggenhammer began. "You see, Ward Valley has fluctuated so, er—"

"That no estimate can possibly be made in advance," Letton supplemented.

"Approximate it, approximate it," Daylight counselled, cheerfully. "It don't hurt if you-all are a million out one side or the other. The figures'll straighten that up. But I'm that curious I'm just itching all over. What d'ye say?"

"Why continue to play at cross purposes?" Dowsett demanded abruptly and coldly. "Let us have the explanation here and now. Mr. Harnish is laboring under a false impression, and he should be set straight.

By this time Letton was stiffened by the attitude Dowsett had taken, and his answer was prompt and definite.

"I fear you are under a misapprehension, Mr. Harnish. There are no winnings to be divided with you. Now don't get excited, I beg of you. I have but to press this button—"

For from excited, Daylight had all the seeming of being stunned. He looked at Dowsett and murmured:

"It was your deal, all right, and you all-dole them right, too. Well, I ain't kicking. I'm like the player in that poker game. It was your deal, and you-all had a right to do your best. And you done it—cleaned me out slick-er'n a whistle."

He gazed at the heap on the table with an air of stunefaction.

"And that-all ain't worth the paper it's written on. Gol dast it, you-all can sure deal 'em 'round when you get a chance. Oh, no, I ain't a-kicking. It was your deal, and you-all certainly done me, and a man ain't half a man that squeals on another man's deal. And now the hand is played out, and the cards are on the table, and the deal's over, but . . ."

His hand, dipping swiftly into his inside breast pocket, appeared with the big Colt's automatic.

"As I was saying, the old deal's finished. Now it's my deal, and I'm a-going to see if I can hold them four aces—"

"Take your hand away, you whited sepulchre!" he cried sharply.

Nathaniel Letton's hand, creeping toward the push-button on the desk, was abruptly arrested.

"Change cars," Daylight commanded. "Take that chair over there, you gangrene-livered skunk. Jump, or I'll make you leak till folks'll think your father was a water hydrant and your mother a sprinkling-cart. You-all move your chair alongside, Guggenhammer; and you-all Dowsett, sit right there, while I just irrelevantly explain the virtues of this here automatic. She's loaded for big game and she goes off right it— She's a sure hummer when she gets started.

"Preliminary remarks being over, I now proceed to deal. Remember, I ain't making no remarks about your deal. You done your darndest, and it was all right. But this is my deal, and it's up to me to do my darndest. In the first place, you-all know me. I'm Burning Daylight—savvee? Ain't afraid of God, devil, death, nor destruction. Them's my four aces, and they sure copper your bets. Look at that there living skeleton. Letton, you're sure afraid to die. Your bones is all rattling together you're that scared. And look at that fat Jew there. This little weapon's sure put the fear of God in his heart. He's yellow as a sick persimmon. Dowsett, you're a cool one. You-all ain't batted an eye nor turned a hair. That's because you're great on arithmetic. And that makes you-all dead easy in this deal of mine. You're sitting there and adding two and two together, and you-all know I sure got you skinned. You know me, and that I ain't afraid of nothing. And you-all adds up all your money and knows you ain't a-going to die if you can help it."

"Now it's My Deal, and I'm Going to See if I Can Hold Them Four Aces."

"I'll see you hanged," was Dowsett's retort.

"Not by a damned sight. When the fun starts, you're the first I plug. I'll hang all right, but you-all won't live to see it. You-all die here and now while I'll die subject to the law's delay—savvee? Being dead, with grass growing out of your carcasses, you won't know when I hang, but I'll sure have the pleasure a long time of knowing you-all beat me to it."

"You surely won't kill us?" Letton asked in a queer, thin voice.

Daylight shook his head.

"It's sure too expensive. You-all ain't worth it. I'd sooner have my chips back. And I guess you-all 'd sooner give my chips back than go to the dead-house."

A long silence followed.

"Well, I've done dealt. It's up to you-all to play. But while you're deliberating, I want to give you-all warning: if that door opens and any one of you cusses lets on there's anything unusual, right here and then I sure start plugging. They ain't a soul 'll get out of the room except feet first."

A long session of three hours followed. The deciding factor was not the big automatic pistol, but the certitude that Daylight would use it. Not alone were the three men convinced of this, but Daylight himself was convinced. He was firmly resolved to kill the men if his money was not forthcoming. It was not an easy matter, on the spur of the moment, to raise ten millions in paper currency, and there were vexatious delays. A dozen times Mr. Howison and the head clerk were summoned into the room. On these occasions the pistol lay on Daylight's lap, covered carelessly by a newspaper, while he was usually engaged in rolling or lighting his brown-paper cigarette. But in the end, the thing was accomplished. A suit-case was brought up by one of the clerks from the waiting motor-car, and Daylight snapped it shut on the last package of bills. He paused at the door to make his final remarks.

"There's three several things I sure want to tell you-all. When I get outside this door, you-all 'll be set free to act, and I just want to warn you-all about what to do. In the first place, no warrants for my arrest—savvee? This money's mine, and I ain't robbed you of it. If it gets out how you gave me the double cross and how I done you back in the deal, I'll be on [illegible] big [illegible] langh. Besides, having got back my stake that you-all robbed me of, if you arrest me and try to rob me a second time I'll go gunning for you-all, and I'll sure get you. No little frail-cat abrimps like you-all can skin Burning Daylight. If you win you lose, and there'll sure be some several unexpected funerals around this burg. Just look me in the eye, and you-all'll savvee I mean business. Them stubs and receipts on the table is all yourn. Good day."

As the door shut behind him, Nathaniel Letton sprang for the telephone, and Dowsett intercepted him.

"What are you going to do?" Dowsett demanded.

"The police. It's downright robbery, I won't stand it. I tell you I won't stand it."

Dowsett smiled grimly, but at the same time bore the slender financier back and down into his chair.

"We'll talk it over," he said; and in Leon Guggenhammer he found an anxious ally.

And nothing ever came of it. The thing remained a secret with the three men. Nor did Daylight ever give the secret away, though that afternoon, leaning back in his stateroom on the Twentieth Century, his shoes off, and feet on a chair, he chuckled long and heartily. New York remained forever puzzled over the affair; nor could it hit upon a rational explanation. By all rights, Burning Daylight should have gone broke, yet it was known that he immediately reappeared in San Francisco possessing an apparently unimpaired capital. This was evidenced by the magnitude of the enterprises he engaged in, such as, for instance, Panama Mail, by sheer weight of money and fighting power wrestling the control away from Shefty and selling out in two months to the Harriman interests at a rumored enormous advance.

PREFERS HIS "KID" BROTHER

Maid of 35 Throws Over "Octo" for a "Septua"—Rejected Suitor Quits His Old Haunts.

New York.—Courted by two brothers, both widowers, one 76 years old, the other 83, Miss Ella Kissam of Halesite, L. I., has chosen the younger, and in a few days, it is announced, she will become the bride of Capt. Charles E. Sammis of Huntington. A license has been issued by Stanton E. Sammis, town clerk of Huntington.

The rejected suitor, Rinaldo Sammis, is so downcast, it is said, that he has quit his ancient haunts on the north shore and has retired to the umbrageous seclusion of Freehold, N. J.

Miss Kissam is only 35 and a prospective heiress. She was long sought by eligible bachelors and widowers even younger than herself, but her heart soon inclined to the two Sammisses. When the grizzled skipper and his brother visited the Kissams several months ago at their winter home in Morehead City, N. C., it was known to their friends the brothers would not return north until one had won the hand of Miss Ella.

Though the captain is fairly well to do, Rinaldo has more money. Land he owned was bought in a suburban real estate "boom." His cornfields have been cut into building lots, and friends refer to him as the "farmer millionaire."

Oscar Kissam, father of the bride-to-be, was called "the dynamite boss" of Long Island because of his extensive operations as a contractor. When the two Sammises went to Morehead City they were the best of friends, and they bantered each other on their expectation. But when they came back to the north and Rinaldo heard the news from the captain, it is said the loser left the train at the first stopping place and waited for another one.

The captain's friends at Huntington are getting ready to serenade him.

SOPHIE BARRED FROM TABLE

Immaculate Young Man, Accompanied by Two Female Companions, Finds Hotel Objects to Cat.

New York.—The only name in the party that Waldorf-Astoria attaches were certain of was Sophie. She was very black and wore a sumptuous diamond and ruby necklace.

Sophie came in on the arm of a tall, slim, fair young man in a white claw-hammer coat, trousers to match and a Panama hat. Before Sophie could take a seat at a table in a summer dining room, however, a waiter informed the young man that she must be checked in the coatroom.

"Beastly!" drawled the young man as he disappeared with Sophie toward the coatroom. It was not a race question, for Sophie was only a black cat. She was left with the maid, but soon had to be transferred to other quarters, as four bulldogs and three bull terriers had previously been checked there and the animal oratory that followed disturbed the serenity of Peacock alley.

With the fastidious young man were two women, one elderly and the other young and haughty, both magnificently dressed. They came in an automobile and one evidently was his wife and the other his mother.

His name is said to be Willoughby. He wore a jeweled bracelet on his left wrist, and screwed into his eye-socket was a monocle attached to a black silk cord.

"It's very stupid to have to dine without Sophie," said the elderly woman, but they did.

Kentucky News.

The greatest fish catch reported around Elizabethtown for a great many years was made Wednesday by Louie Goldsmeer, one of the town's most ardent followers of Isaac Walton. He angled two beautiful bass out of Stephburg Lake, one weighing six pounds and an ounce and the other five pounds and 8 ounces. —Elizabethtown News.

The tobacco committee of the Caldwell County Educational and Co-operative met and closed the books for the pool of 1911 tobacco which means that the books will be re-opened this year for any new poolers. Over 1,000,000 pounds of tobacco has been pooled and negotiations for a purchase of the pool will no doubt soon be made by tobacco representatives.—Hopkinsville Kentuckian.

The greatest problem that confronts our people at the present time is that of dogs. In the language of our forefathers there are dogs, more dogs and lots of dogs; in fact a stranger visiting our village and unacquainted with the color of our population would declare without hesitation that he had got off at an Indian village, where there are always ten dogs to every Indian. —Campbellsburg News-Journal.

Carrollton is to have a tobacco drying and curing plant. We say we are to have it because the movement was started yesterday and there is no doubt as to its realization. The plant is a necessity with the two open leaf sales warehouses, as the tobacco bought on the market has to be sent elsewhere to be redried. It will not only help the market by bringing more buyers but will be a paying investment to the stockholders.—News.

Mr. H. H. Price, the local groceryman, has in his possession a half dollar which was coined in 1853. It is one of the rarest coins in existence. It was recently reported that only two coins of that date are in existence. Mr. J. T. Watts, of Perryville, has one, and a gentleman at Owensboro reports that he has one for which he refused an offer of $3,500. Mr. Watts, of Perryville, does not think the coin is worth anything like that amount, but he did refuse $25 for his.—Danville Advocate.

The fiscal court has been in session in Pikeville during the past week, and they did some things that are of interest to the taxpayers of the county. Among them the County Judge's salary was reduced from $1,500 to $900, and the County Attorney's from $31,000 to $700 and the County Superintendent's from $1,500 to $1,000 per annum. This is a saving to the taxpeyers of Pike county of $1,400 in salaries per year. The order setting these salaries will stand for six years and during this time the taxpayers will be saved on this item the sum of $8,400.—Pikeville Advocate.

The Mt. Morgan Coal Company sold to Arthur Groves, of Knoxville, one day this week a 1,200 acre tract of coal land situated on the waters of Brier Creek, near the Mike Richardson farm. Mr. Groves is president of the Mt. Ash Coal Company at Mt. Ash, and owns considerable other coal stock in this section. Preparations are now being made to put down three miles of track and it is said the new mines will be in operation in the near future. Capt. Underwood, of the Mt. Morgan Coal Co., stated that the Mt. Morgan Coal Company would continue to run under its present management, and they expect to make several improvements within the next few months. —Williamsburg Republican.

As we have maintained for some years, Rockcastle is rich in minerals and only lacks development. The stone and sand business has made a good start and the output is on the increase by jumps and bounds, and not many years will pass until our county will be far ahead of any portion of our State in this line, including cement. The coal business is going to be developed, especially in Skaggs Valley. The prospects are good for the fruition of a big enterprise in that line in the near future. Parties have had an agent in the valley for the past two years investigating the mineral resources and taking options on lands. It requires outside capital for development of our resources, and it appears now it is a mighty good time to encourage capitalists to take hold —Mt. Vernon Signal.

"There will be 53 Sundays in 1911. This will not happen again in 189 years. It has been suggested that all religious denominations of the United States or of the world, for that matter celebrate the fifty-third Sunday, which falls on December 31st, the last day of the year, as a universal day of Thanksgiving." This item has appeared in several of our exchanges A moments thought will show any thinking person that it is untrue The ordinary year consists of 365 days; which is fifty-two weeks and one day, that odd day will be the same one as the first day of the year. As there is an odd day for each year, in seven years each day of the week will have been that odd day and the cycle of years will begin again. As this cycle of years contains one leap year at least and sometime two, the time will be reduced to six or five years. As a matter of fact, the next year to contain fifty-three Sundays, will be 1916, which lacks a greatdeal of being one

Experts figure that we have in Perry county over a billion and a half tons of the finest bituminous coal in the world in one vein alone. This vein is near the base of the mountain, and has an average thickness of nearly four feet. Its cooking qualities have been repeatedly tested and pronounced a splendid coking coal. Besides it is excellent for steam and domestic purposes.

It is said by many who are experienced and who have analyzed it that it beats the famous Connelsville coal for coking, being higher in carbon and lower in sulphur and phosphorus.

When we consider that this is but one of two or three other veins, one of which runs from five to eleven feet in thickness, the vastness of this black diamond empire cannot be comprehended.

And this is but one of many sources of Perry county's immense wealth. Oil and gas are here in paying quantities. It only lacks development. Some of the citizens of the town have already constructed rude pipes and fixtures and are lighting their homes by gas, conducted from where it oozes from the ground.

Building stone in inexhaustible quantities is another item; shale, for gray and white pressed brick, running from two to twenty feet thick; also clay, for common pressed brick; billions of feet of poplar, ash, cucumber, lynn, oak, lar, ash, cucumber, lynn, oak, ance.

We have fifty miles of trunk line railroad running through the county, and nearing completion, affording a ready market east, west, north and south.—Hazard Herald.

Don't Leave the Farm.

The time for a boy to leave the farm is past. Their teachers no longer advise them to go to the cities. Opportunities today for success upon the farm was never greater. It is true that to succeed on the farm today, one must be educated, must know how to improve the land, cultivate the crops, breed up the stock and market their produce. Education how many farmers realize that they fail to succeed today because their education is limited. The boy to succeed on the farm must be educated. The farmer who fails to send his children to school regularly not only injures his children but he throttles advancements and progress of the next generation.

The boy on the farm should receive a short course in agriculture in the State university where he can learn how to analyze the soil, spray and take care of the orchards and many other things without which he cannot farm correctly or successfully.

The old notion that a boy does not need an education to farm is as false today as it was a hundred years ago.

Knowledge is power therefore it behooves every parent to give to his child knowledge. The boy on the farm is the nation's safeguard in war and he feeds the nation when people are hungry. Educate the boy and keep him on the farm where he can live and can live an honorable and successful life.

A Mail Carrier's Load

Seems heavier when he has a weak back and kidney trouble. Fred Duhren, Mail Carrier at Atchinson, Kan., says: "I have been bothered with kidney and bladder trouble and had a severe pain across my back. Whenever I carried a heavy load of mail, my kidney trouble increased. Some time ago, I started taking Foley kidney Pills and since taking them I have gotten entirely rid of all my kidney trouble and am as sound now as ever." For sale at Jones' drug store, Walton. X.

Take CARDUI

The Woman's Tonic

Mrs. Lula Walden, of Gramlin, S. C., followed this advice. Read her letter: "I was so weak, when I first began to take Cardui, that it tired me to walk just a little. Now, I can do all the general housework, for a family of 9." Try Cardui for your troubles. It may be the very remedy you need.

Come to Covington as Often As You Like
We'll Pay Your Railroad Fare in Cash or
We'll Pay You 3c A Mile If You Drive In.

OUR PROPOSTION :—

We will refund Railroad fares, Trolly Car fares and Steam Boat fares, or will allow three cents per mile for persons driving into Covington and purchasing goods from any or all of the stores of the members of the Retail Merchants Association of the Industrial Club of Covington, on a basis of one mile for each dollar's worth of goods purchased.

To illustrate :—If you travel, say ten miles, you would be required to purchase at least $20.00 worth of goods in order to have your entire Railroad fare refunded, you having traveled ten miles each way, making a total of twenty miles.

If your total purchase amounts to a less number of dollars than the number of miles you travel, we will refund as many miles of your fare as the number of dollars you spend with members of our Association.

On the other hand: if you spend a greater number of dollars than miles you travel, in addition to your entire fare or mileage, we will refund one per cent on the purchase you make in excess of the amount necessary to secure the refund of your fare.

By this plan you not only have your Railroad fare or mileage paid, but you can take advantage of the many Special Sales that the members of our Association continually offer.

Covington merchandise has a State-wide reputation for excellence and up to-dateness---Covington values are always a bit better than most people expect—Covington prices are always a shade lower. And there is a reason for these better values and lower prices. Come to Covington and see.

We are members of the Retail Merchants Association of Covington, and will rebate fares on the plan as outlined above.

Wm. Vance, of near Williamstown, was here last week looking at several farms with a view to purchasing and moving here.

Joseph Finley, of Georgetown, was here Thursday buying mules for the southern market, going from here to Elliston Station on business.

Miss Willeve Tillman returned home here last week from a delightful visit to friends at Newport and Ft. Thomas, and her health is greatly improved.

Wood R. Miller, Wm. P. Kinman and William E. Vest, left Tuesday, for a prospecting trip in Alabama and Mississippi, where Mr. Vest has a large amount of land for sale.

Mrs. J. D. Redd, of Paintaville, Johnson county, spent several days this week here, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Bevarly. Mrs. Redd is the wife of J. D. Redd the Prohibition candidate for Governor.

The Girl's Class of the Walton Christian church entertained on Hallow'een night, at the opera house with a tacky masquerade party, and a pleasant evening was enjoyed by all. Nice refreshments were served.

J. T. Hurt has resumed his position as agent of the C. & O. Railroad at Walton after a couple of weeks' vacation. C. E. Childrey, who was filling his position returned to Danville, accompanied by his wife and baby.

A. Kirtley Johnson, the clever rural mail carrier was sick the past week, and when unable to make the rural mail delivery his wife and daughter perform the duties in a most satisfactory manner, both being appointed as substitutes.

Owen S. Watts and wife are now in St. Cloud, Florida, where Mr. Watts has accepted the position of assistant cashier of the First National Bank, which has a capital of $50,000. If they like the location Mr. and Mrs. Watts will move to St. Cloud.

The ladies of the Walton Baptist church had a very successful oyster supper at the Walton opera house, there being a large attendance, plenty of excellent food, and a general good time for all. Over ninety dollars were the proceeds of the evening.

Our fellow citizen, S. L. Edwards, bears the honor of being the only Republican elected to office in Kentucky at the election Tuesday. He is talking of resigning, not desiring to hold office under these circumstances. He was elected trustee of the town of Walton.

The work on the new 8-room residence of Miss Lulie Jones is progressing very rapidly under the direction of Contractor Geo. P. Nicholson, and it will be completed inside of the next month. The house will be one of the nicest in the town with all of the modern improvements.

Dr. J. G. Slater and A. Kirtley Johnson were in Cincinnati a part of last week, consulting a physician regarding Mr. Johnson's health, the latter remaining for treatment at a hospital for appendicitis. His position as rural mail carrier is being acceptably filled by his wife and daughter, Miss Maggie.

The "Spelling Bee" given under the auspices of the Walton High School faculty was a very enjoyable affair and a nice sum of money from admission fees was realized for the benefit of the school improvement league. The old blue spelling book was used and the contest was quite exciting. The last two contesting for the honors were Miss Nannie Chambers and her sister Miss Jeannette Chambers, and Miss Nannie won the prize of one dollar.

Patrick Ryan of Independence, and Miss Nellie B. Matthews, of Covington, were united in the bonds of holy wedlock at Covington, Rev. Father Kathman of the Holman Street Catholic church, performing the ceremony. The young couple left at once for Chicago to spend a couple of weeks with relatives and friends, and on their return will go to housekeeping at Covington. Mr. Ryan is well known in this quarter as a splendid young gentleman, while his bride is said to be one of the most popular young ladies of her locality. Mr. Ryan is a fireman on the C. & O. Railroad.

John Jefferson, colored, aged 28 years, was murdered at Bracht Station by a negro whose name is unknown. They were all employed on the railroad section of the Q. & C. Railroad, and were in the bunk cars, part of the hands playing cards. The murderer asked Jefferson for a quarter which he refused to give him, and going to his coat the negro drew out a pistol and shot Jefferson in the abdomen, and then made his escape and has not been apprehended. Dr. A. N. Jones was called but could not do anything for the wounded man and he died. The remains were buried on the railroad right of way near Walton. Jefferson resided at Chattahootchie, Georgia.

Married—At Covington, Nov. 5, Estill Holder, aged 30, and Miss Mamie M. Gustafson, aged 26, of Glenwoods City, Wisconsin, John C. Schneider, aged 36, and Miss Letitia Perkins, aged 34, both of Crittenden.

One of the most enjoyable gatherings held here this season was the "Tacky" masquerade party given at the Walton opera house, on Hallow'een eve, under the auspices of the young ladies of the Christian church Sunday school. The opera house was filled to overflowing, and the many grotesque and absurd costumes awakened much merriment and enjoyment. It was a late hour when the crowd dispersed. The Sunday school realized a handsome sum from the admission fee of ten cents and the sale of light refreshments.

Cause of Corn Stalk Disease

Corn stalk disease is usually caused by compelling the cattle to subsist entirely upon the dry stalk and leaf, which contains so little digestible nourishment that they eat great quantities to keep themselves from starvation, and thus overwork their stomachs to such an extent that death follows. A post-mortem examination of a dead animal will disclose the stomach filled with a mass of dry material that has persistently resisted the action of all digestive fluids. There is more danger from fields that have been husked clean, that is, where the huskers have made an effort to get almost every ear of corn instead of rushing along and leaving a big per cent of the ears behind as some do. Under the last conditions, there is but little danger from corn stalk disease, as the animals will not eat many of the stalks as long as they find plenty of corn, but there is danger that they will eat too much corn for their good.

Give the cows the liberty of the stalk fields, gradually, turning them in for only an hour or so each day for several days, extending the time a little each day. It is always best that the animals should have their regular morning feed of roughage first so that they will feel that they have something in their stomachs and thus not eat so greedily of the stalks.

They should also have access to drinking water before going to the stalk fields and should be watered again at noon. A plentiful supply of salt is essential at this season. Salt is essential at all times to good digestion in man or beast because it contains material which forms an active digestive agent in the stomach and also causes thirst that demands water, a very important item in good rapid digestion and assimilation of the food when the animals are on stalk pasture.

The stalk fields should be pastured as early in the season as possible in order that the most benefit may be derived from them. Where the field is not turned into until late the stalks have been soaked by numerous rains and dried up by the sun and wind until there is very little nourishment left in them. Many of the blades and tops have been blown away by the wind and what remains is so dry and unpalatable that the animals will derive little benefit from them. If wheat has been seeded in the corn, of course the stalk fields cannot be pastured except when there is a heavy snow upon the ground, but otherwise they can be utilized immediately. If one has several small fields the best plan is to keep all hands busy in one field until all the corn is out. That field may then be pastured while the huskers are working in another field. Where there is but one large field of corn on the farm and the whole field cannot be husked out early, it will pay to get out the corn from one end of the field, then run a cheap, temporary fence around the part that has been husked and turn the stock in.

The practice of pasturing stalk fields during soft winter weather is never a wise one. The stock tramping over the ground at such times will do a great deal of harm, though one may not realize it until the time to break up arrives, when such ground will break up cloddy. A great deal of valuable time right in the busy season may be required to reduce the clods to a tillable condition.

I am now making sorghum molasses, and all those who want same will come and get them.
W. C. Rouse, Limaburg.

The first of what is hoped will be a series of similar meetings was held Tuesday by Miss Lucile Porter, who has charge of the public school in the Witherspoon school district. Quite a number of the patrons were present, principally ladies. During the reception chocolate and other refreshments were served and the occasion was a most pleasant one. The teacher was enabled to meet and become acquainted with the mothers and friends of the children and the visitors know more of the school, its aims and interests than before. These receptions cannot help but be of mutual benefit and we echo the desire of the County Board of Education, that these receptions be held at all the county school houses.—Winchester Democrat.

It would do you heart good to hear some of the very satisfactory comment passed upon JUSTRIGHT roofing.

And if you were ONE of the owners of these inimitable roofs, you will be perfectly justified in priding yourself on the judgment you displayed when you purchased JUSTRIGAT.

Yes, you could look at your roof and say : "Well, here's Freedom from roofing troubles for a good many years," and you wouldn't be far from the general opinion.

We think well of it, and why not ?

Samples here galore for "they as wants them," as Sam Weller says.

Thanksgiving Proclamation.

Frankfort, Ky., Nov. 13.— Gov. Willson to-day issued a proclamation setting apart Thursday, Nov. 30, as Thanksgiving Day. He says: "Our country has been spared the trials of war and the burdens of sorrow and suffering. We have enjoyed the blessings of peace and of a high degree of happiness and generous gift. No civil disorders have brought sorrow or shame to our commonwealth. We have kept the covenant of the law with each other and with our Maker. We have maintained peace, neighborly good will and friendship throughout the boundaries of the commonwealth without reproach. We have enjoyed the blessing of liberty and complete freedom under the law. The public peace and the fair name of the state have not been marred by feuds or lawless bands. Our people have worked together with mutual good will and honest respects for each others opinions, faith and feeling as they never did before. Our crops have give rich returns for the labor of the farmer, the factories have produced a great output and business interests have prospered, and for all these gifts and blessings to our country and old Kentncky I call upon our people together in their homes and churches to render praise and thanks to our Lord."

Will Contest Their Mother's Will.

Mrs. Martha A. Griffith, who recently died at Covington, left a will in which she bequeathed what property she had to M. D. McInerny and Ella Brodnix, who resided at the hotel where she resided and died. The will was written seven days before her death, and stipulated that her debts and funeral expenses were to be paid, and whatever remained of her estate Mr. McInerney and Mrs. Brodnix were to have. Mrs. Griffith left two children, Elmer Griffith and Miss Nannie Griffith, who reside with their father, Chas. L. Griffith, at Walton, and as these children were the rightful heirs their friends prevailed on them taking steps to have the will set aside, employing Jno. L. West, of Walton, and Shaw & Ware, of Covington, as their attorneys. It was alleged by the children that their mother inherited $10,000 from her father. Her wasteful actions and her deportment caused her to be tried for unsoundness of mind, and she was sent to the Lakeland insane asylum from Kenton county, but was subsequently restored legally to her mental faculties, August 3d. What remained of her property, $3,600 in money, was given over to her, and at her death, Oct. 3rd, she had but $950 which was on deposit to her credit in a Covington bank. M. D. McInerney and Ella Brodnix were named in her will as the executors and beneficiaries, though she had known them but a brief period. In the Kenton county court Judge Walter Cleary admitted the will to probate, deciding that on the evidence given that the deceased was possessed of her propermental faculties when the will was drawn. The attorneys for the Griffith children did not present any evidence or contest the case other than to protest against the probating of the will, and taking an appeal to the Kenton Circuit Court, where the trial will take place on the merits of the case. There never was any estrangement between the mother and the children, and Mrs. Griffith giving her property to strangers in preference to her children has naturally awakened some criticism.

The Muts Were Defeated.

A foot ball protem organization called the Muts and lead by Supt. Edgar Riley, played the Burlington High School team last Friday afternoon, the score being 9 to 5 in favor of the High School. Saturday morning there was quite a number of the Muts who were so sore and stiff that they had to be helped out of bed and carried to their breakfast in easy chairs, and it will probably be a long time before they take part in another game of foot ball. The game was enjoyed very much by the small crowd of spectators on account of the two aggregations being so equally matched. The game was gotten up to give the High School boys practice but several of the Muts will not be so accommodating along that line again.

Look and See Who is Posted.

Before a hunter launches out in a field today he should ascertain who forbids hunting on his premises and then steer clear of them. If the farmers had no objections to hunting on their lands they would not say so in such emphatic terms. The list published elsewhere in the Recorder is a very small percent of land owners who forbid hunters entering upon their premises, and it is not safe to take it for granted that a farmer is willing for you to come upon his farm with dog or gun.

Submitted to an Operation.

In renewing his subscription to the Recorder, Prof. W. P. Dickey, of Richmond, Va., writes: "I had to undergo a severe operation for gall stone. Though able to get about at present, I am far from strong. On account of my illness I have given up the Professorship of Latin in Richmond College. I am glad to note from time to time the educational progress in Boone county. Let the good work continue."

Died of His Wounds.

The negro boy of whose terrible misfortune mention was made in these columns last week, died about four o'clock Friday morning having survived about thirty hours after the accident. There are several theories as to how the dynamite cap got into the pipe he was smoking, some believing that it was put in by another party, while others think it may have been among his tobacco and thus found its way into the pipe. The victim was never conscious after the explosion consequently he made no statement.

The boy was about 12 years of age and had worked for Kirb Tanner and wife and Miss Mary Furlong, staying at night at the home of his grandfather, Harrison Minor, where the accident occurred.

Near the boy at the time of the accident sat two other members of the family who were knocked down and bruised somewhat, one of them receiving a cut on one of her shoulders but from what she has no idea.

Fragments of the boys hand which was torn into shreds were scattered about the house. A regular panic prevailed, for a few minutes and when Dr. Peddicord arrived at the residence he found about the most horrible sight witnessed in his experience as a physician. Assisted by A. B. Kenaker, who administered the chloroform he proceeded to dress the wounds, which, consisted of a mangled mouth, one hand blown off and a large hole in one side, where a rib was broken and a portion of the clothing carried into the cavity. It is not known how the hole was torn in the boy's side unless he had another dynamite cap in his vest pocket which was exploded also.

The doctor had no hopes for the boys recovery as soon as he ascertained his condition.

It is supposed that the dynamite cap was secured by the boy at the creamery, where considerable dynamite was used when a well was being dug last summer.

McCreary's Statement.

The following statement relative to his victory has been issued by Governor-elect McCreary:

"The platform on which I asked the support of the voters of Kentucky represents my views on public questions therein presented, and I will earnestly endeavor to carry out its pledges, with the assistance of the members of the General Assembly.

"I am in favor of progress, improvement and advancement, and it will be my ambition to make Kentucky the most progressive state in the Union, and I will endeavor to advance its interests in every line and try to bring prosperity to the state and happiness to the people. To the Chairmen and members of the Campaign Committees I present my sincere thanks for the successful management of the campaign, and I am thankful to my associates on the ticket and to the Democratic press of Kentucky and to the speakers from this and other states for their valuable and splendid assistance.

"I am grateful to know that this splendid victory was won without receiving contributions from any corporations, lobbyists or other persons who might desire or ask for special privileges or favors. I am also pleased to believe that the victory in Kentucky is a forerunner of a great national Democratic victory to be achieved next year in the election of a Democratic President."

A Public Benefactor.

Not satisfied with reducing the price of potatoes by over one half, Mayor Shanks, the enterprising chief executive of Indianapolis, has now turned his attention to the high prices being charged for fruit and meats, and propose to bring those two commodities within reach of all classes of people by buying in large quantities and retailing them at cost to the consumer. He expects to make satisfactory arrangements with cattle raisers in the farming communities, whereby farmers will butcher their own beef, hogs and sheep and sell direct to the consumers at a fair margin of profit in the villages, towns and larger cities. Mayor Shanks is a public benefactor who does things and officials of his rank throughout the whole country might well follow, with great benefit to the people at large and satisfaction to themselves, the bold path he has blazed through the wilderness of existing high prices for food stuffs and provisions.

Attacked by a Mad Bull.

Paducah, Nov. 11.—Forest Russell, seventeen years old, an employe of the James I. Potter dairy, was attacked by an angry bull yesterday while alone in the barnyard. The mad animal rushed him against a wire fence, and gored him for fifteen minutes before assistance arrived. A dog attracted the attention of the bull for a minute, and Russell crawled within the reach of willing hands. One horn pierced his body, but the wound is not dangerous. He was bruised some over the body. He will recover.

ARE THEY AFRAID?

There are, in this neighborhood agents for several "bucket bowl" cream separators. "Bucket bowl" separators are the kind with wide mouth bowls, full of parts, set on top of their spindles. These agents say, to the farmers intending to buy a separator. "Look out for the Tubular," or "Don't try the Tubular," or "Beware of the Tubular." To hear them talk you would guess right away that is the best cream separator made, and that these "bucket bowl" fellows are afraid of it. And they are afraid of it. The Tubular surpasses every other separator in every particular, and you should take mighty good care you do see a Tubular before you buy a separator. We will be pleased to show you the latest Tubular and give you an illustrated catalog.

Observe the plumb bob on rear of the Tubular frame. It makes leveling quick, easy, accurate —enables you to keep the Tubular level and get the best work out of it.

Alexandria, Ind., Nov. 11, 1911

To the Recorder:—

Much has been told in newspapers about "Fifty Years Ago Today," and Taft jumping over the moon and climbing the Rocky mountains finally landing at Lincoln Farm in Kentucky. The Chinese rebellion goes merrily on, Turkey and Italy tear eachothers throat, jurors to try the McNamara bomb throwers are hard to get and harder to hold after they are gotten; the Panama Canal is going to pan out alright if they keep on digging; the base ball series was a Quaker Oats affair and proved a profitable investment; the socialists are some pumpkins in city elections, and between the Democrats and the deep blue sea the Republicans are catching——and whatever else is coming.

Prior to the recent elections in Kentucky these things were of some importance, but now they don't amount to 30 cents, and why? Kentucky has returned to her first love—has vindicated herself, has put on the armor of political righteousness which all the forces of Satin and Billie Bradley can never tear from her again.

Boone county faithful endeavor, gave a long pull and a strong pull as usual—you all know the rest.

Hoping the shadow of James B. McCreary may wave long and never grow less, I am glad.

PHILIP FALL.

High Food Value of Honey.

A single pound of well-ripened honey contains more nutriment than two pounds of pork, and more medicine than any druggist would put up for fifty cents, says the Bee Journal. Honey is one of the choicest foods for man, and not the least valuable, as it is the only food that, having undergone a chemical change in the body of the bee, can be taken directly into the system and used as a force producer without having to pass through the ordinary digestive process.

The apiary is fast being recognized as one of the sources of profit on the farm, especially with the farmer who desires to carry on a system of diversified farming. The farmer, of all people, is perhaps the least dependent upon his fellowmen, and on every fair sized farm there annually goes to waste several hundred pounds of nectar, unless he has the means of gathering and storing for the use of himself and family. It is not necessary that the farmer beekeeper become a competitor in the market with the expert bee keeper, and in most instances this would not be desirable or profitable, but the farmer should produce at least enough to supply his own table, if not more.—Kirksville Journal.

Cost of Advertising.

A single page in a single issue of the many taken for advertising purposes costs $500 in Harper's $400; in other prominent magazines from $350 down to $100. A yearly advertisement of one column in the Chicago Tribune costs $26,000; in the New York Tribune $19,000 for the lowest and $85,950 for the highest rates; in the New York Herald $36,000 for the lowest, and $349,000 for the highest priced column. These papers it is said, are never at a loss of advertising to fill their columns. These figures will doubtless be of interest to the man who invests ten dollars with the idea that he is a liberal advertiser.

We might add to this that "The Fair" Chicago's greatest department store, carried one complete section of the Chicago Examiner and the Chicago Tribune consisting of twenty full pages of advertising in each paper besides their regular Sunday advertising in the other Chicago papers last Sunday. The cost of their day's advertising was $46,000 and the management will testify that they expect and get returns for that outlay of money.—Girard Gazette.

A Big Gift.

New York, Nov. 11.—Andrew Carnegie last night announced he had given $25,000,000 to the Carnegie Corporation of New York, organized here yesterday under a charter granted by the New York Legislature last June, "to promote the advancement and diffusion of knowledge and understanding among the people of the United States."

In bestowing this gift upon the corporation organized especially to receive it and apply its income to the purpose indicated, Mr. Carnegie, in a statement given out at his home in Fifth avenue last night said, he intends to leave with the corporation body the work of founding and aiding libraries and educational institutions which he as an individual has carried on for many years.

Is the World Growing Better?

Many things go to prove that it is. The way thousands are trying to help others a proof. Among them is Mrs. W. W. Gould, of Pittsfield, N. H. Finding good health by taking Electric Bitters, she now advises other sufferers everywhere, to take them. "For years I suffered with stomach and kidney trouble," she writes. "Every medicine I used failed till I took Electric Bitters. But this great remedy helped me wonderfully." They'll help any woman. They're the best tonic and finest liver and kidney remedy that's made. Try them. You'll see. 50c at all dealers.

McCreary's majority is the largest ever given a candidate for Governor since 1875, when he defeated John M. Harlan by about 50,000.

There will be a small entertainment and a box social at the Crisler school house on Saturday night Nov. 25 for the benefit of the Orphans' Home. All are cordially invited. Ladies are expected to bring boxes.

Preparations are now under way for the inauguration of James B. McCreary as Governor of Kentucky on the 12th day of next month. It will be one of the biggest days ever witnessed in Frankfort.

Some one started the report that Judge O'Rear would resign as a Judge of the Appellate Court, which he denies. This is one instance in which the people will believe the Judge is sincere in his declaration.

Kentucky a Good Frnit State.

The Chicago Breeders Gazette, commenting on the Kentucky State Fair, says:

"Those who have raised fruit extensively in Kentucky seem to be very enthusiastic over the business. They assert that this is destined to become a noted fruit state, and certainly the long tables loaded with big perfect highly colored specimens of large and small fruits furnished convincing evidence. Last spring some orchardists used smudge pots on chilly nights; others told of effectively protecting their trees from frost by burning bundles of rye straw, starting fires with dry bundles and then adding damp ones to the piles. One man, examining the apples, told of a tree of his own that had thirteen dollars worth of apples on it two years ago, $12 worth last year and $26 this year. When one of his listeners asked him if the apple orchard really was profitable he said that its expenses were small and the income large. It cost something to spray and prune, he said, but for every day or dollar he spent at that his neighbors and their children trebled that outlay in searching for worms in their tobacco fields.

The Real Man Behind the Gun.

Ashland, Nov. 13.—Elated over their victory, such as the party had not achieved in a quarter of a century, the Democrats of Kentucky have been too busy celebrating to make close inquiry as to the men and the methods responsible in a great measure for an old time majority of approximately 35,000. But as the clouds of the political battle gradually rise from the scene of conflict the real "man behind the gun" is being revealed, and those who have been the closest observers of the fray know that it was John C. Calhoun Mayo, who marshaled the forces and directed the firing of the shot and shell into the ranks of the enemy.

With master hand this young man of the mountains, who until quite recently was never heard of in Kentucky politics, wrought overwhelming victory out of what only a few months ago seemed to be chaos within the Democratic party in the State. Many another man would have walked down to the footlights with the boast, "I did it," but Mr. Mayo has been content to pursue the same unpretentious, modest course in this campaign that has characterized him in the building up a large fortune out of the mountains of Eastern Kentucky. He, more than any one man, was responsible for encouraging Gov.-elect James B. McCreary to become a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Governor, and after the nomination was secured he felt it his duty as well as his pleasure to put his shoulder to the wheel for victory in November.

Election Bets Illegal.

In his instructions to the grand jury Judge Charles Kerr, of the Fayette Circuit asked that they make a thorough investigation as to whether or not frauds had been committed at the election last week, and that they return indictments in keeping with any evidence of a violation of the law that may have been found. He told the grand jury that there had been reports of large wagers having been made on the result of the election, and he instructed them that if they found this to be true that the money so wagered is forfeited to the commonwealth, and should be recovered for the State. Judge Kerr, in his instructions, told the grand jury that to hire a voter to go rabbit hunting or otherwise remain away from the polls on eelction day was just as much a form of bribery as is the buying of registration certificates.

Martin Runyon, who has been farming on the Big Sandy bottoms, about three miles from the city, was in town exhibiting a half bushel of cow peas that he stated he had picked from a single vine. He had counted the pods and says there were 510 of them and they averaged ten peas to the pod. The vine covered a space, the radius of which was ten feet, and the vine, including the peas, weighed 27 pounds. The vine was a volunteer, one, but he will save the peas and plant them next season believing that there is something very extraordinary about them.—Catlettsburg Tribune.

That Sudden Change.

Last Saturday night was a wild one. The wind howled, the rain descended and the snow came down in a lively way, the wind catching it up and piling it in places. The wind caused some houses and beds to rock like cradles, greatly frightening the occupants. Saturday afternoon the weather was Spring-like, thermometers registering 71 degrees. Sunday morning it was 21—a fall of 50 degrees in twelve hours; Monday morning at six o'clock the thermometers stood at 14 degrees. Such severe weather as prevailed through Sunday was very unusual for this locality so early in the season.

Had Tried in on Others.

It has been learned since the death of the negro boy from the effects of dynamite exploding in the pipe he was smoking, that, on another occasion, he and some of his companions had put the explosive in the pipe of others, but, fortunately, no one had been hurt by the explosions which were light. The dynamite in possession of the boy had been extracted from caps which he took at the creamery, and it is now believed that the hole in his side resulted from the explosion of some of the dynamite which it is said he carried in a bottle in his pocket.

Harry Shearer, Fred Bentler and several other Erlanger boys went into camp on the Hedges farm on Gunpowder, yesterday, and will remain there the balance of the week, spending their time killing, cooking and eating rabbits, quails coons, ground hogs and 'possums.

The Greater Kentucky Convention held at Louisville this week was a success in so far as attendance and the discussion of the various subjects presented were concerned, and it is hoped that good results will be manifested in all directions at an early day.

Several of the boys remained away from school to go huntiag yesterday. Thanksgiving day ought to be the first day of the hunting season, and thus farms would be overrun one instead of two days by the hunters every fall.

A heavy wind storm prevailed all over the county, last Saturday, but according to our correspondents the storm was heaviest in the Union and Petersburg precincts, where considerable damage was done to buildings.

While at the saw mill one day the past week Colonel Crisler went to step across the log carriage when he slipped and sprained one of his knees so badly that he has been scarcely able to get about since.

Business has been pretty lively up at the Sheriff's office for several days. There are only a few days more in which taxes can be paid without having the six per cent penalty added, hence the rush.

Chas. Garnett, of Kidville, was out with his wagon yesterday, to meet hunters who had rabbits for the market. He accummulated several hundred, which he will put on the market today.

The teacher and pupils of Bullittsville school will give an oyster supper at Bullittsville, on Wednesday night, Nov. 29th, 1911. Proceeds to go toward buying maps for the school.

Three Farms For Sale.

Three valuable, improved Boone county farms for sale, all adjacent, and situated about two miles from Crittenden, Grant county, and the same distance from Verona, Ky.

The most of the land is a fertile lime stone soil, lies so it can be easily cultivated, and produces large crops.

Farm No. 1 contains about thirty acres, and has a good house, a barn, crib, orchard, etc., on it. Price—thirty-five dollars per acre.

Farm No. 2 contains about seventy-five acres, and has a good five-room house on it, and good out buildings, and is offered at forty-five dollars per acre.

Farm No. 3 contains about one hundred and fifteen acres, and is improved with house, stable, crib, etc., and a large tobacco barn 90 ft. by 40 ft. by 20 ft. to the eaves, which cost about fifteen hundred dollars. This fine farm is offered for fifty-five dollars an acre.

CHAPTER X.

Back in San Francisco, Daylight quickly added to his reputation. In ways it was not an enviable reputation. Men were afraid of him. He became known as a fighter, a fiend, a tiger. His play was a ripping and smashing one, and no one knew where or how his next blow would fall. The element of surprise was large. He balked on the unexpected, and, fresh from the wild North, his mind not operating in stereotyped channels, he was able in unusual degree to devise new tricks and stratagems. And once he won the advantage, he pressed it remorselessly. "As relentless as a Red Indian," was said of him, and it was said truly.

He was a free lance, and had no friendly business associations. Such alliances as were formed from time to time were purely affairs of expediency, and he regarded his allies as men who would give him the double-cross or ruin him if a profitable chance presented. In spite of this point of view, he was faithful to his allies. But he was faithful just as long as they were and no longer. The treason had to come from them, and then it was 'Ware Daylight.

The business men and financiers of the Pacific coast never forgot the lesson of Charles Klinkner and the California & Altamont Trust Company. Klinkner was the president. In partnership with Daylight, the pair raided the San Jose Interurban. The powerful Lake Power & Electric Lighting corporation came to the rescue, and Klinkner, seeing what he thought was the opportunity, went over to the enemy in the thick of the pitched battle. Daylight lost three millions before he was done with it, and before he was done with it he saw the California & Altamont Trust Company hopelessly wrecked, and Charles Klinkner a suicide in a felon's cell.

So it was that Daylight became a successful financier. He did not go in for swindling the workers. Not only did he not have the heart for it, but it did not strike him as a sporting proposition. The workers were so easy, so stupid. It was more like slaughtering fat, hand-reared pheasants on the English preserves he had read about. The sport, to him, was in waylaying the successful robbers and taking their spoils from them. The grim Yukon life had failed to make Daylight hard. It required civilization to produce this result. In the fierce, savage game he now played, his habitual geniality imperceptibly slipped away from him, as did his lazy Western drawl.

He still had recrudescences of geniality, but they were largely periodical and forced, and they were usually due to the cocktails he took prior to mealtime. In the North he had drunk deeply and at irregular intervals; but now his drinking became systematic and disciplined. It was an unconscious development, but it was based upon physical and mental conditions. The cocktails served as an inhibition. Without reasoning or thinking about it, the strain of the office, which was essentially due to the daring and audacity of his ventures, required check or cessation; and he found, through the weeks and months, that the cocktails supplied this very thing. They constituted a stone wall. He never drank during the morning, nor in office hours; but the instant he left the office he proceeded to rear this wall of alcoholic inhibition athwart his consciousness. The office became immediately a closed affair. It ceased to exist. In the afternoon, after lunch, it lived again for one or two hours, when, leaving it, he rebuilt the wall of inhibition. Of course, there were exceptions to this; and, such was the rigor of his discipline, that if he had a dinner or a conference before him in which, in a business way, he encountered enemies or allies and planned or prosecuted campaigns, he abstained from drinking. But the instant the business was settled, his everlasting call went out for a Martini, and for a double-Martini at that, in a long glass so as not to excite comment.

Into Daylight's life came Dede Mason. She came rather imperceptibly. He had accepted her impersonally along with the office furnishing, the office boy, Morrison, the chief, confidential, and only clerk, and all the rest of the accessories of a superman's gambling place of business. Had he been asked any time during the first months she was in his employ, he would have been unable to tell the color of her eyes. From the fact that she was a demi-blonde, there resided dimly in his subconsciousness a conception that she was a brunette. Likewise he had an idea that she was not thin, while there was an absence in his mind of any idea that she was fat. And how she dressed, he had no idea at all. He had no trained eye in such matters, nor was he interested. He took it for granted, in the lack of any impression to the contrary, that she was dressed somehow. He knew her as "Miss Mason," and that was all, though he was aware that as a stenographer she was quick and accurate. He watched her leaving one afternoon, and was aware for the first time that [illegible], and that her manner of dress was satisfying. He knew none of the details of woman's dress, and he saw none of the details of her neat shirt waist and well-cut tailor suit. He saw only the effect in a general, sketchy way. She looked right. This was in the absence of anything wrong or out of the way.

"She's a trim little good-looker," was his verdict, when the outer office door closed on her.

The next morning, dictating, he concluded that he liked the way she did her hair, though for the life of him he could have given no description of it. The impression was pleasing, that was all. She sat between him and the window, and he noted that her hair was light brown, with hints of golden bronze. A pale sun, shining in, touched the golden bronze into smouldering fires that were very pleasing. He discovered that in the intervals, when she had nothing to do, she read books and magazines, or worked on some sort of feminine fancy work. Passing her desk, once, he picked up a volume of Kipling's poems and glanced bepuzzled through the pages.

"You like reading, Miss Mason?" he said, laying the book down.

"Oh, yes," was the answer; "very much."

Another time it was a book of Wells', "The Wheels of Chance."

"What's it all about?" Daylight asked.

"Oh, it's just a novel, a love-story."

She stopped, but he still stood waiting, and she felt it incumbent to go on.

"It's about a little Cockney draper's assistant, who takes a vacation on his bicycle, and falls in with a young girl very much above him. Her mother is a popular writer and all that. And the situation is very curious, and sad, too, and tragic. Would you care to read it?"

"Does he get her?" Daylight demanded.

"No; that's the point of it. He wasn't—"

"And he doesn't get her, and you've read all them pages, hundreds of them, to find that out?" Daylight muttered in amazement.

Miss Mason was nettled as well as amused.

"But you read the mining and financial news by the hour," she retorted.

"But I sure get something out of that. It's business, and it's different. I get money out of it. What do you get out of books?"

The Cocktails Served as an Inhibition.

"Points of view, new ideas, life."

"Not worth a cent cash."

"But life's worth more than cash," she argued.

"Oh, well," he said, with easy masculine tolerance, "so long as you enjoy it. That's what counts, I suppose; and there's no accounting for taste."

Despite his own superior point of view, he had an idea that she knew a lot, and he experienced a fleeting feeling like that of a barbarian face to face with the evidence of some tremendous culture. To Daylight culture was a worthless thing, and yet, somehow, he was vaguely troubled by a sense that there was more in culture than he imagined.

Again, on her desk, in passing, he noticed a book with which he was familiar. This time he did not stop, for he had recognized the cover. It was a magazine correspondent's book on the Klondike, and he knew that he and his photograph figured in it, and he knew, also, of a certain sensational chapter concerned with a woman's suicide, and with one "Too Much Daylight." After that he did not talk with her again about books. He imagined what erroneous conclusions she had drawn from that particular chapter, and it stung him the more in that they were undeserved. He pumped Morrison, the clerk, who had first to vent his personal grievance against Miss Mason before he could tell what little he knew of her.

"She comes from Siskiyou County. She's very nice to work with in the office, of course, but she's rather stuck on herself—exclusive, you know."

"How do you make that out?" Daylight queried.

"Well, she thinks too much of herself to associate with those she works with, in the office here, for instance. She won't have anything to do with a fellow, you see. I've asked her out repeatedly, to the theater and the chutes and such things. But nothing doing. Says she likes plenty of sleep, and can't stay up late, and has to go all the way to Berkeley—that's where she lives. But that's all hot air. She's running with the University boys, that's what she's doing. She needs lots of sleep, and can't go to the theater with me, but she can dance all hours with them. I've heard it pretty straight that she goes to all their hops and such things. Rather stylish and high-toned for a stenographer, I'd say. And she keeps a horse, too. She rides astride all over those hills out there. I saw her one Sunday myself. Oh, she's a high-flyer, and I wonder how she does it. Sixty-five a month don't go far. Then she has a sick brother, too."

"Live with her people?" Daylight asked.

"No; hasn't got any. They were well to do, I've heard. They must have been, or that brother or hers couldn't have gone to the University of California. Her father had a big cattle-ranch, but he got to fooling with mines or something, and went broke before he died. Her mother died long before that. Her brother must cost a lot of money. He was a husky once, played football, was great on hunting and being out in the mountains and such things. He got his accident breaking horses, and then rheumatism or something got into him. One leg is shorter than the other, and withered up some. He has to walk on crutches. I saw her out with him once—crossing the ferry. The doctors have been experimenting on him for years, and he's in the French Hospital now, I think."

All of which side-lights on Miss Mason went to increase Daylight's interest in her. Yet, much as he desired, he failed to get acquainted with her. He had thoughts of asking her to luncheon, but his was the innate chivalry of the frontiersman, and the thoughts never came to anything. He knew a self-respecting, square-dealing man was not supposed to take his stenographer to luncheon. Such things did happen, he knew, for he heard the chaffing gossip of the club; but he did not think much of such men and felt sorry for the girls.

Saved Child From Death.

"After our child had suffered from severe bronchial trouble for a year," wrote G. T. Richardson, of Richardson's Miffs, Ala., we feared it had consumption. It had a bad cough all the time. We tried many remedies without avail, and doctor's medicine seemed as useless. Finally we tried Dr. King's New Discovery, and are pleased to say that one bottle effected a complete cure, and our child is again strong and healthy." For coughs, colds, hoarseness croup lagrippe, asthma and sore lungs, its the most infallible remedy that's made. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all dealers.

It is the general opinion that there will be a large quantity of very mean tobacco in the 1911 crop. Some of this year's crop has been put on the market, the prices not going much above 5 cents a pound because of the inferior quality.

The Thornless Blackberry.

There is no rose without its thorns, but those who are ultra-optimistic may hope that some time in the far distant future there will be a blackberry without its briers. Mr. Luther Burbank has made the important announcement that he has evolved a thornless blackberry bush.

Mr. Burbank has been experimenting for the last ten years in this particular line of plant wizardry. He claims that he has produced a blackberry bush the branches of which are smooth as those of a willow tree. The fruit, he asserts, has suffered no deterioration in consequence and the blackberries produced on the smooth, willow-like bush are as luscious as the old-time kind, which must be plucked with care to avoid "stickers."

The world probably will hail the thornless blackberry with a fitting degree of enthusiasm. Nevertheless, we shall continue to have with us the old-fashioned old field blackberry with its panoply of thorns, and in the future as in the past the great common people will have to wrestle valiantly with its briars in order to secure the same material for cordial and for jam. For the old-fashioned blackberry, as we know it here in Kentucky, for instance, need not be expected to shed its thorns in deference to any vegetal act of legerdemain that may have been performed by Mr. Burbank in his rose-bowered domain in California. It can no more do so than the leopard can change his spots, for the old-fashioned blackberry is the same yesterday, to-day and forever. It will continue to do business at the old stand, and while Mr. Burbank may succeed in making a smoother bush, it is not likely that he will ever make a better berry.—Courier-Journal.

A Burglar's Awful Deed

may not paralyze a home so completely as a mother's long illness. But Dr. King's New Life Pills are a splendid remedy for women. "They gave me wonderful benefit in constipation and female trouble," wrote Mrs. M. C. Dunlap, of Leadill, Tenn. If ailing try them. 25c at all dealers.

Cockerels five months old may be looked upon as having attained their growth, or, at least having sufficiently approximated maturity to be ready for the fattening crate; and these, with hens one year old and upward, and old roosters, may be expected to fatten in from ten days to two weeks.

CAUSE AND REMEDY.

Uncertainty of the immediate future is looked upon by many men of affairs, as a blockade to enterprise and business prosperity, and this blockade is now quite apparent throughout the channels of trade.

The Presidential Election; the efforts of Congress with no fixed purpose; Organized Labor as a new factor in politics; together with other matters of greater or less import, represent at this time a chaotic conflict of separate interests, to harmonize which is now the problem before the country.

All want Prosperity, Peace and Plenty. Read with care the Cincinnati Enquirer, a journal that prints all the news each day from every commercial center throughout the world. A barometer of causes and effects that points out, as a Beacon Light, the danger and the safeguard therefrom.

As well known, the Daily Enquirer is the largest in size and highest priced paper in the United States, yet cheapest, measured by quality and quantity.

The Weekly Enquirer, with the cream and digest of all the news, able and conservative editorials, market reports, methods and results from Government and State Experiment Stations, veterinary matters, People's Forum, choice literature, short and continued stories, non-sectarian sermons, general information, etc., with the exclusion of all matters of scandal and immorality, is today the Cleanest Weekly Family Journal obtainable. Each issue is alone worth the price of a year's subscription.

Solicitors for subscriptions make a handsome profit and increase the good influence of The Enquirer in the uplift of morality and industry, and for the betterment and welfare of the community. For terms write to The Enquirer, Cincinnati, Ohio.

SOME EXPRESSIONS.

Beaten to a frazzle.—Flemingsburg Gazette, Rep.

We have met the enemy and we are "theirs."—Harrodsburg Republican.

"Where was you when the storm passed over?"—Glasgow Republican.

Kentucky has gone back into the Democratic column.—Maysville Public Ledger, Rep.

The First district has earned the right to the name of the Gibraltar.—Paducah News-Democrat.

As the late Admiral Schley said: "There is glory enough for us all."—Fulton Leader.

Yes, indeed, the rooster was certainly on his job all right in Kentucky.—Owensboro Inquirer.

All aboard for salt River. The boats are blowing the whistles. Good-bye!—Maysville Independent.

Was it a landslide in Kentucky? We think you will have to coin another word for it.—Paducah Sun, Republican.

This is the great signal wave that has started for the election of a Democratic President next year.—Morganfield Post.

The Democratic party in Kentucky is apparently united again for the first time since 1895.—Hopkinsville Kentuckian.

If any of 'em did their whole duty better than Boyle county, history fails to give an account of it.—Danville Advocate.

Mason county "did herself proud," giving a larger Democratic majority than for many years in a State election.—Maysville Bulletin.

"The sun shines bright on our old Kentucky Home." Kentucky was handed back into the hands of the party to whom she belongs.—Henderson Gleaner.

In the election Tuesday the Kentucky Democracy swept the State like a mad cyclone—like a blase of fire and a wave of water, and a sheet of light.—Hodgenville Herald.

We do not believe in whinning over defeat. We made the best fight that we could, and lost. We accept the result and are willing and ready to do all that we can to promote the welfare of the State.—Winchester Sun-Sentinel, Rep.

Won't be very long before the lawyers will begin to read something like this in the papers: "Smith against Jones; Davies; affirmed. Judge O'Rear delivering the opinion of the court."—Owensboro Messenger.

The Democrats again have things their own way in old Kentucky—the State has returned to her own. The majority makes a noise like twenty years ago, the shouting is deafening.—Milton News.

The returns from the election Tuesday have about all landed and show that Judge O'Rear's party had no faith in him. The Democrats made gains in every district. Louisville always more or less uncertain, gave McCreary and the ticket, 5000 majority. Judge O'Rear lost 20 per. cent of the registered Republican vote in the mountains. Owen county gave McCreary about 1800 majority.—Owen County Democrat.

With the kindliest feelings toward our Republican friends we can say that they nominated the most dangerous man in their party. He has proved himself the greatest of American demagogues. His demagogy did not take as he supposed it would; as it had done for predecessors who had adopted the same line of campaigning. He was insincere and dangerous; the people saw it, and he gets his just deserts.—Carrollton News.

The people have spoken trumpet-tongued, and Kentucky is redeemed from Republican misrule. The glad tidings have been wafted from the Big Sandy to Mills Point and from the Ohio river to the Tennessee line; it was a hard fought battle and the majority for the Democrats is greater than was anticipated by its most sanguine friends. "Ring the bell softly, there is crape on the door on every log cabin in Kentucky.—Georgetown Times.

The result of the election in Kentucky Tuesday proves beyond any question that under normal conditions the State is strongly a Democratic State. With both platforms almost identical on state issues it gave to the voters of Kentucky a splendid opportunity to cast their votes in keeping with their political preference and belief, resulting in a majority of Democracy of more than 30,000 votes.

However, with this great victory for the Democrats comes also big responsibilities to the party. But with Governor McCreary as the State's Chief Executive and the minor offices filled with honest, intelligent and capable men, and with both branches of the legislature largely Democratic, we are satisfied that every pledge and principle educated in the party's platform will be fulfilled to the letter, so that never again will the voters of Kentucky be deluded into taking Republican medicine for their political ills.—Georgetown News.

Of course after such a victory it is easy for the winning side to say what it would have done looking at it calmly it would seem that the independent voters who now hold the balance of power in the State, had much to do with the result.

Judge O'Rear went into the campaign handicapped. He had not the backing of the administration. Then too his party was split into factions thruout the entire State.

The Judge's assumption of dictatorship was not pleasing to his party managers and they gave him only half support.

One of the main things entering into his defeat was his endorsement of Bradley. That alone we believe, lost him many thousands of votes.

His alliance with distiller McCullough did not look good to the temperance people, for whose vote he made a special bid.

Another element that went into his loss was his retaining his seat as Judge and drawing his salary just as though he were serving.

Then too the sorry record made by Wilson's administration helped McCreary largely.

Judge O'Rear can now go back to his duties on the bench, where he has made a good record, and where he holds the respect of all those who have business with that court. The people saw in him a much better judge than governor.

Governor McCreary is undoubtedly the most popular leader in his party, and he how has an opportunity to round out his life and career with a splendid record as chief executive of the best state of them all.

Gov. McCreary and the rest of the excellent ticket here's looking to you. The State and the Democratic party expects you to redeem every pledge and promise made. We believe you will do it. —Midway Clipper.

Miss Sallie Berkshire.

Miss Sallie Berkshire, aged 60 years and eight months, died Oct. 17th, 1911. She was of the household of Wm. C., and Sarah J. Berkshire, whom, with Robert Livingston, Mary A., Antonia Elia and Ida preceded her to the grave. Her suffering was great, in many years, but she had hope of a happier state than the earth life, having learned of the Savior in her youth, obeyed Him in baptism and kept the faith. Her late home was with Nannie, in Petersburg, Ky., wheace she passed out, leaving her and their sister, Pauline, to mourn heavier loss, Ella and Ida having gone before her only a few months —March 17th and August 11, 1911. They sorrow not as those who have no hope, knowing that they are blessed which die in the Lord. May He sustain and comfort them and all who mourn with them.

Come to Covington as Often As You Like
We'll Pay Your Railroad Fare in Cash or
We'll Pay You 3c A Mile If You Drive In.

OUR PROPOSTION:

We will refund Railroad fares, Trolly Car fares and Steam Boat fares, or will allow three cents per mile for persons driving into Covington and purchasing goods from any or all of the stores of the members of the Retail Merchants Association of the Industrial Club of Covington, on a basis of one mile for each dollar's worth of goods purchased.

To illustrate:—If you travel, say ten miles, you would be required to purchase at least $20.00 worth of goods in order to have your entire Railroad fare refunded, you having traveled ten miles each way, making a total of twenty miles.

If your total purchase amounts to a less number of dollars than the number of miles you travel, we will refund as many miles of your fare as the number of dollars you spend with members of our Association.

On the other hand: if you spend a greater number of dollars than miles you travel, in addition to your entire fare or mileage, we will refund one per cent on the purchase you make in excess of the amount necessary to secure the refund of your fare.

By this plan you not only have your Railroad fare or mileage paid, but you can take advantage of the many Special Sales that the members of our Association continually offer.

Covington merchandise has a State-wide reputation for excellence and up to-dateness---Covington values are always a bit better than most people expect—Covington prices are always a shade lower. And there is a reason for these better values and lower prices. Come to Covington and see.

We are members of the Retail Merchants Association of Covington, and will rebate fares on the plan as outlined above.

Daniel E. Dudley, one of our esteemed citizens, residing near Walton received the sad information last week of the death of his brother Geo. P. Dudley, who died at his home near Flemingsburg, Ky., Nov. 3d, from kidney and stomach trouble. Mr. Dudley was fifty years old and was born and reared in Fleming county, and spent most of his life on the farm. He was very highly esteemed for his many goodqualities intelligence and integrity, and was county clerk of Fleming county one term. He leaves a widow and two grown sons, one sister Mrs. Mary Darnall of Fleming county, and two brothers D. E. Dudley of Kenton county, and W. K. Dudley of Pueblo, Colo. The Kentucky relatives attended the funeral at Flemingsburg, Nov. 5th.

The funeral of Miss Adah Lermond was held Oct. 10th, 1911, at the Chapel of the Hollywood cemtery, Los. Angeles, California, where interment took place, the services being conducted by Rev. Trundle of the Highland Park Christian church. A quartet sang some beautiful and appropriate hymns. Many beautiful floral pieces attested the affection and esteem in which she was held by her Los Angeles friends. She was born and raised in Walton and lived in Kentucky until four years ago, when her health began to fail and the family went west in the hope of restoring her. Her last illness covered a period of about four months, during which time she suffered very greatly. Medical aid and the most careful nursing availed not to help her, and on Saturday, Oct. 7th, at 7:30 p. m., she passed to the Great Beyond. She is survived by her mother, Mrs. Emma Lermond, and sister, Effie, who still live in Los Angeles.

Last Saturday Joseph Kaub met with a very serious loss in the destruction by fire of his residence and the new home he was building in Kenton county. The fire started from a defective flue in the old house which he and his family were occupying, pending the completion of the new building. The fire was not discovered until it had gained considerable headway, and a strong wind blowing soon got the flames beyond control and both buildings were burned to ashes. Mr. Kaub has the sympathy of everybody in his severe loss, as he is one of the best citizens of Kenton county, and a liberal public spirited man, who, by his industry and perseverance accummulated what he has, and at this time of his life the blow falls heavily on him and his family. Mr. Kaub had the old house insured in the Kenton County Farmers Insurance Co., covering about one third of the loss on the old property.

We do not believe that the negro population in Kentucky has decreased by the fewer number of births or the greater number of deaths, in proportion to the number of negroes living in the State. The decrease was caused by the great number of negroes that have left the State. If this continues it will materially affect the supply of laborers. There is no question but that the negro is a factor in the labor question, and if the negroes should continue to leave the State it is only a question of time when labor will not be sufficient to handle the crops. The question is of sufficient importance to call for careful consideration.—Winchester News.

The ballot boxes for Hogwallow and vicinity being in use at present for something else the voters voted in the State election Tuesday by holding up their hands. When the count was over it was at once seen that McCreary would be elected by an overwhelming majority, everybody voting for him except the postmaster, who had a reasonable excuse.—Hogwallow Kentuckian.

Kentucky is ahead again. She not only took the premium on her Guernsey and Jersey cattle exhibited at the recent international livestock show at Chicago, but her team of livestock judges from her State College at Lexington was awarded a premium as the best team of judges. Kentucky is an all-around State if anybody asks you.

The air serpent has been discovered by an aeronaut whom it attacked. It is described by its terrified victim as a long, green monster, with huge wings. After this the sea serpent will seem but a mild domestic pet. Another suggestion of the discovery will be for airships to have water wagon attachments by way of precaution.

Demand for Good Draft Horses.

There has been a pretty constant demand for the best high grade draft horse in all the markets, and the demand does not seem to be supplied yet. One of our live stock Chicago exchanges, the Live Stock World, says that draft horses are sold in Chicago as high as $300 and $500 per head at present with not enough to supply a small part of the demand and the market is inundated with nondescripts that can hardly be sold at any price, and that users of good horses are discouraged and literally driven into the consideration of mechanical means of escape. It isn't altogether the high cost of good, properly bred horses to do the work—it is, first of all, the impossibility of getting a sufficient supply at any price. When large mercantils or manufacturing concerns find it necessary to pay $700 and $1,000 per pair for horses as good as they want and then see that they have difficulty in keeping supplied even at these abnormal figures they are simply forced to consider other means of relief. The long and the short of it is that it costs but little more to breed and raise good horses than it does scrubs, and the raising of scrubs can only lead to loss for all concerned.

Yesterday was a splendid day for inaugurating the hunting season, and the hunters went forth in great numbers in two's, threes, half dozens and battallions. Wagons, loaded with men, guns and dogs started at an early hour and many were afield by the time it was light enough to see a rabbit at a distance of twenty paces. A tremendous fusillade was kept up all day, and at dark yesterday the farmers who had no stock shot up was congratulating himself. It was a big day for the owners of guns and hunting dogs.

Caused From Worry and Grief.

This community was very much shocked last Saturday afternoon about 2 o'clock, when it was learned that Mrs. Geo. Blyth had attempted to end her life. The unfortunate lady had been very nervous and unable to sleep since her daughter, Mrs. Craig Baldon, left to return to her home in Colorado, the first of the week, and the worry and grief over the parting caused her to become nervous and despondent, and when her husband came over to town to mail a letter for her she secured a razor and cut her throat, nearly severing her wind pipe. Drs. Duncan and Peddicord and many friends were soon at the home doing everything that could be done. At present she is doing as well as the doctors could wish for. Mrs. Baldon and husband who were notified by telegram Saturday night, arrived here yesterday.

Mrs. Blyth is one of the most highly esteemed ladies in this community, and all hope she may soon recover.

THE SOUTH'S PROSPERITY.

Land Increasing in Value—Manufacturing Interests Booming.

There is so much to note as to the rapid growth and development of the South and its business interests that it is impossible for a journal to more than touch the largest activities and the most important movements in that section.

The agricultural lands of the South are rising in values with unprecedented celerity, and West era as well as Eastern capital is being invested wherever large tracts can be found.

The prices being paid now are many times above those of twenty or even ten years ago, and the proved revenues to be derived from the cultivation of Southern lands amply justify the latest advances.

The immense areas of swamp lands which are now being drained and rendered available for producing purposes are adding millions of dollars to the land values of the South, and once under cultivation they will contribute annually millions to the local and to national wealth.

The products of the soil of the Southern States will continue to be the greatest source of the South's prosperity, but manufacturing interests are booming thruout her territory and transportation interests upon land and upon water are making splendid progress.

Nearly every mail that arrives from Europe brings news of preparation by the business men of that continent to engage most actively in the development of the countries to the south of us and to avail themselves of the opportunities offered by the improving condition of our own Gulf States.

Steamships are being constructed by every maritime nation to be utilized in commerce through the Panama Canal, and England, France and Germany are all placing additional vessels in the trade between Mexican, Central American and West Indian ports and their own harbors.

The tramp steamers of the world have found full cargoes for months past at our cotton ports, and the millions of bales of the fleecy fiber which we have exported has given these craft a great season of profit.

During the three thousand years last past the Mediterranean has borne upon her billows the vessels of every nation that has engaged in commerce to any large extent, but for the next three thousand years the Gulf of Mexico and its extension, the Caribbean Sea, will break all the records of the Mediterranean as to vessels, tonnage and values in the past or in the future.

Tyre, Egypt, Greece and Rome combined, taken in their years of maximmm commercial activity, would be far surpassed in number of vessels, tonnage and cargo values by the commerce of the single port of Galveston.

The South has but commenced her career of prosperity, and 25 years will not run by until her trade, her progress in agriculture, manufacturing and commerce will make her the wonder of the world and the magnet for the energetic fortune seekers of the globe. —Cincinnati Enquirer.

Must Do Their Duty.

The Democratic legislators, who are in great majority, will have a tremendous responsibility resting on them when they begin their labors in next January. Upon them the people of the State who have just swept them into power, will depend for carrying out the policies outlined in the platform.

The people are not in a mood to put up with any double-dealing, and if the legislators want the Democratic party to remain in power in Kentucky they had as well realize that fact The platform is clear and specific in its declarations, and there is no room for tergiversation Some of the legislators may think the platform was made simply for them to run on, and now that they are in they can do as they please, regardless of the wishes of the people If they want Kentucky to give her vote to the Democratic nominee in the Presidential campaign next year they must not lose sight of their pledges

The independent voters, who say nothing, but vote as they think right, are the ones who brought about the recent landslide They are just as liable to vote for one party as another, and they will not hesitate to desert that political organization that plays fast and loose with them We present this humble advice to our party leaders, with the hope that they will not forget their promises—Blue Grass Clipper

ARE THEY AFRAID?

Observe the plumb bob on rear of the Tubular frame. It makes leveling quick, easy, accurate —enables you to keep the Tubular level and get the best work out of it.

There are, in this neighborhood agents for several "bucket bowl" cream separators. "Bucket bowl" separators are the kind with wide mouth bowls, full of parts, set on top of their spindles. These agents say, to the farmers intending to buy a separator. "Look out for the Tubular," or "Don't try the Tubular," or "Beware of the Tubular." To hear them talk you would guess right away that is the best cream separator made, and that these "bucket bowl" fellows are afraid of it. And they are afraid of it. The Tubular surpasses every other separator in every particular, and you should take mighty good care you do see a Tubular before you buy a separator. We will be pleased to show you the latest Tubular and give you an illustrated catalog.

List of Dynamite Expelled.

Owensboro, Ky., Nov. 17.—The bonded warehouse of the Daviess County Distilling Company, containing 12,000 barrels of whisky, was destroyed late this afternoon. The loss is a half million, partially covered by insurance.

The origin of the fire is a mystery. It was discovered in the center of the building, but it had gained such headway that it was impossible to check the flames.

The efforts of the firemen and volunteers were exerted in saving an adjoining warehouse, which contained 15,000 barrels of whisky. In this they were successful, but not until a number of men were almost prostrated from the burning whisky which ran in pools about them.

The scene on the river was a spectacular one. Hundreds of men and boys grabbed bottles of whisky, and many of them drank freely.

Granted Pardons.

Frankfort, Nov. 16.—Chas. Cooper, of Bell County, and Elijah Blanton, of Hardin county, life convicts in the penitentiary here for murder, were pardoned today by Governor Wilson. The cases have been before Governor Wilson since he came into office, and he says he thinks the men have been punished sufficiently for the crimes committed, which it is alleged, were in self-defense.

Cooper is given absolute pardon, but Blanton's pardon is conditional on his good behavior.

Talking Traction Again.

Raymond S. Zeither, the railroad promoter, is still here and expresses himself as being more than pleased at the prospect of building an interurban line to connect this city and Aurora. As stated last week, Mr. Zeither asks that $10,000 worth of stock be taken by local investors. Of this amount $3,000 has been subscribed and all indications warrant the belief that the full amount will be subscribed, and speedily, too.—Rising Sun Local.

Mr. Weber is of the opinion that growing alfalfa is more profitable than wheat.—Lawrenceburg Register.

Teachers Meeting.

The Teachers' Association held at Hebron last Saturday was conducted as a sort of informal, round table discussion. Real conditions in the schools were brought up and discussed with profit to all who were present. Several patrons were present but it is to be wished that many more would attend these meetings.

Devotional exercises were conducted by Supt. Riley.

In a talk on The Recitation, Miss Estelle Huey emphasized the need of supplementary work and previous preparation on the part of the teacher and the desirability of the pupils doing the greater part of the talking. The subject was amplified by suggestions and personal experiences by Prof. Harrison, Prof. Dix and Supt. Riley. Mr. Riley said the teachers should not receive full salary for half hearted work.

Miss Edna Riley gave a good talk on Singing, Drawing and Nature Study. These may be used with profit by any teacher.

Miss Hempfling read an excellent paper on Local Geography, showing how that pupils are interested by the method of progressing from the known to the unknown. After the reading of this paper, Mr. Riley drew a map of Boone county, locating towns and physical features. This was interesting as showing how local geography may be taught.

Miss Hood had a good paper on Language, explaining the use of Pictures, Dramatizing, drawing and Stories.

Prof. Harrison advocated criticising the daily speech of pupils and teacher in order to promote the use of good English.

Mrs. Hogan gave some ways and means of making the school room attractive. She emphasized cleanliness as the first essential after which she would introduce decorations, pictures, etc.

Prof. Dix spoke on the Teachers from an Intellectual, Moral and Physical point of view.

Supt. Riley showed that future good government depends upon the education of the rising generation.

A general discussion followed, conducted by Prof. Harrison, chairman of the meeting.

As Messrs. Stanley Eddins and Howard Kirkpatrick were returning from Rabbit Hash, last Sunday about dark, a loose horse in a field at the road side at Mrs. Laura Clore's, began running, causing their horse to become unmanageable and upset their buggy, breaking the vehicle and throwing the occupants out, but, fortunately, neither of them was hurt. Jesse Kelly, who lives with his sister, Mrs. Clore, came to the assistance of the young men, and, good Samaritan-like, took them in and ministered to their needs until next morning when the buggy was repaired as best it could be and the boys came on home. The boys are loud in the praise of the hospitality extended them at Mrs. Clore's.

The sale of two tobacco pools aggregating 29,000,000 pounds of the weed for a consideration of $2,500,000, is calculated to distribute considerable prosperity throughout the Green River section. The prices are said to be the highest ever received for tobacco grown in the district, and the money will go to growers in the counties of Daviess, McLean, Hancock and Ohio, with a liberal portion for the tobacco raisers of Spencer county, Ind. Most of the pooled product, as might have been expected, is [illegible] the American Tobacco Company.

Cincinnati is suffering from an overflow of apples from Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, Illinois and New York. The Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton railroad announced recently that it might declare a halt on further shipments. The shipments for one day last week were 80 car loads, and reports came from Ivorydale yards that many cars were there awaiting an opening to reach the local market, but most of them rotted before they reached the market.

Large numbers of influentidl farmers, of Elbert county, Georgia, are making great preparations for the coming of the boll weevil. They are going into the cattle business on a big scale and are purchasing Tennessee steers for the purpose of fattening them and selling to butchers and packers in the large cities. The main thing the cattle are wanted for is the fertilizer with which to permanently improve the soil.

At a meeting of the State Fair Board in Louisville, last week, it was decided to ask the General Assembly when it convenes in January to appropriate two hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars for the betterment of the Kentucky State Fair. Since the establishment of the State Fair $207,000 has been expended on its maintenance. Of this amount only $40,000 was appropriated by the State.

Editors of Kentucky newspapers are bemoaning the fact that they have to go to work now that the "canned" editorials will no longer be supplied by the campaign headquarters.—Frankfort Journal.

Edgar Riley and Elmer Kirkpatrick, who are cultivating the Henry Terrill farm below Petersburg, took forty five hogs to market a few days since, for which they got the top of the market.

Mr. Bryan says the Democratic party has no presidential timber that suits him better than Ollie James. What has come over Mr. Bryan's dreams?

Greater Kentucky.

The Greater Kentucky Convention held at Louisville the first three days of last week was one of the greatest gatherings for the betterment of Kentucky ever held in the State. The attendance was not so large, though every section of the State was represented, but those present seemed to be there with a determined purpose, and that was the uplifting and advancement of the State along the lines of progress, development, and better general conditions that would stimulate the residents of the State to put forth their best efforts in every walk of life and thus invite the attention of the best citizenship, and capital, to come into the State and participate in the development of the great natural resources with which Kentucky is endowed. The speakers at this convention seemed to be alive to the demands of the State toward better and more prosperous conditions, and all of the ideas and suggestions advanced were along practical lines and easy of accomplishment, requiring only a united effort on the part of the people. Gov. Wilson presided at the opening session Senator W. O. Bradley followed at the next session, and Governor-elect Jas. B. McCreary officiated as chairman on Wednesday. All made fine public spirited addresses, and Gov. McCreary promised his best efforts toward upbuilding the State when he took the reins of government in hand. There were so many good features presented in the three day's session that it would require a large volume to properly tell them, but epitomized, the features embraced chiefly good schools, and roads, practical education in industrial lines, greater publicity as to what Kentucky possesses inmuperior attractive qualities for the home seeker, the investor, and those who with the classification of good citizenship want to come into a State with the greatest natural resources of any in the Union. Liberality along all lines was counseled and advised, and that all should be stimulated with the highest patriotism to bring the State to the standard where it properly belongs. The entire convention was in the most perfect harmony in every way except the threshing out of the ideas to reach practical conclusions. The best people of the State were in attendance, representing every class, and particularly the agricultural class. There was much good seed sown, and it looks as if there is to be a brighter day for Kentucky. The Louisville Convention and Publicity Association cared for the visitors in a most hospitable manner, entertaining with a fine lunch eon at the Galt House where the meetings were held every day and closing the exercises with a splendid banquet. Such a convention should be held every year as it would mean much for the progress of the State. The credit for much of the success of the convention should be given Geo. H. Cox, of Owensboro, and J. W. Porter of Lexington, Joint Chairman, and B. B. Goode of Louisville, the efficient Secretary. Gallatin and Boone counties were represented by D. B. Wallace.

NOTICE—The teachers of the Florence and neighboring schools have postponed the date of the Association Meeting from Dec. 2 to Jan. 6th, 1912. This change was made on account of the date conflicting with Thanksgiving, as teachers will dismiss on Wednesday until the following Monday, and, no doubt, it would cause no little inconvenience to be present.

Chairman.

CHAPTER XI.

Daylight was in the thick of his spectacular and intensely bitter fight with the Coastwise Steam Navigation Company, and the Hawaiian, Nicaraguan, and Pacific-Mexican Steamship Company. He stirred up a bigger muss than he had anticipated, and even he was astounded at the wide ramifications of the struggle and at the unexpected and incongruous interests that were drawn into it. Every newspaper in San Francisco turned upon him. It was true, one or two of them had first intimated that they were open to subsidization, but Daylight's judgment was that the situation did not warrant such expenditure. Up to this time the press had been amusingly tolerant and good-naturedly sensational about him, but now he was to learn what virulent scurrilousness an antagonized press was capable of. Every episode of his life was resurrected to serve as foundations for malicious fabrications. Daylight was frankly amazed at the new interpretation put upon all that he had accomplished and the deeds he had done. From an Alaskan hero he was metamorphosed into an Alaskan bully, liar, desperado, and all-around "bad man." The whole affair sank to the deeper deeps of rancor and savageness. The poor woman who had killed herself was dragged out of her grave and paraded on thousands of reams of paper as a martyr and a victim to Daylight's ferocious brutality.

He was like a big bear raiding a bee-hive, and, regardless of the stings, he obstinately persisted in pawing for the honey. He gritted his teeth and struck back. Beginning with a raid on two steamship companies, it developed into a pitched battle with a city, state and continental coast line. Allied with him, on a splendid salary, with princely pickings thrown in, was a lawyer, Larry Hegan, a young Irishman with a reputation to make, and whose peculiar genius had been unrecognized until Daylight had picked up with him. It was Hegan who guided Daylight through the intricacies of modern politics, labor organization, and commercial and corporation law. It was Hegan, prolific of resource and suggestion, who opened Daylight's eyes to undreamed-of possibilities in twentieth-century warfare; and it was Daylight, rejecting, accepting, and elaborating, who planned the campaigns and prosecuted them. With the Pacific coast, from Puget Sound to Panama, buzzing and humming, and with San Francisco furiously about his ears, the two big steamship companies had all the appearance of winning. It looked as if Burning Daylight was being beaten slowly to his knees. And then he struck—at the steamship companies, at San Francisco, at the whole Pacific coast.

It was not much of a blow at first. A Christian Endeavor convention was being held in San Francisco, a row was started by Express Drivers' Union No. 927 over the handling of a small heap of baggage at Ferry Building. A few heads were broken, a score of arrests made, and the baggage was delivered. No one would have guessed that behind this petty wrangle was the fine Irish hand of Hegan, made potent by the Klondike gold of Burning Daylight. It was an insignificant affair at best—or so it seemed. But the Teamsters' Union took up the quarrel, backed by the whole Water Front Federation. Step by step, the strike became involved. A refusal of cooks and waiters to serve scab teamsters or teamsters' employers brought out the cooks and waiters. The butchers and meat cutters refused to handle meat destined for unfair restaurants. The combined Employers' Associations put up a solid front, and found facing them the 40,000 organized laborers of San Francisco. The restaurant bakers and the bakery wagon drivers struck, followed by the milkers, milk drivers and chicken pickers. The building trades asserted its position in unambiguous terms, and all San Francisco was in turmoil.

But still, it was only San Francisco. Hegan's intrigues were masterly, and Daylight's campaign steadily developed. The powerful fighting organization known as the Pacific Slope Seaman's Union refused to work vessels the cargoes of which were to be handled by scab longshoremen and freight handlers. The union presented its ultimatum, and then called a strike. This had been Daylight's objective all the time. Every incoming coastwise vessel was boarded by the union officials and its crew sent ashore. And with the seamen went the firemen, the engineers and the sea cooks and waiters. Daily the number of idle steamers increased. It was impossible to get scab crews, for the men of the Seamen's Union were fighters trained in the hard school of the sea, and when they went out it meant blood and death to scabs. This phase of the strike spread up and down the entire Pacific coast, until all the ports were filled with idle ships, and sea transportation was at a standstill. The days and weeks dragged out, and the strike held. The Coastwise Steam Navigation Company and the Hawaiian, Nicaraguan, and Pacific-Mexican Steamship Company were tied up completely. The expenses of combating the strike were tremendous, and they were earning nothing, while daily the situation went from bad to worse, until "peace at any price" became the cry. And still there was no peace, until Daylight and his allies played out their hand, raked in the winnings, and allowed a goodly portion of a continent to resume business.

Daylight's coming to civilization had not improved him. True, he wore better clothes, had learned slightly better manners, and spoke better English. But he had hardened, and at the expense of his old-time, whole-souled geniality. Even his human affiliations were descending. Playing a lone hand, contemptuous of most of the men with whom he played, lacking in sympathy or understanding of them, and certainly independent of them, he found little in common with those to be encountered, say at the Alta-Pacific. In point of fact, when the battle with the steamship companies was at its height and his raid was inflicting incalculable damage on all business interests, he had been asked to resign from the Alta-Pacific. The idea had been rather to his liking, and he had found new quarters in clubs like the Riverside, organized and practically maintained by the city bosses.

One week-end, feeling heavy and depressed and tired of the city and its ways, he obeyed the impulse of a whim that was later to play an important part in his life. The desire to get out of the city for a whiff of country air and for a change of scene was the cause. Yet, to himself, he made the excuse of going to Glen Ellen for the purpose of inspecting a brickyard which Holdsworthy had sold him. He spent the night in the little country hotel, and on Sunday morning, astride a saddle horse rented from the Glen Ellen butcher, rode out of the village. The brickyard was close at hand on the flat beside the Sonoma Creek.

Resolving to have his fun first, and to look over the brickyard afterward, he rode up the hill, prospecting for a way cross country to get to the knolls. He left the country road at the first gate he came to and cantered through a hayfield. The grain was waist-high on either side the wagon-road, and he sniffed the warm aroma of it with delighted nostrils. At the base of the knolls he encountered a tumble-down stake-and-rider fence.

He tethered the horse and wandered on foot among the knolls. Their tops were crowned with century-old spruce trees, and their sides clothed with oaks and madrones and native holly. But to the perfect redwoods belonged the small but deep canyon that threaded its way among the knolls. Here he found no passage out for his horse, and leading the animal, he forced his way up the hillside. On the crest he came through an amazing thicket of velvet-trunked young madrones, and emerged on an open hillside that led down into a tiny valley. The sunshine was at first dazzling in its brightness, and he paused and rested, for he was panting from the exertion. Not of old had he known shortness of breath such as this, and muscles that so easily tired at a stiff climb. A tiny stream ran down the tiny valley through a tiny meadow that was carpeted knee-high with grass and blue and white nemophila.

Crossing the stream, Daylight followed a faint cattle trail over a low, rocky hill and through a wine-wooded forest of manzanita, and emerged upon another tiny valley, down which filtered another spring-fed, meadow-bordered streamlet.

"It sure beats country places and bungalows at Menlo Park," he communed aloud; "and if ever I get the hankering for country life, it's me for this every time."

An old wood-road led him to a clearing, where a dozen acres of grapes grew on wine-red soil. A cow-path, more trees and thickets, and he dropped down a hillside to the southeast exposure. Here, poised above a big forested canyon, and looking out upon Sonoma Valley, was a small farmhouse. With its barn and outhouses it snuggled into a nook in the hillside, which protected it from the west and north. It was the erosion from this hillside, he judged, that had formed the little level stretch of vegetable garden. The soil was fat and black, and there was water in plenty, for he saw several faucets running wide open. Forgotten was the brickyard. Nobody was at home, but Daylight dismounted and ranged the vegetable garden, eating strawberries and green peas, inspecting the old adobe barn and rusty plow and harrow, and rolling and smoking cigarettes while he watched the antics of several broods of young chicks and the mother hens.

Nothing could satisfy his holiday spirit now but the ascent of Sonoma Mountain. And here on the crest, three hours afterward, he emerged, tired and sweaty, garments torn and face and hands scratched, but with sparkling eyes and an unwonted zestfulness of expression. He felt the illicit pleasure of a schoolboy playing truant. The big gaming table of San Francisco seemed very far away. But there was more than illicit pleasure in his mood. It was as though he were going through a sort of cleansing bath. No room here for all the sordidness, meanness and viciousness that filled the dirty pool of city existence. He was loath to depart, and it was not for an hour that he was able to tear himself away and take the descent of the mountain. Working out a new route just for the fun of it, late afternoon was upon him when he arrived back at the wooded knolls.

Daylight cast about for a trail, and found one leading down the side opposite to his ascent. Circling the base of the knoll, he picked up with his horse and rode on to the farmhouse. Smoke was rising from the chimney, and he was quickly in conversation with a nervous, slender young man, who, he learned, was only a tenant on the ranch. How large was it? A matter of one hundred and eighty acres, though it seemed much larger. This was because it was so irregularly shaped. Yes, it included the clay-pit and all the knolls, and its boundary that ran along the big canyon was over a mile long. Oh, yes, he and his wife managed to scratch a living without working too hard. They didn't have to pay much rent. Hillard, the owner, depended on the income from the clay-pit. Hillard was well off and had big ranches and vineyards down on the flat of the valley. The brickyard paid ten cents a cubic yard for the clay. As for the rest of the ranch, the land was good in patches, where it was cleared, like the vegetable garden and the vineyard, but the rest of it was too much up-and-down.

"You're not a farmer," Daylight said.

The young man laughed and shook his head.

"No; I'm a telegraph operator. But the wife and I decided to take a two-years' vacation, and . . . here we are. But the time's about up. I'm going back into the office this fall after I get the grapes off."

As Daylight listened, there came to him a sudden envy of this young fellow living right in the midst of all this which Daylight had traveled through the last few hours.

"What in thunder are you going back to the telegraph office for?" he demanded.

The young man smiled with a certain wistfulness.

"Because we can't get ahead here. . . ." (he hesitated an instant), "and because there are added expenses coming. The rent, small as it is, counts; and besides, I'm not strong enough to effectually farm the place. If I owned it, or if I were a real husky like you, I'd ask nothing better. Nor would the wife." Again the wistful smile hovered on his face. "You see, we're country born, and after bucking with cities for a few years, we kind of feel we like the country best. We've planned to get ahead, though, and then some day we'll buy a patch of land and stay with it."

Daylight could not persuade himself to keep to the traveled roads that day, and another cut across country to Glen Ellen brought him upon a canyon that so blocked his way that he was glad to follow a friendly cow-path. This led him to a small frame cabin. The doors and windows were open, and a cat was nursing a litter of kittens in the doorway, but no one seemed at home. He descended the trail that evidently crossed the canyon. Part way down, he met an old man coming up through the sunset. In his hand he carried a pail of foamy milk. He wore no hat, and in his face, framed with snow-white hair and beard, was the ruddy glow and content of the passing summer day. Daylight thought that he had never seen so contented looking a being.

"How old are you, daddy?" he queried.

"Eighty-four," was the reply. "Yes, sirree, eighty-four, and spryer than most."

"You must a' taken good care of yourself," Daylight suggested.

"I don't know about that. I ain't loafed none. I walked across the plains with an ox team and fit Injuns in '51, and I was a family man with seven youngsters. I reckon I was as old then as you are now, or pretty nigh on to it."

"Don't you find it lonely here?"

The old man shifted the pail of milk and reflected.

"That all depends," he said oracularly. "I ain't never been lonely except when the old wife died. Some fellers are lonely in a crowd, and I'm one of them. That's the only time I'm lonely, is when I go to 'Frisco. But I don't go no more, thank you most to death. This is good enough for me. I've been right here in this valley since '54—one of the first settlers after the Spaniards."

The old man chuckled, and Daylight rode on, singularly at peace with himself and all the world. It seemed that the old contentment of trail and camp he had known on the Yukon had come back to him. He could not shake from his eyes the picture of the old pioneer coming up the trail through the sunset light. He was certainly going some for eighty-four. The thought of following his example entered Daylight's mind, but the big game of San Francisco vetoed the idea.

CHAPTER XII.

Instead of returning to the city on Monday, Daylight rented the butcher's horse for another day and crossed the bed of the valley to its eastern hills. As on the previous day, just for the joy of it, he followed cattle-trails at haphazard and worked his way up toward the summits. Coming out upon a wagon road that led upward, he followed it for several miles, emerging in a small, mountain-encircled valley, where half a dozen poor ranchers farmed the wine-grapes on the steep slopes. Beyond, the road pitched upward. Dense chaparral covered the exposed hillsides, but in the creases of the canyons huge spruce trees grew, and wild oats and flowers.

Late in the afternoon he broke through, and followed a well-defined trail down a dry canyon. The dry canyon gave place to one with a slender ribbon of running water. The trail ran into a wood-road, and the wood-road emerged across a small flat upon a slightly traveled country road. There were no farms in this immediate section, and no houses. The soil was meager, the bed-rock either close to the surface or constituting the surface itself. Manzanita and scrub-oak, however, flourished and walled the road on either side with a jungle growth. And out a runway through this growth a man suddenly scuttled in a way that reminded Daylight of a rabbit.

He was a little man, in patched overalls; bareheaded, with a cotton shirt open at the throat and down the chest. The sun was ruddy-brown in his face, and by it his sandy hair was bleached on the ends to peroxide blonde. He signed to Daylight to halt, and held up a letter.

"If you're going to town, I'd be obliged if you mail this," he said.

"I sure will." Daylight put it into his coat pocket. "Do you live hereabouts, stranger?"

But the little man did not answer. He was gazing at Daylight in a surprised and steadfast fashion.

"I know you," the little man announced. "You're Elam Harnish—Burning Daylight, the papers call you. Am I right?"

KENTUCKY NEWS.

The number of sheep killed in Boyle county by dogs this season is unusually large.

Lexington, Nov. 17.—Fire destroyde a feeding shed for dairy cattle on James B. Haggin's Elmdorf Farm today. The loss was $6,000.

Paducah, Nov. 17.—The Planters' Protective Association sold 23 hogsheads of tobacco this week at Paducah. Prices ranged from 7 1-2 to 10 1-2 cents.

No interest seems to be manifested in Nicholas county in the ten year pool proposition. At least no meetings have been held at Carlisle as not enough interest was shown.

Frankfort, Nov. 17.—Gov. Wilson today pardoned W. N. Funk, of Covington, under indictment for operating a faro game, the pardon to be void if he again violates the Kentucky gambling laws.

Tobacco growers of Nicholas co. who have been holding their 1910 crops are now prizing and shipping them to Louisville and Cincinnati for the purpose of selling before the heavy shipments of the 1911 crop begins.

The outlook for the tobacco crop in Montgomery county is the poorest in years, and the crop is of an inferior variety. Last year at this time over ten million lbs. had been contracted for at prices running from seven to twelve and a half cents a pound.

A statement issued by the crop reporting board of the department of agriculture shows that 281,735 000 bushels of potatoes were raised in the United States showing a loss of 47,052,000 bushels from 1910. The average yield per acre is given by the department of agriculture this year at 80.6 compared with 84.4 last year. The quality of the stock is given as 85.3 this year, and 87.7 last year.

Louisville, Nov. 17.—Wm. Jennings Bryan, in a brief interview given here last evening, said the progressive Democrats had many men available as presidential timber, and that none suited him better than Congressman Ollie James, of Kentucky. He expressed his great pleasure that Kentucky had gone Democratic by an old-fashioned majority, and that the Legislature was overwhelmingly Democratic and progressive, assuring the election of James to the United States Senate.

Paducah, Nov. 16.—Shortly after the continuance of the suit of W. K. Rash against Ben L. Bruner, Secretary of State, for $110,000 damages in the Calloway Court at Murray, the plaintiff was arrested this afternoon for alleged embezzlement at Jackson, Miss. He failed to give bond and was placed in jail to await the arrival of the officers from Jackson. Rash brought suit against Bruner for damages for the alleged failure to issue him a charter for a state bank.

Corbin, Nov. 17.—Granville Powell, aged 30 years, was shot and fatally wounded at 12:30 o'clock today by his wife, Lula Powell, at his home on Center street. Powell went home from his work at noon, and without speaking his wife picked up a revolver and fired at him, striking him in the breast.

The woman claims she did not know the pistol was loaded. She remarked that it was not loaded the day before, and she thought it still unloaded. The pistol was picked up by Powell's father. It contained one empty and two loaded cartridges.

Mr. Frank G. Gray, Harrod's Creek, Ky., last year cut over thirty tons well cured alfalfa hay from two acres in four cuttings. He could have cut it the fifth time, as it grew about ten inches, but he left that as a cover for the winter. He uses hay caps for curing. He mows the hay in the afternoon and lets it wilt and next morning about ten o'clock rakes and shocks it where he leaves it to cure, for several days before hauling into the barn. He finds it no harder to save than red clover. Mr. Gray has a fine herd of Jerseys and says he would not keep cattle if he could not have a silo and grow alfalfa. —Our Country.

Winchester, Nov. 18.—A largely attended massmeeting of the stockholders of the Burley Tobacco Society and the Burley Tobacco Co., was held here this afternoon.

Resolutions were adopted refusing to transfer any of the stock now held in these companies to the company now being organized by LeBus, Hagan and others to manufacture tobacco. Any attempt to use any of the funds arising from the sale of tobacco now in the pool to organize the new company is denounced. They call upon the officers of these two companies to render to the stockholders a full statement of assets and liabilities, cash on hand, tobacco unsold, etc.

The resolution concludes by declaring widespread dissatisfaction with the management of the two companies, and demand that the officerst take immediate steps for the voluntary dissolution of the two companies.

Miss Sallie Berkshire.

Miss Sallie Berkshire, aged 60 years and eight months, died Oct. 17th, 1911. She was of the household of Wm. C. and Sarah J. Berkshire, whom, with Robert Livingston, Mary A., Antonia Ella and Ida preceded her to the grave. Her suffering was great, in many years, but she had hope of a happier state than the earth life, having learned of the Savior in her youth, obeyed Him in baptism and kept the faith! Her late home was with Nannie, in Petersburg, Ky., whence she passed on t, leaving her and their sister, Pauline, to mourn heavier lose, Ella and Ida having gone before her only a few months —March 17th and August 11, 1911. They sorrow not as those who have no hope, knowing that they are blessed which die in the Lord. May He sustain and comfort them and all who mourn with them.

Big Turkey Crop.

The Lexington Herald says. Central Kentucky has produced one of the largest turkey crops in a decade and marketing of the toothsome birds in anticipation of the usual heavy demand for the Thanksgiving holidays will be the Thanksgiving holidays will be Weather conditions seem just right for an early slaughtering of birds and at many points in Central Kentucky car loads of dressed fowls will be sent East by the express route.

The increased production of turkeys throughout the Blue Grass section is largely due to the uniform success housewives had in handling the young turks during and immediately following the hatching period. The drouth was on and temperatures were warm resulting in ideal weather for the rapid growth of the birds and the losses usually resulting at this time of the year were not in evidence this season.

With the big increase in turkey production came a like increase in the growth and production of chickens and the crop of the latter is the largest in the history of the country. The same dry weather conditions made it good for small game and reports to the Blue Grass Farmer indicate that a goodly supply of quail and rabbits are to be found in all sections of Central Kentucky.

With such an enormous increase in the production and supply of turkeys and chickens had come lower prices and throughout the land many families who have not for several years enjoyed turkey for Thanksgiving dinner will this year have a fine fatted bird to top the menu.

Shipments of poultry to the East is running in large volumes, New York City receiving nearly 200 car loads of live and dressed poultry last week.

Dealers say a large per cent of the turkey crop will be unfit for the Thanksgiving market, and farmers will need to feed them for a later market rounding them up for the Christmas trade.

We'll Pay Your Railroad Fare in Cash or
We'll Pay You 3c A Mile If You Drive In.

OUR PROPOSTION :—

We will refund Railroad fares, Trolly Car fares and Steam Boat fares, or will allow three cents per mile for persons driving into Covington and purchasing goods from any or all of the stores of the members of the Retail Merchants Association of the Industrial Club of Covington, on a basis of one mile for each dollar's worth of goods purchased.

To illustrate :—If you travel, say ten miles, you would be required to purchase at least $20.00 worth of goods in order to have your entire Railroad fare refunded, you having traveled ten miles each way, making a total of twenty miles.

If your total purchase amounts to a less number of dollars than the number of miles you travel, we will refund as many miles of your fare as the number of dollars you spend with members of our Association.

On the other hand, if you spend a greater number of dollars than miles you travel, in addition to your entire fare or mileage, we will refund one per cent on the purchase you make in excess of the amount necessary to secure the refund of your fare.

By this plan you not only have your Railroad fare or mileage paid, but you can take advantage of the many Special Sales that the members of our Association continually offer.

Covington merchandise has a State-wide reputation for excellence and up to-dateness—Covington values are always a bit better than most people expect—Covington prices are always a shade lower. And there is a reason for these better values and lower prices. Come to Covington and see.

The Wise Old Gander.

Florence, Ky.—Last Saturday there was a corn show in our village. On my way to attend the exhibition, I met a young lady of our village. I asked her if she was going to the corn show. She said she did not think she would attend. She said she had only one corn and did not want to put that on exhibition. I told her it was an Indian corn show. When I arrived at the show I met all kinds of corn—yellow corn, white corn, red corn and pop corn. The display of corn reminded me of the early days when grandfather Souther raised large crops of Indian corn, as there was lots of Indians around, he thought he would have to divide with them. Grandpa had one of them old time corn cribs filled with corn. In those days the crib was set on posts about two feet high so pigs and fowls could shelter under them. By the way, Grandpa kept a fine flock of geese. In the flock was a wise old gander. One day this wise old gander was under the corn crib when he espied a grain of corn on a loose splinter in the floor. He caught hold of the splinter and the grain of corn fell to the ground. He picked it up and ate it. Again reaching for the splinter another grain fell to the ground. He ate that. Then Mr. gander pulled the splinter another grain fell to the ground. The wise old gander went to pick it up it was gone, and again he would reach for the splinter, but the wise gooses were there early and were there late, so the poor old gander kept pulling the splinter day in and day out, and when he went to pick up the corn it was gone. The gooses were always there. The poor gander kept puling til he starved to death, so here endeth the story of the poor old gander. That's all!

EDITION FROM AN AIRSHIP.

Eugene Lorton Publishes a Newspaper In Clouds.

Eugene Lorton, managing editor of the Tulsa Daily World, formerly a well known newspaper man and politician of Walla Walla and Vancouver, Wash., made an ascent in Tulsa, Okla. with Aviator Bonney in a Wright Biplane and at an elevation of 4,000 feet issued a complete miniature edition of the Daily World. The event took place at the county fair grounds and was witnessed by 10,000 people.

The leading article was headed "A Message From the Clouds" and wes written under Mr. Lorton's signature. All departments of a newspaper were represented, including the telegraph news received from the Associated Press a few hours before the flight was made. Bundles of the papers were dropped out of the clouds and distributed to the crowds.

Many people fought to secure copies as souvenirs.

Good Old Pumpkin Pie.

It is hard to realize that there are hundreds of people living today, who never tasted pumpkin pie and who will never taste it.

If they were to be given a slice of the genuine variety they would turn up their noses at it.

Some of them have been fed nothing but the pumpkin pie of commerce. This is made by stewing up anaemic squash, then adding some cinnamon to flavor it and some ginger to conceal the taste of the cinnamon and some sugar to soften the taste of the ginger It is poured into a crust and baked. Sometimes they put meringue on top. This should be made a penal offense, without parole or pardon.

Others have been brought up on pie made from the squash pumpkin. The interior of this is a tint that is aptly described as "yaller." It bears no more resemblance to the real old-fashioned pumpkin than brass does to gold.

There is, though a faithful little band which clings to the old traditions. With them pumpkin pie is made of the genuine pumpkin. Such pie is a blessing to a meal and a benefit to the race.

But the time will come when only antiquarians will know what real pumkin pie is. We shall not be surprised if within a few years someone puts a top crust on it.—Chicago Post.

Daylight nodded.

"Well, I'm glad I wrote that letter this afternoon," the little man went on, "or else I'd have missed seeing you. I've seen your photo in the papers many a time, and I've a good memory for faces. I recognized you at once. My name's Ferguson."

"Do you live hereabouts?" Daylight repeated his query.

"Oh, yes. I've got a little shack back here in the bush a hundred yards and a pretty spring, and a few fruit trees and berry bushes. Come in and take a look. And that spring is a dandy. You never tasted water like it. Come in and try it."

Walking and leading his horse, Daylight followed the quick-stepping, eager little man through the green tunnel and emerged abruptly upon the clearing, if clearing it might be called, where wild nature and man's earth-scratching were inextricably blended. It was a tiny nook in the hills, protected by the steep walls of a canyon mouth. Here were several large oaks, evidencing a richer soil. The erosion of ages from the hillside had slowly formed this deposit of fat earth. Under the oaks, almost buried in them, stood a rough, unpainted cabin, the wide veranda of which, with chairs and hammocks, advertised an out-of-doors bedchamber. Daylight's keen eyes took in everything. The clearing was irregular, following the patches of the best soil, and every fruit tree and berry bush, and even each vegetable plant, had the water personally conducted to it. The tiny irrigation channels were everywhere, and along some of them the water was running.

Ferguson looked eagerly into his visitor's face for signs of approbation.

"What do you think of it, eh?"

"Hand-reared and manicured, every blessed tree," Daylight laughed, but the joy and satisfaction that shone in his eyes contented the little man.

"Why, d'ye know, I know every one of those trees as if they were sons of mine. I planted them, nursed them, fed them, and brought them up. Come on and peep at the spring."

"It's sure a hummer," was Daylight's verdict, after due inspection and sampling, as they turned back for the house.

The interior was a surprise. The cooking being done in the small, lean-to kitchen, the whole cabin formed a large living-room. A great table in the middle was comfortably littered with books and magazines. All the available wall space, from wall to ceiling, was occupied by filled bookshelves. It seemed to Daylight that he had never seen so many books assembled in one place. Skins of wildcat, coon and deer lay about on the pine-board floor.

Daylight found himself charmed and made curious by the little man. Why was he hiding away here in the chaparral, he and his books? So it was, when between them they had washed and wiped the dishes and put them away, and had settled down to a comfortable smoke, that Daylight put his question.

"Look here, Ferguson. Every since we got together, I've been casting about to find out what's wrong with you, to locate a screw loose somewhere, but I'll be danged if I've succeeded. What are you doing here, anyway?"

Ferguson frankly showed his pleasure at the questions.

"First of all," he began, "the doctors wound up by losing all hope for me. Gave me a few months at best, and that, after a course in sanitariums and a trip to Europe and another to Hawaii. They tried electricity and forced feeding and fasting. I was a graduate of about everything in the curriculum. They kept me poor with their bills, while I went from bad to worse. The trouble with me was two-fold; first I was a born weakling; and next, I was living unnaturally—too much work and responsibility and strain. I was managing editor of the Times-Tribune in San Francisco, and I wasn't strong enough for the strain. Of course my body went back on me, and my mind, too, for that matter. It had to be bolstered up with whisky, which wasn't good for it any more than was the living in clubs and hotels good for my stomach and the rest of me. So I quit, quit everything, absolutely, and came to live in the Valley of the Moon—that's the Indian name, you know, for Sonoma Valley. I lived in the lean-to the first year; then I built the cabin and sent for my books. I never knew what happiness was before, nor health. Look at me now and dare to tell me that I look forty-seven."

"I wouldn't give a day over forty," Daylight confessed.

"Yet the day I came here I looked nearer sixty, and that was fifteen years ago."

They talked along, and Daylight looked at the world from new angles. Here was a man, neither bitter nor cynical, who laughed at the city-dwellers and called them lunatics; a man who did not care for money, and in whom the lust for power had long since died.

It was not until ten o'clock that Daylight parted from Ferguson. As he rode along through the starlight, the idea came to him of buying the ranch on the other side of the valley. There was no thought in his mind of ever intending to live on it. His game was in San Francisco. But he liked the ranch, and as soon as he got back to the office he would open up negotiations with Hilliard.

The time passed, and he played on at the game. San Francisco's attitude toward Daylight had undergone a change. While he, with his slashing buccaneer methods, was a distinct menace to the more orthodox financial gamblers, he was nevertheless so grave a menace that they were glad enough to let him alone. He had already taught them the excellence of letting a sleeping dog lie.

Dede Mason was still in the office. He had made no more overtures, discussed no more books. He had no active interest in her, and she was to him a pleasant memory of what had never happened, a joy, which, by his essential nature, he was barred from ever knowing. Yet, while his interest had gone to sleep and his energy was consumed in the endless battles he waged, he knew every trick of the light on her hair, every quick definite mannerism of movement, every line of her figure as expounded by her tailor-made gowns. Several times, six months or so apart, he had increased her salary, until now she was receiving ninety dollars a month. Beyond this he dared not go, though he got around it by making the work easier. This he had accomplished after her return from a vacation, by retaining her substitute as an assistant. Also, he had changed his office suite, so that now the two girls had a room by themselves. The more he saw of her, and the more he thought he knew of her, the more unapproachable did she seem to him. But since he had no intention of approaching her, this was anything but an unsatisfactory fact. He was glad he had her in his office, and hoped she'd stay, and that was about all.

Daylight did not improve with the passing years. The life was not good for him. He was growing stout and soft, and there was unwonted flabbiness in his muscles. The more he drank cocktails, the more he was compelled to drink in order to get the desired result, the inhibitions that eased him down from the concert pitch of his operations. And with this went wine, too, at meals, and the long drinks after dinner of Scotch and soda at the Riverside. Then, too, his body suffered from lack of exercise; and, from lack of decent human associations, his moral fibers were weakening. Never a man to hide anything, some of his escapades became public, such as speeding, and of joy-rides in his big red motor car down to San Jose with companions distinctly sporty—incidents that were narrated as good fun and comically in the newspapers.

CHAPTER XIII.

One Sunday, late in the afternoon, found Daylight across the bay in the Piedmont hills of Oakland. As usual, he was in a big motor car, though not his own, the guest of Swiftwater Bill. Luck's own darling, who had come down to spend the clean-up of the seventh fortune wrung from the frozen Arctic gravel. It was a merry party, and they had made a merry day of it, circling the bay from San Francisco around by San Jose and up to Oakland, having been thrice arrested for speeding, the third time, however, on the Haywards stretch, running away with their captor. Fearing that a telephone message to arrest them had been flashed ahead, they had turned into the back-road through the hills, and now, rushing in upon Oakland by a new route, were boisterously discussing what disposition they should make of the constable.

Here Was a Man Who Laughed at City Dwellers and Called Them Lunatics.

"We'll come out at Blair Park in ten minutes," one of the men announced. "Look here, Swiftwater, there's a cross-road right ahead, with lots of gates, but it'll take us back-country into Berkeley. Then we can come back into Oakland from the other side, sneak across on the ferry, and send the machine back around tonight with the chauffeur."

But Swiftwater Bill failed to see why he should not go into Oakland by way of Blair Park, and so decided.

The next moment, flying around a bend, the back-road they were not going to take appeared. Inside the gate, leaning out from her saddle and just closing it, was a young woman on a chestnut sorrel. With his first glimpse, Daylight felt there was something strangely familiar about her. The next moment, straightening up in the saddle with a movement he could not fail to identify, she put the horse into a gallop, riding away with her back toward them. It was Dede Mason—he remembered what Morrison had told him about her keeping a riding horse, and he was glad she had not seen him in this riotous company. Intervening trees at that moment shut her from view, and Swiftwater Bill plunged into the problem of disposing of their constable, while Daylight, leaning back with closed eyes, was still seeing Dede Mason gallop off down the country road.

On Monday morning, coming in for dictation, he looked at her with new interest, though he gave no sign of it; and the stereotyped business passed off in the stereotyped way. But the following Sunday found him on a horse himself, across the bay and riding through the Piedmont hills. He made a long day of it, but no glimpse did he catch of Dede Mason, though he even took the back-road of many gates and rode on into Berkeley. It had been a fruitless day, so far as she was concerned; and yet not entirely fruitless, for he had enjoyed the open air and the horse under him to such purpose that, on Monday, his instructions were out to the dealers to look for the best chestnut sorrel that money could buy. At odd times during the week he examined numbers of chestnut sorrels, tried several and was unsatisfied. It was not till Saturday that he came upon Bob. Daylight knew him for what he wanted the moment he laid eyes on him. A large horse for a riding animal, he was none too large for a big man like Daylight. In splendid condition, Bob's coat in the sunlight was a flame of fire, his arched neck a jewelled conflagration.

Daylight examined the mane and found it finer than any horse's hair he had ever seen. Also, its color was unusual in that it was almost auburn. While he ran his fingers through it, Bob turned his head and playfully nuzzled Daylight's shoulder.

"Saddle him up, and I'll try him," he told the dealer. "I wonder if he's used to spurs. No English saddle, mind. Give me a good Mexican and a curb bit—not too severe, seeing as he likes to rear."

Daylight superintended the preparations, adjusting the curb strap and the stirrup length, and doing the cinching. He shook his head at the martingale, but yielded to the dealer's advice to allow it to go on. And Bob, beyond spirited restlessness and a few playful attempts, gave no trouble. Nor in the hour's riding that followed, save for some permissible curveting and prancing, did he misbehave. Daylight was delighted; the purchase was immediately made; and Bob, with riding gear and personal equipment, was dispatched across the bay forthwith to take up his quarters in the stables of the Oakland Riding Academy.

The next day being Sunday, Daylight was away early, crossing on the ferry and taking with him Wolf, the leader of his sled team, the one dog which he had selected to bring with him when he left Alaska. Quest as he would through the Piedmont hills and along the many-gated back-road to Berkeley, Daylight saw nothing of Dede Mason and her chestnut sorrel. But he had little time for disappointment, for his own chestnut kept him busy. At the end of half an hour of goodness Daylight, lured into confidence, was riding along at a walk and rolling a cigarette, with slack knees and relaxed seat, the reins lying on the animal's neck. Bob whirled abruptly and with lightning swiftness, pivoting on his hind legs, his fore legs just lifted clear of the ground. Daylight kept his seat, but, beyond a futile rein across the neck, did nothing to prevent the evolution.

"Well, Bob," he addressed the animal, at the same time wiping the sweat from his own eyes, "I'm free to confess that you're sure the blamedest all-fired quickest creature I ever saw. I guess the way to fix you is to keep the spur just a-touching—ah! you brute!"

For, the moment the spur touched him, his left hind leg had reached forward in a kick that struck the stirrup a smart blow. Several times, out of curiosity, Daylight attempted the spur, and each time Bob's hoof landed the stirrup. Then Daylight, following the horse's example of the unexpected, suddenly drove both spurs into him and reached him underneath with the quirt.

"You ain't never had a real licking before," he muttered, as Bob, thus rudely jerked out of the circle of his own impish mental processes, shot ahead.

Half a dozen times spurs and quirt bit into him, and then Daylight settled down to enjoy the magnificent gallop. No longer punished, at the end of a half mile Bob eased down into a fast canter. Wolf, toiling the rear, was catching up, and everything was going nicely. And when, at last, Daylight decided that the horse had had enough, he turned him around abruptly and put him into a gentle canter on the forward track. After a time, he reined in to a stop to see if he were breathing painfully. Standing for a minute, Bob turned his head and nuzzled his rider's stirrup in a roguish, impatient way, as much as to intimate that it was time they were going on.

"Well, I'll be plumb gosh darned!" was Daylight's comment. "No ill-will, no grudge, no nothing—and after that lambasting! You're sure a hummer, Bob."

He had taken a liking to the animal, and repented not of his bargain. He realised that Bob was not vicious nor mean, the trouble being that he was bursting with high spirits and was endowed with more than the average horse's intelligence. It was the spirits and the intelligence, combined with inordinate roguishness, that made him what he was. What was required to control him was a strong hand, with tempered sternness and yet with the requisite touch of brutal dominance.

Throughout the week Daylight found himself almost as much interested in Bob as in Dede; and, not being in the thick of any big deals, he was probably more interested in both of them than in the business game. Bob's trick of whirling was of special moment to him. How to overcome it—that was the thing. Suppose he did meet with Dede out in the hills; and suppose by some lucky stroke of fate, he should manage to be riding alongside of her; then that whirl of Bob's would be most disconcerting and embarrassing. He was not particularly anxious for her to see him thrown forward on Bob's neck. On the other hand, suddenly to leave her and go dashing down the back-track, plying quirt and spurs, wouldn't do, either. What was wanted was a method wherewith to prevent that lightning whirl. He must stop the animal before it got around. The reins would not do this. Neither would the spurs. Remained the quirt. But how to accomplish it? Bob always whirled to the right. Very well. He would double the quirt in his hand, and, the instant of the whirl, that double quirt would rap Bob on the nose. The horse didn't live, after it once learned the lesson, that would whirl in the face of the doubled quirt.

More keenly than ever, during that week in the office, did Daylight realise that he had no social, nor even human contacts with Dede. The situation was such that he could not ask her the simple question whether or not she was going riding next Sunday. Thus he found another card in the hand the mad god had dealt him. How important that card was to become he did not dream, yet he decided that it was a pretty good card.

Sunday came, and Bob, out in the Piedmont hills, behaved like an angel. His goodness at times was of the spirited, prancing order, but otherwise he was a lamb. But no Dede did Daylight encounter. He vainly circled about among the hill roads, and in the afternoon took the steep grade over the divide of the second range and dropped into Maraga Valley. Just after passing the foot of the descent, he heard the hoof beats of a cantering horse. It was from ahead and coming toward him. What if it were Dede? He turned Bob around and started to return at a walk. The canter came nearer, but he faced straight ahead until he heard the horse behind check to a walk. Then he glanced over his shoulder. It was Dede. The recognition was quick, and, with her, accompanied by surprise. What more natural thing than that, partly turning his horse, he should wait till she caught up with him; and that, when abreast, they should continue abreast on up the grade? He could have sighed with relief. The thing was accomplished, and so easily. Greetings had been exchanged; here they were side by side and going in the same direction with miles and miles ahead of them.

He noted that her eye was first for the horse and next for him.

"Oh, what a beauty!" she had cried at sight of Bob. From the shining light in her eyes, and the face filled with delight, he would scarcely have believed that it belonged to the young woman he had known in the office, the young woman with the controlled, subdued office face.

"I didn't know you rode," was one of her first remarks. "I imagined you were wedded to get-there-quick machines."

Thus, and to his great relief, they launched on a topic of mutual interest. He told her about Bob's tricks, and of the whirl and his scheme to overcome it; and she agreed that horses had to be handled with a certain rational severity, no matter how much one loved them. There was Mab, which she had had for eight years, and which she had had to break of stall-kicking. The process had been painful for Mab, but it had cured her.

"You've ridden a lot," Daylight said.

"I really can't remember the first

YEGGMEN

Thwarted In Attempt To Rob The Boone County Deposit Bank,

Make Their Escape In Rig Stolen From Phipps' Livery Stable.

STOLEN RIG FOUND IN COVINGTON

Yeggmen made an attempt to rob the Boone County Deposit Bank last Thurdsay night about 1 o'clock, but were frightened away before gaining entrance to the building, which years ago was the County Clerk's office, and, although located in the center of the town, is several feet from any other building, the Recorder printing office, about twenty feet west, being the nearest building thereto.

It was about one o'clock when W. D. Cropper, who is employed in the bank and sleeps in the directors' office which is in the west end of the building and has a door opening into the banking room, was awakened by the rattling of the door which opens from the banking room on the street in front of the Court House. At first he thought the wind which was blowing caused the door to make the noise, but upon a repetition of the noise and before he was thoroughly awake, he asked; "What do you want?" Mr. Cropper got up but the noise had ceased, and he was soon back in bed sound asleep, never having suspected that anything along the line of a bank robbery had been set in motion about 30 feet from his room, and he was never more surprise than he was Friday morning when he went to open the door to the bank building and found a chisel inserted between the edge of the door and door facing, where it had been used in an effort to prize the door so as to release the bolt in the lock. Upon opening the door, in addition to the chisel, a large monkey wrench, a sledge hammer, a brace in which to use bits, and a crow-bar were found, while just around the northwest corner of the bank building lay a pile of about twenty heavy lap robes that had been assembled, to wrap the safe to deaden the explosion.

At the time Mr. Cropper came out of the bank four or five parties were standing on the cornerat Mace Riddolli's store, very earnestly discussing something when Mr. Cropper went across and asked what was the matter, and was told that some one had broken into O. P. Phipps' livery stable some time during the night and stole a horse and harness and buggy. The crowd was then informed of what happened just across the street at the bank, when the motive for the stealing of the horse and buggy was apparent.

In an hour or so the proceedings of the yeggmen while in Burlington, were clearly developed by discoveries made at different points, and were about as follows: They entered the High School building east of town by breaking the glass out of one of the basement windows. There they took a large monkey wrench belonging with the furnace, also two batteries which Prof. Dix had to operate an electric bell.

At R. S. Crisler's blacksmith shop they drew the staple on the door, and took a brace, a sledge hammer, a crow bar and two chisels.

At Phipps' stable they also drew the staple on the door, got the lap-robes and the horse and buggy. It was between nine and ten o'clock that Dr. John Grant, of Sparta, who was a guest at the Boone Hotel, heard the noise at the livery stable, but never thought about anything wrong going on.

The horse and buggy had been tracked from the livery stable thru the back streets around to the Florence pike near the telephone exchange where from the looks of the tracks of the horse and a man it was held in waiting for a time.

If was shortly after one o'clock that Mrs. Emma Brown, who keeps the toll-gate out on the Florence pike heard a rapidly driven rig pass, and about two o'clock a rig arrived at Mr. Sidney's toll-gate, where the poll was down. The rope was hurriedly cut and a lantern sitting on the porch was swiped. This was the last heard of the rig until Friday when it was found in Covington, where the mare had been left hitched on the side of the street, having been driven almost to death. Sheriff Hume telephoned in every direction early Friday morning but nothing definite could be learned in regard to the missing property, and he and Mr. Phipps went to the city, and finally located it.

The taking of the batteries at the school house shows that the robbers expected to use a powerful explosive, and, further, that there was at least one professional on the job. There are circumstances connected with the attempted robber that has caused some of the citizens of the town to believe that the yeggmen had the assistance of a person or persons pretty well acquainted with the lay of things as well as being possessed of other information necessary to the attempt to pull off a bank robbery.

There is no clue to the guilty parties, but suspicion points to a couple of well dressed strangers, who, came into town on the 14th inst., on the Florence pike, driving a nice horse and buggy. The buggy stopped in front of the Boone County Deposit Bank, and one of them went into the bank and got a $20.00 bill changed. They remained in town an hour or so putting their horse up at the livery stable and taking their dinner at the Boone Hotel, and for which they insisted that Mr. Blyth take 50c each for their dinner instead of 40c the regular price. They men never made their business known to any one, and went on to Belleview, the last place at which they were heard from. When the man left the bank as above stated, Mr. Cropper remarked that the men may be out after no good.

A detective who is on the case was in Burlington last Saturday, having with him a large number of pictures of noted criminals, and among them was one that was readily identified by Charles Westbay, Jerry Blyth, Callie Baldon and a colored woman, a waiter at the Boone Hotel, as the picture of one of the strangers who was in Burlington and took dinner at the Boone Hotel on the 14th inst. Each of the parties who identified the picture had a good look at the two strangers, and as neither of them was present when either of the others selected the picture from a large number of other pictures, it about settled the question as to whom one of the strangers was, and towards whom suspicion pointed immediately after attempted robbery.

The Boone County Deposit Bank resorts to every means at its command to protect its interest and the money entrusted to its care by its depositors, and had the considerable sum of money in its safe last Tuesday night been taken, neither the bank nor its depositors would have lost a cent, as this bank, as do many other banks, carries an insurance against the burglars.

The detective who was in Burlington last Saturday took a look at the bank safe and said that the burglars would have abandoned the job had they got into the vault and saw what kind of a safe confronted them, it being of a make none of which burglars have ever opened.

The attempted robbery was nipped in the bud very nicely. Mr. Cropper protected the bank successfully, and there is no use saying what "I'd a done if I'd a been in Cropper's place."

Come to Covington as Often As You Like We'll Pay Your Railroad Fare in Cash or We'll Pay You 3c A Mile If You Drive In.

OUR PROPOSITION:

We will refund Railroad fares, Trolly Car fares and Steam Boat fares, or will allow three cents per mile for persons driving into Covington and purchasing goods from any or all of the stores of the members of the Retail Merchants Association of the Industrial Club of Covington, on a basis of one mile for each dollar's worth of goods purchased.

To illustrate:—If you travel, say ten miles, you would be required to purchase at least $20.00 worth of goods in order to have your entire Railroad fare refunded, you having traveled ten miles each way, making a total of twenty miles.

If your total purchase amounts to a less number of dollars than the number of miles you travel, we will refund as many miles of your fare as the number of dollars you spend with members of our Association.

On the other hand, if you spend a greater number of dollars than miles you travel, in addition to your entire fare or mileage, we will refund one per cent on the purchase you make in excess of the amount necessary to secure the refund of your fare.

By this plan you not only have your Railroad fare or mileage paid, but you can take advantage of the many Special Sales that the members of our Association continually offer.

Covington merchandise has a State-wide reputation for excellence and up to-dateness—Covington values are always a bit better than most people expect—Covington prices are always a shade lower. And there is a reason for these better values and lower prices. Come to Covington and see.

We are members of the Retail Merchants Association of Covington, and will rebate fares on the plan as outlined above.

Over The Ocean.

I have been asked by several friends to write something on my recent trip abroad. I am proud that my friends and neighbors agree that I had fairly earned the much needed rest and that they are interested in what I may have learned.

A mere description of what I saw would avail little as there are good books on most every phase of foreign countries. I will therefore attempt little description; but will endeavor to draw a few lessons from some of my observations.

In the short space of two and one-half months I did not attempt to see all Europe which is equal in area to America, namely—4 1-2 million square miles. As there are four hundred million people in Europe, the population is about four times as thick as it is in America. After a delightful voyage of ten days, we landed at Plymouth; then took a daylight train 230 miles to London. There we spent ten days; thence we took daylight rides by way of Calais, Cologne, Coblenz and Frankfort to Vienna. Two of the four days on this trip were by boat on the famous and beautiful Rhine. At Vienna we spent five weeks; thence by daylight to Berlin where we spent one week; thence by daylight to Hamburg where we sailed on the America. Returning we were in a three day's storm and most everyone was seasick. This good ship has been on the water six years and this was the roughest trip she ever had. There were 1700 passengers and a crew of 500. We made the whole journey of over ten thousand miles without delay or accident or missing a train until in coming home on the Commuter from Cincinnati to Walton it was one hour late.

I spent the time in these three great cities so as to see life from a different view to what we have in Kentucky and so as to learn as much as possible of the laws and the governments in a short time. Everywhere I found America honored and respected, and a very exaggerated notion of our money. Europeans have much to learn from us and we have much to learn from them. Everywhere there was complaint of the governments are much to be admired if we judge by results; for instance, the police service and the street car service of these three cities are far better and cheaper than any city in America. Also the cities are cleaner and each of them has a sky line of five stories, which avoids the congestion caused by sky-scrapers. In size seven and a half millions and in business London is for the first week incomprehensible. Everything about it is big. But that which impressed me most was the magnitude of its commerce. A ride of five miles down the Thames to Greenwich gives a sight of the world's shipping interest that is astonishing. Both sides are lined with ships from all parts of the world and the current is ever alive with vessels going and coming, often four or five drawn by one great tug. London is truly the center of the world's business and I should enjoy a hope by and by to spend several months there in studying some of the world wide questions. London has many great hospitals and so far as I could learn were supported by voluntary subscriptions. There is said to be much poverty in London; but it did not appear so to me. Everybody seemed to have work and on comparison of wages and expenses there was not so great difference as I expected to find. I visited the courts in all the cities and I risk nothing in saying that the administration of justice is far [illegible] ours Kentucky any other part of the United States. It is more speedy; more accurate; more just. The judges are better qualified; more independent; the lawyers better trained and the jurors and witnesses pay more attention of their oaths. The judges do not tolerate the least sharp practice by the lawyers. The whole purpose seems to be to get at the truth and the law. In America there is too much inclination to win, right or wrong; and it too often happens that outside matters turn the scale of justice.

Both in England and on the continent a daylight ride of eighteen hundred miles some of it through steep country, did not show a break or a wash in the land; the forests, mostly young, showed no dead or broken trees. In other words, probably through necessity, they have learned to appreciate and care for the land. Sooner or later we must come to this. The sooner the better and if I could get put into practice a small part of the care which I observed in England, France, Belgium, Austria and Germany the trip would be profitable from a money standpoint as well as the pleasure standpoint. One thing I saw which did not please me, and that was the women doing heavy work such as plowing and carrying the hod. But the exigencies of life, particularly in crowded sections, call upon all to do something toward earning a living, and it is only a question of time in our American cities when the do nothing woman must make herself useful in some womanly way. Too many wish support in idleness and luxury and as the pressure of competition becomes greater, the men can not sustain all the burden. But the great menace in all these countries, as it has been in all countries, of all times, is the unjust, unfair distribution of the wealth. Slowly means are being devised to remedy and prevent this, but the proposition is indeed a hard one when the government is so powerful and centralized as it is in a monarchy. Of all the great problems we have in America, the greatest and most important is to curb and prevent and correct the unequal distribution of wealth. I am so impressed with the importance of this great question that I will support that party, that measure, or that man that will best subserve this end. Being a young country of great and undeveloped resources, it seems to me impossible to read the history of America and not be convinced that a protective tariff was a wise policy for us. But to the extent it has or may produce an unequal distribution of wealth, it is unwise, and I stand with the progressives of all parties that would revise it and scale it down to the true line of protection; which is simply the difference in the cost of manufacture. No country can be great without manufactures and no young country can start new lines of manufacture to compete with established factories in old countries without government aid by tariff. Therefore, Canada did a wise thing to reject the treaty since thereby she saved herself from being an agricultural country only. If this reasoning is sound, then a tariff for revenue only never was and never can be wise policy for a new country.

As I stayed in Vienna longest I saw it best. Being out of the line of travel it is not much visited by Americans except the student class, particularly by doctors and students of music. In several respects this is the most wonderful city in the world, especially in medical research and music it leads the world. In art it is third, being preceded by Rome and Florence. It has two million two hundred thousand inhabitants. Until within the last fifty years the old city was surrounded by a wall, but this was torn down some forty years ago and where it stood is now a street almost circular two hundred feet wide with a series of public buildings and parks on it which beyond doubt, make it the most beautiful street in the world. Baedeka whose guide books are the best ever written, says it is only equaled by Unter den Linden in Berlin. In my view there is no comparison at all. The architecture of the university; the Hof theater; the museum of Natural History; the Art Museum and the Rathhouse as well as the interior decoration surpass anything ever seen or conceived by the writer. For instance, the university building which I stepped is 600 feet wide and five hundred and fifty long, four stories high and in one small portion of it there is a library of three hundred thousand volumes. This great structure shows the architect's care in every line. I visited every court; every museum and every place of learning in Vienna and the minute way in which they make scientific investigations was a revelation. Individually the Austrians are not a great people; but in a collective way they have certainly done some great things and the government has made it possible for the greatest display of individual talent. In the field of music they are especially preeminent. Not having been to Italy I can make no comparison with it, but neither America, England nor Germany are to be compared with Austria in music. All music is an expression of feeling. That or something else has caused Vienna, and as I am informed Southern Europe in general, to become very degenerate in home life. Here may I say that in no part of America in which I have traveled, nor in Canada nor in Europe have I found the home life so good as in Kentucky and on this point I can truthfully say of Boone county that it leads Kentucky. In plain words I mean that there is a stronger sentiment and a more universal disapproval in Boone county against any conduct which violates the sanctity of the home than any place I have traveled. I know of no higher compliment I could pay my county and I hope it may remain true.

German is the language of Austria. One would, therefore, expect great similarity between the two countries, but in fact they have many radical differences. German men are larger than Austria men and the Austrian women are larger and more beautiful than the German. The Germans are more scientific as a nation and far more aggressive in a business way. In both countries the soldier is much respected; and can marry only when there is a good dowry. The maintainance of such large armies is a great burden on the people and partly explains why the women do so much heavy work.

I should like very much to and hope I may be able to make a more extended study of European institutions and social conditions.

The steamship America carried eleven hundred steerage passengers and as the emigration problem is one of the great national questions, I tried to learn what I could about the class of people we are getting and the effect of it. I heard Dr. Feulks, who has the largest eye clinic in the world and who has traveled in America, say in a lecture that we are getting among our emigrants the choicest spirits in Austria and Hungary and that it was beginning to tell in those countries. There is such progress in Germany that possibilities are almost equal to those in the United States consequently we are now getting few emigrants from Germany. The Irish, English and Scotch are going to Canada, so that in Europe, Italy and Russia are now furnishing the emigrants and I am advised that they are not always the best class. Persons in New York and Boston say that it presents a great problem to them; and that the laws should be more stringent. In order to judge more accurately of the character of emigrants I took a position where I could see the eleven hundred emigrants on the America march off in single file. While they showed the effects of travel and hardship and poverty, it was plain to be seen that most of them had in them the making of good citizens. In a few years many of them will be visitors in Europe as first class passengers. But there is a limit to the time when this country can continue to absorb one million emigrants a year no matter how worthy they may be. Yet as this is the land of the free and the home of the brave and as it has not been very long since many of us or our fathers were emigrants we could not afford to close the door of hope to the foreigner. But the very least we must do is to protect ourselves from the unworthy and the disabled. Those who labor in the east say that the landing of so many emigrants at New York and Boston is a constant menace to them.

The best result of all my travel is to cause me to appreciate more and more my own state and county which as I have often stated publicly and privately, we do not half appreciate. The possibilities of Kentucky are very great and it is my judgment that with climate, soil and location of our counties in northern Kentucky no given section in the world would show better results from a given amount of labor and attention scientifically applied.

The lecture-recital given at St. Cecilia hall, Thursday evening by Miss Fay Marshall was a most delightful affair. Miss Marshall deserves great credit for the artistic manner in which her program was presented, and it was thoroughly enjoyed by a large and appreciative audience. The description which preceded each number was given in a beautifully well modulated voice. Her charming personality and a thorough knowledge of and interest in her work were also among many points in favor of the successful recital.—Lawrenceburg, Indiana, Press.

ANNUAL CORN SHOW.

List of Winners and Special Prizes—Numerous Entries and Competition Quite Spirited.

Last Saturday was a big day with many Boone county corn growers, the occasion being the holding of the second annual Corn Show at Florence, under the anspices of the Boone County Pomona Grange. Stephens Bros., of Idlewild neighborhood, captured the capital prize, the cultivator, given by Stanley Crouch, of Erlanger. A couple of city autoists who passed through town last Sunday going towards Belleview had a very exciting experience at intervals during their trip. Their machine had contracted the habit of catching fire from overheated gearing and every few miles, and they would have to stop it and hasten to the nearest honse and secure buckets and pans with which to carry water to qnench the flames. It was about seven o'clock that night that the epasmodic flames came very near consuming the machine near James Slayback's out on the Belleview pike. Had it not been for the assistance rendered the tourists by Mr. Slayback and two or three of his boys their machine would have been destroyed and the men left twenty miles from home without a conveyance. The next time they leave the city in that machine they should have a squad of fire laddies accompany them.

Congressman A. B. Rouse and his cousin, Carl Ronse, who own a farm in partnership out on the Belleview pike, bonght a fine Guernsey bull of Patterson and Rouse, of Fayette county. The young animal arrived at the farm last week, and is pronounced a beauty by all who have seen it. They propose improving the grade of their dairy stock qnite a number of which they have on hand.

Lost or Strayed—Yearling Mammouth Bronze Gobbler. Strayed from my flock of turkeys day before the Harvest Homc. This bird will weigh 50 lbs., has silver band on left leg. One of my old hens and seven of her turkeys also disappeared later. Will be thankful to any one notifying or returning them to me and receiving reward. Mrs. Harmon Jones, Florence, Ky., R. D. 1.

A drove of one thousand turkeys passed through the streets one day last week on the way to the local slaughter pens. They were killed and shipped to Eastern markets. They were brought in from the vicinity of High Bridge and driven to Georgetown. Turkeys driven like hogs on the public roads would be a novelty in some sections of the country. —Times.

The following question has been sent to the Recorder for an answer:

"Has a mail carrier on a Rural Route the right to stop along the way and buy rabbits, furs, etc., and by so doing delay the delivery of the mail from one to two hours?"

(He has not. Unavoidable delay in the delivery of mail only is excnsed by the Postoffice Department.—Ed.)

Democratic Responsibility.

The Democratic party in Kentucky won a great victory at the polls last week; it now faces a great responsibility. The victory was given by the people to the party chiefly on account of the promises made in its platform, looking to the future welfare of the State. If the State issues which were so specifically set forward in the platform, had not been adopted and made part of the Democratic faith there would have been party defeat, instead of party victory.

With this fact, unquestionably in the minds of the people, a great responsibility rests upon the party to redeem its pledges. In the campaign the Democratic newspapers and the Democratic speakers dwelt upon the insincerity of Judge Edward O'Rear, the Republican candidate for Governor, and upon the failure of Governor Augustus E. Willson and President Taft to carry out the pledges they had made to the people. These issues, above everything else, brought to the support of the Democratic ticket thousands of voters and scored the signal triumph at the polls on November 7th.

The people turned against the Republicans because they did not believe in their sincerity and because they had betrayed the people by ~~ignoring~~ their promises and their platform pledges. The Democratic party in Kentucky cannot afford to be guilty of the very things for which it so severely arraigned the Republicans. The responsibility of carrying out fully the platform pledges, not only rests upon every Democrat elected in the state ticket, but upon every member of the Legislature as well. Whatever may be the individual opinion of any member of the Legislature upon any plank in the platform which is at variance with that platform, it should be surrendered to the declaration of party faith.

It would be an act of party disloyalty for any Democratic member of the Legislature to oppose either directly or indirectly the bills introduced in conformity with the various planks in the platform. As men have surrendered their individual choice of candidates for office to accept the party choice, it is just as incumbent upon them to surrender individual opinions upon issues and accept the party's pronouncement as a binding obligation.

If a man refuses to vote and support the candidate of his party, because he preferred some other man as the candidate, he is regarded as a disloyal party man. If he sets up his individual opinion or even the opinion of a majority of the people in his own county, against the accepted will of the majority of the party, as laid down in its platform, he is equally disloyal.

We trust and believe that the Democrats will meet the responsibilities, conferred upon them by the people, by redeeming every pledge that has been made, in order that it cannot be said that the victory was won under false pretenses and so that Kentucky may stay permanently in the Democratic column. We have no reason to believe that any Democratic member of the Legislature will prove recreant to his party obligation, but it is well enough to make clear in advance the responsibilities and obligations which rest upon those who have been entrusted with power. There will be a powerful lobby, armed with all the sinews of war at Frankfort when the Legislature meets, to thwart the will of the people and break down the principles of Democracy as outlined in its platform, for sinister and personal ends. Democrats should be on their guard against the dangers that lurk about them and be prepared to overturn and destroy the efforts which will be resorted to to make Democracy a reproach and its party principles as laid down in the platform a travesty upon truth and sincerity.—Elizabethtown News.

Saved Child From Death.

"After our child had suffered from severe bronchial trouble for a year," wrote G. T. Richardson, of Richardson's Miffs, Ala., we feared it had consumption. It had a bad cough all the time. We tried many remedies without avail, and doctor's medicine seemed as useless. Finally we tried Dr. King's New Discovery, and are pleased to say that one bottle effected a complete cure, and our child is again strong and healthy." For coughs, colds, hoarseness croup lagrippe, asthma and sore lungs, its the most infallible remedy that's made. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free. Guaranteed by all dealers.

A Louisville party has drafted a new law which will be submitted to the next legislature which if adopted will provide that an annual license fee of $5 shall be charged for automobiles, in lieu of all other licenses. It provides that certificates of registration shall be transferable and that all vehicles, buggies, carriages and cars shall be required to display lights when on the highways after 6 o'clock, the same as an automobile. This would be quite an innovation on travel in Krntucky.

ARE THEY AFRAID?

There are, in this neighborhood agents for several "bucket bowl" cream separators. "Bucket bowl" separators are the kind with wide mouth bowls, full of parts, set on top of their spindles. These agents say, to the farmers intending to buy a separator. "Look out for the Tubular," or "Don't try the Tubular," or "Beware of the Tubular." To hear them talk you would guess right away that is the best cream separator made, and that these "bucket bowl" fellows are afraid of it. And they are afraid of it. The Tubular surpasses every other separator in every particular, and you should take mighty good care you do see a Tubular before you buy a separator. We will be pleased to show you the latest Tubular and give you an illustrated catalog.

Observe the plumb bob on rear of the Tubular frame. It makes leveling quick, easy, accurate—enables you to keep the Tubular level and get the best work out of it.

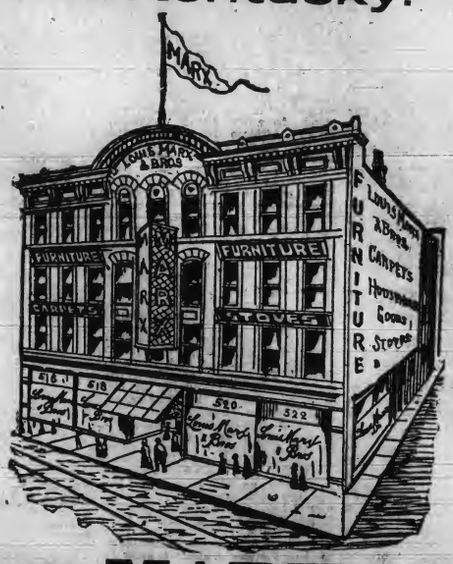
DOG INDUSTRY

Is Flourishing In Kentucky According to Census Man.

The dog industry in Kentucky is holding its own. The county assessors' report for 1911 shows a total of 143,185 dogs, and it is reasonably certain that a good many dogs were not at home when the assessors called. Some of them were out killing sheep. Some of them were out on neighboring farms, and some of them like Brer Rabbit, were "layin' low sayin' nothing." Including the wild dogs which are discovered from time to time by the rural correspondents there must be something like 200,000 canines in Kentucky. Most dogs are hungry three times a day, and then some. It requires a lot of bread and meat and fresh mutton to satisfy the ravenous appetite of 200,000 dogs. It probably would not cost as much to feed 200,000 sheep and the average sheep is worth a great deal more in the market than the average dog. Spring lambs sell like hot cakes at 15 cents a pound, and is likely to be [illegible] at that, while spring pups of the ordinary brand are worth fifteen cents a dozen, either "dressed or on the hoof." There are 119 counties in Kentucky, and accepting the face of the returns there are more than 1,000 dogs to a county. There is a big economical waste in feeding that number of dogs, to say nothing of paying taxes on them, and the vast majority of them do not earn their board and keep. Many of them not only eat up their owners substance, but on occasions eat up their neighbor's property. There are numerous products of which Kentucky needs more crops and bigger crops, but Kentucky would be better off with fewer dogs and smaller ones. There are some industries which require boosting, but the dog-raising industry is doing well with out any extraneous assistance. In fact, it is flourishing and progressing with a perseverance that would be worth more millions to the state if it were exercised in better cause.—C.-J.

Is the World Growing Better?



Many things go to prove that it is. The way thousands are trying to help others is proof. Among them is Mrs. W. W. Gould, of Pittsfield, N. H. Finding good health by taking Electric Bitters, she now advises other sufferers, everywhere, to take them. "For years I suffered with stomach and kidney trouble," she writes. "Every medicine I used failed till I took Electric Bitters. But this great remedy helped me wonderfully." They'll help any woman. They're the best tonic and finest liver and kidney remedy that's made. Try them. You'll see. 50c at all dealers.

The Democratic Congressional Committee of this the Sixth District met in Covington, last Saturday, and called a primary election for February 2, 1912, to nominate a Democratic candidate for Congress to be voted for at the regular election in November, 1912. So far Congressman A. B. Rouse is the only candidate, and as it is customary to give a Congressman at least a second term, the probability is he will have no opposition for the nomination, in which case he will be declared the nominee at a time fixed by the committee. Congressman Rouse is doing all that his constituents require of him, and the record he is making is entirely satisfactory to the district which is sure to honor him with a reelection.

High Living the Cause.

A correspondent in the Breeder's Gazette says: "It is not so much the high cost of living as it is the cost of high living." This is very true. Years of prosperity, big crops and high prices have caused the farmers to raise their ideas of the needs of life. It is not only in the cities that the so-called high cost of living has prevailed. The pace may be set there but it soon pervades the rural districts and the country people vie with their town cousins in driving in nice vehicles, wearing fine clothes and enjoying the new modes of pleasure and pastime, while the incomes from the land remain the same and many times are less. Farmers and their families as a rule live better and dress more expensively than formerly, their children are getting better educations than themselves ever dreamed of, but all this costs money. At the same time money can be well spent for better living without waste.

LAST ROLL CALL.

Answered by John E. Calvert, Who Passes Away at His Home on Lick Creek—Aged 77 Years.

John E. Calvert, bachelor, aged 77, died at his home on Lick creek, last week. He was a son of the late James Calvert, many years ago a very prominent man in the affairs of this county. The deceased is survived by three brothers, Samuel, who lives in Indiana, and Lewis and Jay, with whom he lived. Mr. Calvert was an old soldier, having enlisted in the 23d Kentucky U. S. Infantry early in the civil war and re-enlisted at the expiration of his first three years' of service, serving until he was honorably discharged at the close of the war. John E. Calvert was a most estimable gentleman, courteous, accommodating and ever ready to render his fellowman all the assistance in his power, when in trouble. The high esteem in which he was held in the East Bend neighborhood where he made his home for many years, was the result of the life of an upright man. He had been in poor health for some time, and although it was known he could not survive long, it was with the saddest of hearts that the announcement of his death was received by all who knew

TOBACCO NEWS.

The Burley Society Tuesday amended its ten-year pooling contract to permit growers to prize and store their tobacco in their own barns.

Quite a number of Woodford county growers are taking their crops as soon as they are in condition to the warehouse and are disposing of them at fairly good prices.

Tobacco stripping is going on in Bath county. Very little has been sold, as the buyers are offering but 7 and 8 cents for the best and many of the growers will not take that even if they have to hold this year's crop for several years.

Many of Scott county growers are not nearly so anxious to handle the weed as formerly and some declare that they are willing to take all the winter in stripping it out. Strippers are getting from 50 cents to $1.00 a day for their labor.

Tobias Ellis, of Bourbon county, sold Tuesday at the Growers' Tobacco Warehouse, at Paris, his 1911 crop of tobacco of about 5,-100 pounds, at $9 per hundred. The crop was exceptionally fancy.

The loose leaf tobacco market will open at Springfield December 5th. This market sold 14,000,000 pounds last year. Indications are that many buyers will attend. One party has been buying tobacco in Washington county at from $10 to $14 per hundred.

A meeting of tobacco growers was held at Cynthiana to discuss the provisions of the ten-year pooling plan. When the question was asked if anybody wanted the Burley Society dissolved. It was apparent from the cries that nobody did. When the question was put to the house, "Should the society continue?" the vote in the affirmative was unanimous.

The tobacco in Nicholas county is curing up nicely and the 1911 crop will be much better than it was expected. The market seems to be chaotic as there are no buyers in the field, and no prices are being offered the farmers for their crops.

There has during the past few weeks developed some sentiment favorable to the ten-year pooling plan in the county, and it is thought that there will be several in the county who take kindly to the plan, while heretofore the plan had been scouted at.

It was reported at Augusta, last week, that the officials of the Burley Tobacco Society are having a large number of hogsheads of the 1909 pooled tobacco sampled with a view of selling same at private sale. The tobacco being sampled is now stored in Cincinnati, Shelbyville and Lexington. All grades are included. The Executive Committee is not making its plans public, but it is thought that there is a deal on with the American Tobacco Company for the remainder of the 1909 crop, or at least a large proportion of it, at private sale.

Serious complications that may result in the calling off of all deals relative to the sale of the 12,400,000 pounds of tobacco pooled with the Home Warehouse Company and the Green River District of American Society of Equity have arisen since the refusal of the poolers of McLean county, who control about 4,000,-000 pounds of the pool, to accept the terms of the sale and are standing out for prices ranging from $12 to $8 for the leaf and lugs and $3 for trash, which were fixed by the poolers at a previous meeting. The poolers of Daviess, Hancock and Ohio counties accepted the proposed sale and commended the sales committee for having made such excellent terms, those of $10 to $6 for the leaf and lugs and $3 for the trash. A meeting was held in Owensboro Tuesday, but resulted in no settlement. Another meeting was held yesterday but up to the time of going to press we have not been advised of the result, but it was thought that the poolers would reconsider their former action and sell their 4,000,000 pounds of tobacco.

Wins Fight For Life.

It was a long and bloody battle for life that was waged by James B. Mershon, of Newark, N. J., of which he writes: "I had lost much blood from lung hemorrhages, and was very weak and rundown. For eight months I was unable to work. Death seemed close on my heels, when I began three weeks ago to use Dr. King's New Discovery. But it has helped me greatly. It is doing all that you claim." For weak, sore lungs, obstinate coughs, stubborn colds, hoarseness, lagrippe, asthma, hay-fever or any throat or lung trouble its supreme. Guaranteed by all druggists.

As a part of the plan of the dissolution of the so-called tobacco trust articles have been filed with the Secretary of State for incorporation of the P. Lorillard Company, capital $25,463,200 and for the Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company, capital $36,800,-200.

A Des Moines man had an attack of muscular rheumatism in his shoulder. A friend advised him to go to Hot Springs. That meant an expense of $150 or more. He sought for a quicker and cheaper way to cure it and found it in Chamberlain's Liniment. Three days after the first application he was well. For sale by all dealers.

ARE THEY AFRAID?

Observe the plumb bob on rear of the Tubular frame. It makes leveling quick, easy, accurate—enables you to keep the Tubular level and get the best work out of it.

There are, in this neighborhood agents for several "bucket bowl" cream separators. "Bucket bowl" separators are the kind with wide mouth bowls, full of parts, set on top of their spindles. These agents say, to the farmers intending to buy a separator. "Look out for the Tubular," or "Don't try the Tubular," or "Beware of the Tubular." To hear them talk you would guess right away that is the best cream separator made, and that these "bucket bowl" fellows are afraid of it. And they are afraid of it. The Tubular surpasses every other separator in every particular, and you should take mighty good care you do see a Tubular before you buy a separator. We will be pleased to show you the latest Tubular and give you an illustrated catalog.

Just Sit at a Desk 365 Days Per Annum and Read Contributions.

Most any one can be an editor All the editor has to do is to sit at a desk six days out of the week, four weeks of the month and twelve months of the year and "edit stuff as this:

Mrs Jones of Cactus Creek let a can opener slip last week and cut herself in the pantry." A mischievous lad of Piketown threw a stone and struck Mr Pike in the alley last Tuesday." "John Doe climbed on the roof of his house last week looking for a leak and fell, striking himself on the back porch."

"While Harold Green was escorting Miss Violet Wise from the church social last Saturday night a savage dog attacked them and bit Mr Green several times on the public square."

"Isiah Trimer of Running Creek was playing with a cat Friday when it scratched him on the veranda." "Mr. Fong while harnessing a broncho last Saturday was kicked just south of his corn patch." Yes, its a wonder they draw salaries for it.—American Press

Wants the School Law Amended.

On January 1, our state legislature convenes and laws for the good of the people should be passed. Our school laws should be amended a little here and there but there is likely to come the trouble and to this our representatives and senators should give their careful attention and not be too hasty in passing any bill along this line. There are a few people who think they know all about the conditions of the schools of the state and that their views should be put into laws. The fact is a law to fit the different conditions of Kentucky schools should be very flexible and should be carefully discussed by the people of all sections before passing it. No senator or representative cannot afford to vote on these bills without first submitting them to their constituency.—Owen Co. Democrat.

Why Your Cow Kicks.

If your cow kicks find out why. Maybe your finger nails are too long and hurt her, then she has a right to kick. Maybe she has sore teats or udder; remove the cause before you blame her. If it is simply a bad habit take up one fore foot, fold it up backward and buckle a small strap around it. Another way, tie a small cord or strap snugly around her body just before the udder or back of her ribs, not too tight; she can't kick much either way. Treat her gently and keep her contented and quiet. Feed judiciously and generously if you want good milk and plenty of it. She can't make good milk and cream out of scenery and water, moonshine or filth. Give her good water in plenty. The cow is a machine to make milk out of feed and water. If she has bad water the milk is bad. Do not compel or allow her to drink bad water.

Milk regularly at same hours. Milk clean and cleanly in clean vessels. Do not allow dogs, boisterous boys or men, around cattle if you want profits.

International Harvester Co.

Frankfort, Nov. 30.—The International Harvester Co., of America has come into the Appellate Court through its chief attorney in Kentucky, Judge Alex. P. Humphrey, of Louisville, with the assertion that trusts and combinations have the lawful right to do business in Kentucky, altho proscribed to other states, and demand that the Appellate Court devise some way and lay down a rule to ascertain the real value of the articles sold by the International Harvester Company.

This demand was made in the argument in the case of the International Harvester Co., against the commonwealth of Kentucky in the consolidated cases appealed from Oldham, Bullitt, Anderson and Spencer counties. The company has been indicted and fined $9,500 in Oldham county on the charge of maintaining a trust and violating the antitrust laws of this State. The demurrers to the indictment in Anderson and Spencer counties were sustained by the lower Court.

This week the Recorder carries the announcement of Hon. A. B. Rouse as a candidate for nomination and reelection to Congress. It can be said, truly, of Mr. Rouse that he is on to his job at Washington and that the interest of the Sixth District is being closely looked after by him. In the matter of oratory he is not the equal of some of the other members of the Kentucky delegation, but when it comes to hard, honest and successful work none of them have anything on the member from the Sixth District. He is proving his usefulness at the National Capitol in a manner highly gratifying to the Democrats in the district, and, as yet, there is no indication that he will have any opposition in the party, which will be exactly to the liking of his home county.

Threatened With a Deficit.

Frankfort, Nov. 30.—Unless the incoming Legislature reapportions the taxes or adopts an improved system of taxation it is probable that the deficit in the State Treasury at the end of the next fiscal year will be over $1,000,000, Auditor Frank P. James has made this prediction in his report to the General Assembly, which has been sent to the State printer for publication and dis-

AND THIS IS MAN!

He Is Mighty Small Doughnuts and Few in a Paper Bag.

What is man that he should hypnotize himself into believing that he is the big noise?

Man, proud man, born of woman is small doughnuts and few in a paper bag.

He springs up to-day and flourishes like a bootlegger in a dusty town, and tomorrow or the day after the undertaker comes with his tapeline and takes his measure.

He weds a wealthy girl with a joblot of freckles and the next day her pa fails with many liabilities and no assets, and comes to abide thenceforth with his start led son-in-law.

The cellar door of life is for him full of pestiferous splinters, but he slides down it with utter disregard of the speed limit.

He goes forth in the early morning to conquer the world, but the world refuses to be conquered, and so he comes home in an ambulance.

In the midst of life he runs into debt, but he crawls out at a snail's pace—if at all.

He struts down the boulevard with his head high in the air and meets the bank teller with a sign draft for $11s, and a bill collector flags him at every corner.

He climbs aboard the trolley car and goes to the horse trot but much dust adheres to his shoes on his homeward journey.

He sits up at 3 a. m. to hear the election returns from the back townships and learns in the end that the other fellow has copped his bet.

He lays up a goodly pile of riches in the bank, and the cashier monkeys with margins and steals away between two days to pick bananas in Honduras.

He remains late at the office chasing a trial balance to its lair, then goes home to encounter a rocking chair in the dimly light ed hall. The rocker raises in its might and puts him on the mat.

He invests in a watch dog, and when he returns to his wigwam after a prolonged lodge session the dog refuses to recognize him, and so he roosts in a tree until the milkman comes.

In the early spring he discards his flannels, and a breeze from Medicine Hat comes his way and he is filled to overflowing with rheumatism.

With the advent of summer he goes into camp and gorges himself with vegetables fresh from the rusty cans of the village grocer, and a multitude of creeping things hold nightly carnival on his person.

In the fall begins the winter of his discontent. The furnace camps on his trail and he is filled with wood, soot, ashes and profanity.

He puts on his autumn trousers, and a fussy wasp that has taken up its abode therein disputs his right and title thereto.

He transfers a mammoth potted palm from the front porch to the cellar. He goes down the steps in advance with considerable suddenness, and the palm follows quickly and sits upon him triumphantly.

And this is man—proud man!

Powder Mills Sued.

The Dupont Powder Company is having considerable difficulty in finding a place to unload dynamite and other high explosives which are to be stored in its powder mill, located on the Bromley pike, erected about a year ago. Several consignments of dynamite were shipped to the mill via the Queen and Crescent Railway and were unloaded in Ludlow, and transported to the mill in wagons. On account of the danger, the officials of Ludlow refused to allow other cars to be unloaded there. The powder people then selected Crescent Springs, near Erlanger, as the most available point to unload the explosives.

Eugene Jonas, a business man of Crescent Springs, swore out a warrant in the Kenton County Court at Covington, charging the Dupont Powder Company and the C. N. O. and T. P. Railway Company jointly with maintaining a nuisance. It is said that the railway company has ordered the Dupont people to unload the cars immediately upon arrival or the shipments would be refused. Two cars of dynamite arrived in Crescent Springs recently and it is claimed were left on the track several days, which resulted in the action being brought by Mr. Jonas.

He claims that the cars are within thirty-six feet of his place of business and just a few feet from the railway depot; that no watchman or agent is stationed there and that tramps are in the habit of building fires and using the place as a shelter from the cold.

There are some citizens who say Walton can not be aroused in that matter, but they are certainly mistaken. All may not care to go back to the spelling book but many are willing, and not too old to learn and use the things necessary to put Walton in the front rank for good citizenship. Let the League go forward with its object.

The carriers on the rural routes complain that the custom of leaving pennies in mail boxes for the purpose of paying postage on matter deposited in the box for the carrier, has grown until it is a hardship on them, and especially during cold weather, during which they often find the pennies frozen to the bottom of the boxes, and are hard to remove on account of their fingers being numbed by the cold. Owners of boxes are required by the Postoffice Department to put the necessary stamps on the matter they mail or provide small, wooden trays in their boxes in which to place their money for postage so a carrier can pick it up and dump the contents without any unnecessary delay. By complying with the law in the above respects the box owners will not only favor the carrier but will save time for him, which for the next several months will be greatly appreciated. The carrier always has with him a supply of stamps and from him you can obtain all you want.

TAFT IS FOR TRUST LAW

Annual Message Deals With One Subject.

DEFENDS DECISIONS OF COURT

In Cases of Standard Oil and Tobacco Companies.

THINKS AMENDMENTS NEEDED

Believes Present Statutes Good as Far as They Go but Suggests Supplemental Legislation—For Federal Corporation Law.

Washington, Dec. 5.—President Taft's annual message, which was read in both houses of congress today, deals exclusively with the anti-trust statute. The full text of the message is as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives: This message is the first of several which I shall send to congress during the interval between the opening of its regular session and its adjournment for the Christmas holidays. The amount of information to be communicated as to the operations of the government, the number of important subjects calling for comment by the executive, and the transmission to congress of exhaustive reports by special commissions, make it impossible to include in one message of a reasonable length a discussion of the topics that ought to be brought to the attention of the national legislature at its first regular session.

The Anti-Trust Law—The Supreme Court Decisions.

In May last the Supreme court handed down decisions in the suits in equity brought by the United States to enjoin the further maintenance of the Standard Oil trust and of the American Tobacco trust, and to secure their dissolution. The decisions are epoch-making and serve to advise the business world authoritatively of the scope and operation of the anti-trust act of 1890. The decisions do not depart in any substantial way from the previous decisions of the court in construing and applying this important statute, but they clarify those important decisions by further defining the already admitted exceptions to the literal construction of the act. By the decrees, they furnish a useful precedent as to the proper method of dealing with the capital and property of illegal trusts. These decisions suggest the need and wisdom of additional or supplemental legislation to make it easier for the entire business community to square with the rule of action and legality thus finally established and to preserve the benefit, freedom and spur of reasonable competition without loss of real efficiency or progress.

No Change in the Rule of Decision—Merely in Its Form of Expression.

The statute in its first section declares to be illegal "every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several states or with foreign nations," and in the second, declares guilty of a misdemeanor every person who shall monopolize or attempt to monopolize or combine or conspire with any other person to monopolize any part of the trade or commerce of the several states or with foreign nations."

In two early cases, where the statute was invoked to enjoin a transportation agreement between interstate railroad companies, it was held that it was no defense to show that the agreement as to rates complained of was reasonal at common law, because it was said that the statute was directed against all contracts and combinations in restraint of trade whether reasonal at common law or not. It was plain from the record, however, that the contracts complained of in those cases would not have been deemed reasonable at common law. In subsequent cases the court said that the statute should be given a reasonal construction and refused to include within its inhibition certain contractual restraints of trade which it dominated as incidental or as indirect.

These cases of restraint of trade that the court excepted from the operation of the statute were instances which, at common law, would have been called reasonable. In the Standard Oil and Tobacco cases, therefore, the court merely adopted the tests of the common law, and in defining exceptions to the literal application of the statute, only substituted for the test of being incidental or indirect, that of being reasonable and this, without varying in the slightest the actual scope and effect of the statute. In other words, all the cases under the statute which have now been decided would have been decided the same way if the court had originally accepted in its construction the rule at common law.

It has been said that the court, by its decisions into the construction of the statute common law distinctions, has emasculated it. This is obviously untrue. By its judgment every contract and combination in restraint of interstate trade made with the purpose or necessary effect of controlling prices by stifling competition, or of establishing in whole or in part a monopoly of such trade, is condemned by the statute. The most extreme critics cannot instance a case that ought to be condemned under the statute which is not brought within its terms as thus construed.

The suggestion is also made that the Supreme court by its decision in the last two cases has committed to the court the undefined and unlimited discretion to determine whether a case of restraint of trade is within the terms of the statute. This is wholly untrue. A reasonable restraint of trade at common law is well understood and is clearly defined. It does not rest in the discretion of the court. It must be limited to accomplish the purpose of a lawful main contract to which, in order that it shall be enforceable at all, it must be incidental. If it exceeds the needs of that contract it is void.

The test of reasonableness was never applied by the court at common-law to contracts or combinations or conspiracies in restraint of trade whose purpose was or whose necessary effect would be to stifle competition, to control prices, or establish monopolies. The courts never assumed power to say that such contracts or combinations or conspiracies might be lawful if the parties to them were only moderate in the use of the power thus secured and did not exact from the public too great and exorbitant prices. It is true that many theorists, and others engaged in business violating the statue, have hoped that some such line could be drawn by courts; but no court of authority has ever attempted it. Certainly there is nothing in the decisions of the latest two cases which should be a dangerous theory of judicial discretion in enforcing this statue can derive the slightest sanction.

Force and Effectiveness of Statute a Matter of Growth.

We have been twenty-one years making this statue effective for the purposes for which it was enacted. The Knight case was discouraging and seemed to remit to the states the whole available power to attack and suppress the evils of the trusts. Slowly, however, the errors of that judgment was corrected, and only in the last three or four years has the heavy hand of the law been laid upon the great illegal combinations that have exercised such an absolute dominion over many of our industries. Criminal prosecutions have been brought and a number are pending, but juries have felt averse to convicting for jail sentences, and judges have been most reluctant to impose such sentences on men of respectable standing in society whose offense has been regarded as merely statutory. Still, as the offense becomes better understood and the committing of it partakes more of studied and deliberate defiance of the law, we can be confident that juries will convict individuals and that jail sentences will be imposed.

The Remedy in Equity by Dissolution.

In the Standard Oil case the Supreme and circuit courts found the combination to be a monopoly of the interstate business of refining, transporting, and marketing petroleum and its products, effected and maintained through thirty-seven different corporations, the stock of which was held by a New Jersey company. It in effect commanded the dissolution of this combination, directed the transfer and pro-rata distribution by the New Jersey company of the stock held by it in the thirty-seven corporations to and among its stockholders, and the corporations and individual defendants were enjoined from conspiring or combining to restore such monopoly; and all agreements between the subsidiary corporations tending to produce or bring about further violations of the act were enjoined.

In the Tobacco case, the court found that the individual defendants, twenty-nine in number, had been engaged in a successful effort to acquire complete dominion over the manufacture, sale, and distribution of tobacco in this country and abroad, and that this had been done by combinations made with a purpose and effect to stifle competition, control prices, and establish a monopoly, not only in the manufacture of tobacco, but also of tin-foil and licorice used in its manufacture and of its products of cigars, cigarettes, and snuffs. The tobacco suit presented a far more complicated and difficult case than the Standard Oil suit for a decree which would effectuate the will of the court and end the violation of the statute. There was here no single holding company as in the case of the Standard Oil trust. The main company was the American Tobacco company, a manufacturing, selling, and holding company. The plan adopted to destroy the combination and restore competition involved the redivision of the capital and plants of the whole trust between some of the companies constituting the trust and new companies organized for the purposes of the decree and made parties to it, and numbering, new and old, fourteen.

Situation After Readjustment.

The American Tobacco company (old) radjusted capital, $92,000,000; the Liggett and Meyers Tobacco company (new) capital, $67,000,000; the P. Lorillard company (new) capital, $47,060,000, and the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco company (old) capital, $7,525,000, are chiefly engaged in the manufacture and sale of chewing and smoking tobacco and cigars. The former one tin-foil company is divided into two, one of $825,000 capital and the other of $400,000. The ona snuff company is divided into three companies, one with a capital of $15,000,000; another with a capital of $8,000,000; and a third with a capital of $8,000,000. The licorice companies are two, one with a capital of $5,758,00 and another with a capital of $2,000,000. There is, also, the British-American Tobacco company, a British corporation, doing business abroad with a capital of $26,000,000, the Porto Rican Tobacco company with a capital of $1,800,000, and the corporation of United Cigar Stores, with a capital of $9,000,000. Under this arrangement each of the different kinds of business will be distributed between two or more companies, with a division of the prominent brands in the sama tobacco products, so as to make competition not only possible but necessary. Thus the smoking tobacco business of the country is divided so that the present independent companies have 21.39 per cent., while tha American Tobacco company will have 32.08 per cent., the Liggett and Meyers 20.05 per cent., the Lorillard company 22.82 per cent., and the Reynolds company 2.66 per cent. The stock of the other thirteen companies, both preferred and common, has been taken from the defendant American Tobacco company and has been distributed among its stockholders. All covenants restricting competition have been declared null and further performance of them has been enjoined. The preferred stock of the different companies haa now been given voting power which was denied it under the old organization. The ratio of the preferred stock to the common was as 78 to 40. This constitutes a very decided change in the character of the ownership and control of each company.

In the original suit there were twenty-nine defendants who were charged with being the conspirators through wbom the illegal combination acquired and exercised its unlawful dominion. Under the decree these defendants will hold amounts of stock in the various distributee companies ranging from 41 per cent. as a maximum, to 28½ per cent. as a minimum, except in the case of one small company, the Porto Rican Tobacco company, in which they will hold 45 per cent. The twenty-nina individual defendants are enjoined for three years from buying any stock except from each other, and the group is thus prevented from extending its control during that period. All parties to the suit, and the new companies who are made parties, are enjoined perpetually from in any way effecting any combination between any of the companies in violation of the statute by way of resumption of the old trust. Each of the fourteen companies is enjoined from acquiring stock in any of the others. All these companies are enjoined from having common directors or officers, or common buying or selling agents, or common offices, or lending money to each other.

Size of New Companies.

Objection was made by certain independent tobacco companies that this settlement was unjust because it left companies with very large capital in active business, and that the settlement that would be effective to put all on an equality would be a division of the capital and plant of the trust into small factions in amount more nearly equal to that of each of the independent companies. This contention results from a misunderstanding of the anti-trust law and its purpose. It is not intended thereby to prevent the accumulation of large capital in business enterprises in which such a combination can secure reduced cost of production, sale and distribution. It is directed against such an aggregation of capital only when its purpose is that of stifling competition, enhancing or controlling prices and establishing a monopoly. If we shall have by the decree defeated these purposes and restored competition between the large units into which the capital and plant have been divided, we shall have accomplished the useful purpose of the statute.

Confiscation Not the Purpose of the Statute.

It is not the purpose of the statute to confiscate the property and capital of the offending trusts. Methods of punishment by fine or imprisonment of the individual offenders, by fine of the corporation, or by forfeiture of its goods in transportation, are provided, but the proceeding in equity is a specific remedy to stop the operation of the trust by injunction and prevent the future use of the plant and capital in violation of the statute.

Effectivaness of Decrae.

I venture to say that not in the history of American law has a decree more effective for such a purpose been entered by a court than that against the Tobacco trust. As Circuit Judge Noyes said in his judgment approving the decree:

"The extent to which it has been necessary to tear apart this combination and force it into new forms with the attendant burdens ought to demonstrate that the federal anti-trust statute is a drastic statute which accomplishes effective results; which so long as it stands on the statute books must be obeyed, and which cannot be disobeyed without incurring farreaching penalities. And, on the other hand, the successful reconstruction of this organization should teach that the effect of enforcing this statute is not to destroy, but to reconstruct; not to demolish but to recreate in accordance with the conditions which the congress has declared shall exist among the people of the United States."

Common-Stock Ownership.

It has been assumed that the present pro-rata and common ownership in all these companies by former stockholders of the trust would insure a continuance of the same old single control of all the companies into which the trust has by decree been disintegrated. This is erroneous and is based upon the assumed inefficacy and innocuousness of judicial injunctions. The companies are enjoined from co-operation or combination; they have different managers, directors, purchasing and sales agents. If all or any of the numerous stockholders, reaching into the thousands, attempt to secure concerted action of the companies with a view to the control of the market, their number is so large that such an attempt could not well be concealed and its prime movers and all its participants would be at once subject to contempt proceedings and imprisonment of a summary character. The immediate result of the present situation will necessarily be activity by all the companies under different managers, and then competition must follow, or there will be activity by one company and stagnation by another. Only a short time will inevitably lead to a change in ownership of the stock, as all opportunity for continued co-operation must disappear. Those critics who speak of this disintegration in the trust as a mere change of garments have not given consideration to the inevitable working of the decree and understand little the personal danger of attempting to evade or set at naught the solemn injunction of a court whose object is made plain by the decree and whose inhibitions are set forth with a detail and comprehensiveness unexampled in the history of equity jurisprudence.

The effect of these two decisions has led to decrees dissolving the combination of manufacturers of electric lamps, a southern wholesale grocers' association, an interlocutory decree against the powder trust with directions by the circuit court compelling dissolution, and other combinations of a similar history are now negotiating with the department of justice looking to a disintegration by decree and reorganization in accordance with law. It seems possible to bring about these reorganizations without general business disturbance.

Movament for Repeal of the Anti-Trust Law.

But now that the anti-trust act is seen to be effective for the accomplishment of the purpose of its enactment, we are met by a cry from many different quarters for its repeal. It is said to ba obstructive of business progress, to be an attempt to restore old-fashioned methods of destructive competition between small units, and to make impossible those useful combinations of capital and the reduction of the cost of production that are essential to continued prosperity and normal growth.

In the recent decisions the Supreme court makes clear that there is nothing in the statute which condemns combinations of capital or mere bigness of plant organized to secure economy in production and a reduction of its cost. It is only when the purpose or necessary effect of the organization and maintenance of the combination or the aggregation of immense size are the stifling of competition, actual and potential, and the enhancing of prices and establishing a monopoly, that the statute is violated. Mere size is no sin against the law. The merging of two or more business plants necessarily eliminates competition between the units thus combined, but this elimination is in contravention of the statute only when the combination is made for purpose of ending this particular competition in order to secure control of, and enhance, prices and create a monopoly.

Lack of Definiteness in the Statute.

The complaint is made of the statute that it is not sufficiently definite in its description of that which is forbidden, to enable business men to avoid its violation. The suggestion is, that we may have a combination of two corporations, which may run on for years, and that subsequently the attorney general may conclude that it was a violation of the statute, and that which was supposed by the combiners to be innocent then turns out to be a combination in violation of the statute. The answer to this hypothetical case is that when men attempt to amass stupendous capital as will enable them to suppress competition, control prices and establish a monopoly they know the purpose of their acts. Men do not do such a thing without having it clearly in mind. If what they do is merely for the purpose of reducing the cost of production, without the thought of suppressing competition by use of the bigness of the plant they are creating, then they cannot be convicted at the time the union is made, nor can they be convicted later, unless it happen that later on they conclude to suppress competition and take the usual methods for doing so, and thus establish for themselves a monopoly. They can, in such a case, hardly complain if the motive which subsequently is disclosed is attributed by the court to the original combination.

New Remedies Suggested.

Much is said of the repeal of this statute and of constructive legislation intended to accomplish the purpose and blaze a clear path for honest merchants and business men to follow. It may be that such a plan will be evolved, but I submit that the discussions which have been brought out in recent days by the fear of the continued execution of the anti-trust law have produced nothing but glittering generalities and have offered no line of distinction or rule of action so definite and as clear as that which the Supreme court itself lays down in enforcing the statute.

Supplemental Legislation Needed—Not Repeal or Amendment.

I see no objection—and indeed I can see decided advantages—in the enactment of a law which shall describe and denounce methods of competition, which are unfair and are badges of the unlawful purpose denounced in the anti-trust law. The attempt and purpose to suppress a competitor by underselling him at a price so unprofitable as to drive him out of business, or the making of exclusive contracts with customers under which they are required to give up association with other manufacturers, and numerous kindred methods for stifling competition and effecting monopoly, should be described with sufficient accuracy in a criminal statute on the one hand to enable the government to shorten its task by prosecuting single misdemeanors instead of an entire conspiracy, and, on the other hand, to serve the purpose of pointing out more in detail to the business community what must be avoided.

Federal Incorporation Recommandad.

In a special message to congress on January 7, 1910, I ventured to point out the disturbance to business that would probably attend the dissolution of these offending trusts. I said:

"But such an investigation and possible prosecution of corporations whose prosperity or destruction affects the comfort not only of stockholders but of millions of wage earners, employes, and associated tradesmen must necessarily tend to disturb the confidence of the business community, to dry up the now flowing sources of capital from its places of hoarding, and produce a halt in our present prosperity that will cause suffering and strained circumstances among the innocence many for the faults of the guilty few. The question which I wish in this message to bring clearly to the consideration and discussion of congress is whether, in order to avoid such a possible business danger, something cannot be done by which these business combinations may be offered a means, without great financial disturbance, of changing the character, organization, and extent of their business into one within the lines of the law under federal control and supervision, securing compliance with the anti-trust statute.

"Generally, in the industrial combinations called 'Trusts,' the principal business is the sale of goods in many states and in foreign markets; in other words, the interstate and foreign business far exceeds the business done in any one state. This fact will justify the federal government in granting a federal charter to such a combination to make and sell in interstate and foreign commerce the products of useful manufacture under such limitations as will secure a compliance with the anti-trust law. It is possible so to frame a statute that while it offers protection to a federal company against harmful, vexatious, and unnecessary invasion by the states, it shall subject it to reasonable taxation and control by the states with respect to its purely local business.

"Corporations organized under this act should be prohibited from acquiring and holding stock in other corporations (except for special reasons, upon approval by the proper federal authority), thus avoiding the creation under national auspices of the holding company with subordinate corporations in different states, which has been such an effective agency in the creation of the great trusts and monopolies.

"If the prohibition of the anti-trust act against combinations in restraint of trade is to be effectual, enforced, it is essential that the national government shall provide for the creation of national corporations to carry on a legitimate business throughout the United States. The conflicting laws of the different states of the Union with respect to foreign corporations makes it difficult, if not impossible, for one corporation to comply with their requirements so as to carry on business in a number of different states."

I renew the recommendation of the enactment of a general law providing for the voluntary formation of corporations to engage in trade and commerce among the states and with foreign nations. Every argument which was then advanced for such a law, and every explanation which was at that time offered to possible objections, have been confirmed by our experience since the enforcement of the anti-trust statute has resulted in the actual dissolution of active commercial organizations.

It is even more manifest now than it was then that the denunciation of conspiracies in restraint of trade should not and does not mean the denial of organizations large enough to be intrusted with our interstate and foreign trade. If has been made more clear now than it was then that a purely negative statute like the anti-trust law may well be supplemented by specific provisions for the building up and regulation of legitimate national and foreign commarce.

Government Administrative Experts Needed to Aid Courts in Trust Dissolutions.

The drafting of the decrees in the dissolution of the present trusts, with a view to their reorganization into legitimate corporations, has made it especially apparent that the courts are not provided with the administrative machinery to make the necessary inquiries preparatory to reorganization, or to pursue such inquiries, and they should be empowered to invoke the aid of the bureau of corporations in determining the suitable provisions for the segregating parts. The circuit court and the attorney general were greatly aided in framing the decree in the tobacco trust dissolution by an expert from the bureau of corporations.

Fedaral Corporation Commission Proposed.

I do not set forth in detail the terms and sections of a statute which might supply the constructive legislation permitting and aiding the formation of combinations of capital into federal corporations. They should be subject to rigid rules as to their organization and procedure, including effective publicity, and to the closest supervision as to the issue of stock and bonds by an executive bureau or commission in the department of commerce and labor, to which in times of doubt they might wall submit their proposed plans for future business. It must be distinctly understood that incorporation under a federal law could not exempt tha company thus formed and its incorporators and managers from prosecution under the anti-trust law for subsequent illegal conduct, but tha publicity of its procedure and the opportunity for frequent consultation with the bureau or commission in charge of the incorporation as to the legitimate purpose of its transactions would offer it as great security against successful prosecutions for violations of the law as would be practical or wise.

Such a bureau or commission might well be invested also with the duty already referred to, of aiding courts in the dissolution and recreation of trusts within the law. It should be an executive tribunal of the dignity and power of the comptroller of the currency or the interstate commerca commission, which now exercise supervisory power over important classes of corporations under federal regulation.

The drafting of such a federal incorporation law would offer ample opportunity to prevent many manifest evils in corporate management today, including irresponsibility of control in the hands of the few who are not the real owners.

Incorporation Voluntary.

I recommend that the federal charters thus to be granted shall be voluntary, at least until experience justifies mandatory provisions. The benefit to be derived from the operation of great businesses under the protection of such a charter would attract all who are anxious to keep within the lines of the law. Other large combinations that fail to take advantage of the federal incorporation will not have a right to complain if their failure is ascribed to unwillingness to submit their transactions to the careful scrutiny, competent supervision and publicity attendant upon the enjoyment of such a charter.

Supplemantal Legislation Nasded.

The opportunity thus suggested for federal incorporation, it seems to me, is suitable constructive legislation needed to facilitate the squaring of great industrial enterprises to the rule of action laid down by the anti-trust law. This statute is construed by the Supreme court must continue to be the line of distinction for legitimate business. It must be enforced, unless we are to banish individualism from all business and reduce it to one common system of regulation or control of prices like that which now prevails with respect to public utilities, and which when applied to all business would be a long step toward state socialism.

Importance of the Anti-Trust Act.

The anti-trust act is the expression of the effort of a freedom-loving people to preserve equality of opportunity. It is the result of the confident determination of such a people to maintain their future growth by preserving uncontrolled and unrestricted the enterprise of the individual, his ingenuity, his intelligence and his independent courage.

For twenty years or more this statute has been upon the statute book. All knew of its general purpose and approved. Many of its violators were cynical over its assumed impotence.

It seemed impossible of enforcement. Slowly the mills of the courts ground, and only gradually did the majesty of the law assert itself. Many of its statesmen-authors died before it became a living force, and they and others saw the evil grow which they had hoped to destroy. Now, its efficacy is seen; now its power is heavy; now its object is near achievement. Now we hear the call for its repeal on the plea that it interferes with business prosperity, and we are advised in most general terms how, by some other statute and in some other way, the evil we are just stamping out can be cured, if we only abandon this work of twenty years and try another experiment for another term of years.

It is said that the act has not done good. Can this be said in the face of the effect of the Northern Securities decree?

That decree was in no way so drastic or inhibitive in detail as either the Standard Oil decree or the tobacco decree; but did it not stop for all time the then powerful movement toward the control of all the railroads of the country in a single band?

Such a one-man power could not have been a healthful instance in the republic, even though exercised under the general supervision of an interstate commission.

Do we desire to make such ruthless combinations and monopolies lawful? When all energies are directed, not toward the reduction of the cost of production for the public benefit by a healthful competition, but toward new ways and means for making permanent in a few hands the absolute control of the conditions and prices prevailing in the whole field of industry, then individual enterprise and effort will be paralyzed and the spirit of commercial freedom will be dead.

RETURN TO THE LAND

The Only Means By Which the Great Demand for Food Supplies Can be Met.

The world-wide discontent, occasioned largely by the high cost of the necessaries of life, the protest of all classes in the cities at the extraordinary high prices of provisions, have aroused economists of every school to action looking to the greater production from farming lands.

It has become a governmental question, a public problem, and with many a personal study of the very best, most efficient and speediest methods to increase the quantities of food produced from the soil.

Intensive farming, if greatly extended over additional areas than those now so cultivated, promises partial relief from present scarcity, but the mass of opinion, as well as the greater effort, is fixed upon what is known as "back to the farm" movement and by the increase in the number of active cultivators to provide for ample supplies.

The people of the continent of Europe are suffering far more than those of the British Isles from the extremely high prices occasioned by a demand which has run far beyond any increase in production but the working people of Britain are feeling the struggle for existence growing more difficult with every year.

For the past fourteen years agricultural pursuits have been exceedingly profitable, and looking forward today, not an industry nor an enterprise in the world presents such certainty of profit in the years to come as does that of farming, producing the food supplies for the inhabitants of the globe.

There seems no limit to the demand, now that transportation is available for every sea and in every country.

Senator Jules Meline, former Premier of France, in his book entitled "The Return to the Land," speaking evidently of the conditions in that republic puts it strongly in these words: "When our workers, alike in town and country, have begun to eat more bread and meat and vegetables and cheese and fruit, the land will have to be cultivated more and more; no one can form any idea of the enormous quantities that can be absorbed by mankind."

The millions of men, women and children upon our own continent who today are without sufficient food, owing to the prevailing high prices, caused largely by a limited production, would prove profitable purchasers of the products of ten millions of acres additional in our cultivated area if the prices were lowered but a small percentage.

Our cities and our industrial districts with all their activities and the regular employment of labor at the highest standard of wages ever reached, have millions of their workers without a financial surplus after household expenses are paid.

The preservation of the energies of our people demands a lessening in the cost of food, an increase in the number of cultivators of the soil.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Bob Burdette to Young Men.

Remember my son, you have to work. Whether you handle the pick or a pen, a wheelbarrow or a set of books, dig ditches or edit a paper, ring an auction bell or write funny things, you must work. If you look around you will see men who are the most able to live the rest of their days without work are the men who work the hardest.

Don't be afraid of killing yourself with overwork. It is beyond your power to do that on the sunny side of thirty. They die sometimes, but it is because they quit work at six p. m. and don't get home until 2 a. m. It is intervals that kill, my son.

The work gives you an appetite for your meals; it lends solidity to your slumbers; it gives you perfect and grateful appreciation of a holiday.

There are young men who do not work, but the world is proud of them. It does not know their names even, it simply speaks of them as "old So and So's boys." Nobody likes them; the great busy world doesn't know that they are there. So find out what you want to be and do and take off your coat and make dust in the world.

The busier you are the less harm you are apt to get into, the sweeter will be your sleep, the brighter and happier your holiday, and the better satisfied the world will be with you.

COME TO COVINGTON AS OFTEN AS YOU LIKE, WE'LL PAY your Railroad Fare in Cash or We'll pay you three cents a mile if you drive in.

OUR PROPOSITION:

We refund Railroad fares, Trolly Car fares and Steam Boat fares, or will allow three cents per mile for persons driving into Covington and purchasing goods from any or all of the stores of the members of the Retail Merchants' Association of the Industrial Club of Covington, on a basis of one mile for each dollar's worth of goods purchased. To illustrate:—If you travel, say ten miles, you would be required to purchase at least $30.00 worth of goods in order to have your entire Railroad fare refunded; you having traveled ten miles each way, making a total of twenty miles.

If your total purchase amounts to a less number of dollars than miles you travel, we will refund as many miles of your fare as the number of dollars you spend with members of our Association.

On the other hand, if you spend a greater number of dollars than miles you travel, in addition to your entire fare or mileage, we will refund one percent on the purchase you make in excess of the amount necessary to secure the refund of your fare.

By this plan you not only have your Railroad fare or mileage paid, but you can take advantage of many Special Sales that the members of our Association continually offer.

Covington merchandise has a State-wide reputation for excellence and up-to-dateness—Covington values are always a bit better than most people expect—Covington prices are always a shade lower. And there is a reason for these better values and lower prices. Come to Covington and see.

We are members of the Retail Merchants' Association of Covington, and will rebate fares on plan outlined above.

Ask for Refund Book at any of these Stores. Notice—In order to obtain Rebate, Rebate Book must be asked for at time of purchase.

The members and guests were then given an opportunity to mingle together in social converse, and there was a genuine hearty greeting to each other. Refreshments of cream, cake, coffee and chocolate were served, following which short addresses were made by Prof. J. G. Prather, Dr. B. W. Stallard, W. S. Wilson, Dr. G. C. Rankins, Dr. B. K. Menefee, A. E. Johnson, Jno. L. Vest, J. H. Jackson, S. L. Edwards, J. G. Tomlin, Bro. Schmitte, D. B. Wallace and others. Bro. Joseph Reed was called upon again for a poetical selection and kindly responded in a manner that was greatly appreciated. At about 11 o'clock "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," was sung by the entire assemblage, and Bro. W. R. Rouse asked a prayerful benediction. An adjournment was then taken to the opera house where those who desired enjoyed the pleasures of an old fashioned quadrille and the art of terpsichore until the midnight hour, when a pleasant "good night" was said to all. The evening was a most happy one to everybody. The beautiful music interspersed the program, and genuine good fellowship was manifest on every hand. Mrs. J. M. Stamler served the refreshments in her characteristic excellent style and the committee of arrangements made every effort to make it an occasion one long to be remembered as one of the most pleasureable in masonic circles. It was one of the nicest gatherings of elegant ladies and gentlemen that could be assembled together, and the masonic brethren are particularly proud of the success of their reception which will carry with it most pleasant memories for years to come.

time I was on a horse," she told him. "I was born on a ranch, you know, and they couldn't keep me away from the horses."

And thereat she told him more of her ranch life in the days before her father died. And Daylight was hugely pleased with himself. They were getting acquainted. The conversation had not lagged in the full half hour they had been together. When she talked, he listened and followed her, and yet all the while he was following his own thoughts and impressions as well. It was a nervy thing for her to do, this riding astride, and he didn't know, after all, whether he liked it or not. His ideas of women were prone to be old-fashioned; they were the ones he had imbibed in the early day, frontier life of his youth, when no woman was seen on anything but a side-saddle. He had grown up to the tacit fiction that women on horseback were not bipeds. It came to him with a shock, this sight of her so manlike in her saddle. But he had to confess that the sight looked good to him just the same.

CHAPTER XIV.

Another Sunday man and horse and dog roved the Piedmont hills. And again Daylight and Dede rode together. But this time her surprise at meeting him was tinctured with suspicion; or rather, her surprise was of another order. The previous Sunday had been quite accidental, but his appearing the second time among her favorite haunts hinted of more than the fortuitous. Daylight was made to feel that she suspected him, and he, remembering that he had seen a big rock quarry near Blair Park, stated offhand that he was thinking of buying it. His one-time investment in a brickyard had put the idea into his head—an idea that he decided was a good one, for it enabled him to suggest that she ride along with him to inspect the quarry.

So several hours he spent in her company, in which she was much the same girl as before, natural, unaffected, light-hearted, smiling and laughing, a good fellow, talking horses with unflagging enthusiasm, making friends with the crusty-tempered Wolf, and expressing a desire to ride Bob, whom she declared she was more in love with than ever. Against his better judgment, Daylight gave in, and, on an unfrequented stretch of road, changed saddles and bridles.

"Remember, he's greased lightning," he warned, as he helped her to mount.

She nodded, while Bob pricked up his ears to the knowledge that he had a strange rider on his back. The fun came quickly enough—too quickly for Dede, who found herself against Bob's neck as he pivoted around and bolted the other way. Daylight followed on her horse and watched. He saw her check the animal quickly to a standstill, and immediately, with rein across neck and a decisive prod of the left spur, whirl him back the way he had come and almost as swiftly.

"Get ready to give him the quirt on the nose," Daylight called.

He hung almost gleefully upon her actions in anticipation of what the fractious Bob was going to get. And Bob got it, on his next whirl, or attempt, rather, for he was no more than half-way around when the quirt met him smack on his tender nose. There and then, in his bewilderment, surprise and pain, his fore feet, just skimming the road, dropped down.

"Great!" Daylight applauded. "A couple more will fix him. "He's too smart not to know when he's beaten."

Again Bob tried. But this time he was barely quarter around when the doubled quirt on his nose compelled him to keep his fore feet to the road. [illegible] spur, but [illegible] of the quirt, she straightened him out.

Dede looked triumphantly at Daylight.

"Let me give him a run?" she asked.

Daylight nodded, and she shot down the road. He watched her out of sight around the bend, and watched till she came into sight returning. She certainly could sit her horse, was his thought, and she was a sure enough hummer. God, she was the wife for a man! Made most of them look pretty slim. And to think of her hammering all week at a typewriter. That was no place for her. She should be a man's wife, taking it easy, with silks and satins and diamonds (his frontier notion of what befitted a wife beloved), and dogs and horses, and such things.

But the quarry was doomed to pass out of his plans for a time, for on the following Sunday he rode alone. No Dede on a chestnut sorrel came across the back-road from Berkeley that day, nor the day a week later. As the third week drew to a close and another desolate Sunday confronted him, Daylight resolved to speak, office or no office. And as was his nature, he went simply and directly to the point. She had finished her work with him, and was gathering her note pad and pencils together to depart, when he said:

"Oh, one more thing, Miss Mason, and I hope you won't mind my being frank and straight out. You've struck me right along as a sensible-minded girl, and I don't think you'll take offense at what I'm going to say. You know how long you've been in the office—it's years, now, several of them, anyway; and you know I've always been straight and aboveboard with you. I've never what you call—presumed. Because you were in my office I've tried to be more careful than if—if you wasn't in my office—you understand. But just the same, it don't make me any the less human. I'm a lonely sort of a fellow—don't take that as a bid for kindness. What I mean by it is to try and tell you just how much those two rides with you have meant. And now I hope you won't mind my just asking why you haven't been out riding the last two Sundays?"

She played nervously with a pencil for a time, as if debating her reply, while he waited patiently.

"This riding," she began; "it's not what they call the right thing. I leave it to you. You know the world. That's the trouble. It's what the world would have to say about me and my employer meeting regularly and riding in the hills on Sundays. It's funny, but it's so. I could ride with one of the clerks without remark, but with you—no."

"Look here, Miss Mason," said Daylight. "I know you don't like this talking over of things in the office. Neither do I. It's part of the whole thing, I guess; a man ain't supposed to talk anything but business with his stenographer. Will you ride with me next Sunday, and we can talk it over thoroughly then and reach some sort of a conclusion. Out in the hills is the place where you can talk something besides business. I guess you've seen enough of me to know I'm pretty square. I—I do honor and respect you, and . . . and all that, and I . . ." He was beginning to flounder, and the hand that rested on the desk blotter was visibly trembling. He strove to pull himself together. "I just want to harder than anything ever in my life before. I—I—I can't explain myself, but I do, that's all. Will you—Just next Sunday? Tomorrow?"

Nor did he dream that her low acquiescence was due, as much as anything else, to the beads of sweat on his forehead, his trembling hand and his all too-evident general distress.

"Of course, there's no way of telling what anybody wants from what they say." Daylight rubbed Bob's rebellious ear with his quirt and pondered with dissatisfaction the words he had just uttered. They did not say what he had meant them to say. "What I'm driving at is that you say flatfooted that you won't meet me again, and give your reasons, but how am I to know they are your real reasons? Maybe you just don't want to get acquainted with me, and won't say so for fear of hurting my feelings. Don't you see? I'm the last man in the world to shove in where I'm not wanted. And if I thought you didn't care a whoop to see anything more of me, why I'd clear out so blamed quick you couldn't see me for smoke."

It had been a happy day. Daylight had met her on the back-road from Berkeley, and they had had hours together. It was only now, with the day drawing to a close and with them approaching the gate of the road to Berkeley, that he had broached the important subject.

She began her answer to his last contention, and he listened gratefully.

"But suppose, just suppose, that the reasons I have given are the only ones?—that there is no question of my not wanting to know you?"

"Then I'd go on urging like Sam Scratch," he said quickly. "Because, you see, I've always noticed that folks that incline to anything are much more open to hearing the case stated. But if you did have that other season up your sleeve, if you didn't want to know me, if—if, well, if you thought my feelings oughtn't to be hurt just because you had a good job with me. . . ." Here, his calm consideration of a possibility was swamped by the fear that it was an actuality, and he lost the thread of his reasoning. "Well, anyway, all you have to do is to say the word and I'll clear out. And with no hard feelings; it would be just a case of bad luck for me. So be honest, Miss Mason, please, and tell me if that's the reason—I almost got a hunch that it is."

"Oh, but that isn't fair," she cried. "You give me the choice of lying to you and hurting you in order to protect myself by getting rid of you, or of throwing away my protection by telling you the truth, for then you, as you said yourself, would stay and urge."

Daylight smiled grimly with satisfaction.

"I'm real glad, Miss Mason, real glad for those words."

"But they won't serve you," she went on hastily. "They can't serve you. I refuse to let them. This is our last ride, and . . . here is the gate."

Ranging her mare alongside, she bent, slid the catch, and followed the opening gate.

"No; please, no," she said, as Daylight started to follow.

Humbly acquiescent, he pulled Bob back, and the gate swung shut between them. But there was more to say, and she did not ride on.

"Listen, Miss Mason," he said, in a low voice that shook with sincerity; "I want to assure you of one thing. I'm not just trying to fool around with you. I like you, I want you, and I was never more earnest in my life. There's nothing wrong in my intentions or anything like that. What I mean is strictly honorable—"

But the expression of her face made him stop. She was angry, and she was laughing at the same time.

Dede Mason had quick, birdlike ways, almost flitting from mood to mood; and she was all contrition on the instant.

"Forgive me for laughing," she said across the gate. "It wasn't really laughter. I was surprised off my guard, and hurt, too. You see, Mr. Harnish, I've not been . . ."

She paused, in sudden fear of completing the thought into which her birdlike precipitancy had betrayed her.

"What you mean is that you've not been used to such sort of proposing."

"I Like You, I Want You and I Never Was More Earnest in My Life."

Daylight said; "a sort of on-the-run, 'Howdy, glad-to-make-your-acquaintance, won't-you-be-mine' proposition."

She nodded and broke into laughter, in which he joined, and which served to pass the awkwardness away. He gathered heart at this, and went on in greater confidence, with cooler head and tongue.

"There, you see, you prove my case. You've had experience in such matters. I don't doubt you've had slathers of proposals. Well, I haven't, and I'm like a fish out of water. Besides, this ain't a proposal. It's a peculiar situation, that's all, and I'm in a corner. I've got enough plain horse-sense to know a man ain't supposed to argue marriage with a girl as a reason for getting acquainted with her. And right there was where I was in the hole. Number one, I can't get acquainted with you in the office. Number two, you say you won't see me out of the office to give me a chance. Number three, your reason is that folks will talk because you work for me. Number four, I just got to get acquainted with you, and I just got to get you to see that I mean fair and all right. Number five, there you are on one side the gate getting ready to go, and me here on the other side the gate pretty desperate and bound to say something to make you reconsider. Number six, I said it. And now and finally, I just do want you to reconsider."

He was such a boy, this big giant of a millionaire who had half the rich men of San Francisco afraid of him. Such a boy! She had never imagined this side of his nature.

"How do folks get married?" he was saying. "Why, number one, they meet; number two, like each other's looks; number three, get acquainted; and number four, get married or not, according to how they like each other after getting acquainted. But how in thunder we're to have a chance to find out whether we like each other enough is beyond my savvee, unless we make that chance ourselves. I'd come to see you, call on you, only I know you're just rooming or boarding, and that won't do."

"It's getting late now, anyway," Daylight hurried on, "and we've settled nothing at all. Just one more Sunday, anyway—that's not asking much—to settle it in."

She gathered the reins into her hand preliminary to starting.

"Good night," she said, "and—"

"Yes," he whispered, with just the faintest touch of imperativeness.

"Yes," she said, her voice low but distinct.

At the same moment she put the mare into a canter and went down the road without a backward glance, intent on an analysis of her own feelings.

Leslie Jones, who is attending the State University at Lexington, spent Saturday and Sunday here with his parents Dr. and Mrs. A. N. Jones.

Robert Crisler, who has charge of a part of the telephone service of the L. & N. Railroad, spent part of last week here with home folks.

Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Riddell and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hall of Burlington, visited friends and relatives here Sunday.

Rev. L. A. Kohler of Cincinnati, filled his regular appointment at the Walton Christian church, last Sunday, preaching to a good sized congregation at both services.

W. T. S. Blackburn and a corps of his traction railroad people of Dry Ridge, were here last Thursday. Mr. Blackburn asserts that the railroad will be built, and the road is graded from Eagle Creek to near Owenton, and the work is first class in every particular.

Wm. Bleweiss resigned his position at the drug store of Robert W. Jones last week to accept a similar position with one of the largest drug stores in Newport. Mr. Bleiweiss made many friends while here and his departure was universally regretted.

Work has actively begun on the handsome new residence of John C. Miller in South Walton, and Contractor Geo. P. Nicholson expects to have it completed by February 1st. It is being constructed in the most modern manner of light colored brick and will make a very handsome structure. It will cost about $5,000.

A. N. Slaughter of Harrisburg, Owen county, was here last week on business. Mr. Slaughter is a member of the State Board of Control of the Burley Tobacco Society and announces the sale of about ten million pounds of the pooled tobacco at private sale at 16 1-2 cents per pound. He believes that nearly all of the pooled tobacco will be sold at good prices at private sale and the entire matter disposed of with in the next three months.

J. Wm. Houston, Supt. of the Bridges and Buildings of the Louisville and Nashville Railroad Company, spent Saturday and Sunday here with his family. Mr. Houston is engaged with a gang of men on the extension of the L. and E. Railroad in Breathitt county, where an extension of eighty miles is being built for the L. & N. to connect with West Virginia interests, and he is arranging to take out an additional force of men to expedite the work.

Rev. H. C. Martin of Erlanger, preached at the Walton M. E. church Sunday morning and evening, filling his regular appointment. He is making a very favorable impression on his congregation by the masterly manner with which he is discharging his duties. The music at both services Sunday was a very pleasing feature, Miss Queen Tillman rendering a beautiful vocal solo, and accompanied by Miss Lutie Miller on the organ and Fred Miller on the violin.

Walton Lodge, No. 183, I. O. O. F., had a large and enthusiastic meeting at their hall last Saturday night when Wm. R. McGruder was initiated into the mysteries of Odd-Fellowship. The work was conferred in an excellent manner and there was about sixty Odd Fellows present, representing the neighboring lodges at Big Bone Springs and in Kenton county. After the work a fine lunch of chicken soup, oysters, crackers, pickles, coffee, cakes etc., was served by Bros. John M. Stamler and son, Roy D. Stamler. Short addresses were made by the members, and a general fraternal greeting followed.

It was with much sorrow that the information was received here last Friday of the sudden death of J. P. VanLeuven which sad event occurred that morning at his home in Cincinnati. Mr. VanLeuven had arisen from his bed and was preparing to go to work when he was stricken with an affection of the heart and died in a short time. He was assistant superintendent of the Cincinnati Street Car Line, a position he had filled with credit for about thirty years, and he was universally respected by all. He was a former resident of Walton, where he had many warm friends because of his generous disposition and excellent character. Mr. VanLeuven was 57 years old and leaves a widow and two children. The funeral took place Monday from his late home, and as a testimony of the high esteem in which he was held by his employers the entire street car system was suspended from any business for three minutes at one o'clock on that day. His relatives Mrs. J. M. Stamler and son R. D. Stamler, Jacob Kipp and other friends of Walton, attended the funeral.

An Alarm at Night

That strikes terror to the entire household is the loud, hoarse and metallic cough of croup. No mistaking it, and fortunate then the lucky parents who keep Foley's Honey and Tar Compound on hand. H. W. Casselman, Canton, N. Y., says: "It is worth its weight in gold. Our little children are troubled with croup and hoarseness, and all we give them is Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. I always have a bottle of it in the house."

HONEST MAN FOUND

Gives Police Money He Picked Up In Gutter in New York.

Israel Neboschik, the "Lucky" Finder, Will Send Happy Girl's Reward to Poor Old Woman in Old Country.

New York.—Israel Neboschik, who sells men's clothing at 163 Rivington street, made a great find in front of his shop. From the gutter he picked up an envelope containing $200 in bills. To find such a fortune knocking about in the gutter in Rivington street is no every-day occurrence. What Israel did with it was more unusual still. He took the money and envelope to the Delancey street police station.

Lieutenant Brady and the detective of the station found their faith in humanity increase when Neboschik told them that he had found the money; that he had thought some poor woman might have lost it—the savings of years—and he wanted to leave it for the owner. Lieutenant Brady thought that he had made the discovery on which Diogenes had wasted his life, and he said as much.

Up in the Bronx lives Miss Molly Brambiar. She works in a costume establishment in West Twenty-ninth street. It is part of her work to get the money from the bank to pay off the girls for the week. Now if Miss Brambiar had gone to the bank, got that money and brought it back to the shop in Twenty-seventh street, there most likely would have been no envelope kicking around in the gutter in Rivington street and nobody outside of his few friends would have known what a square man Neboschik really is.

But Molly didn't go herself, whether it was too hot or whether she had something better to do, it doesn't matter. She sent one of the new errand girls for it. The new girl went to the bank, got the money and put it in an envelope and started back toward the shop in Twenty-seventh street. But when she got there, the envelope was gone. And all the scolding of the boss and all Molly's crying couldn't get it back. Nobody had the faintest hope that anybody as square as Neboschik would find it.

Molly Brambiar read in the paper about the finding of $200 in Rivington street and she knew right away that it must be the money belonging to her shop. She rushed for the subway as fast as she could and then to the Delancey street station. The envelope had been sent to old headquarters at 300 Mulberry street, so she had to go there to claim it. With the money safe in her possession and a feeling of relief in her heart she started out to find Neboschik.

He was in his shop selling celluloid collars to a customer.

"Mr. Neboschik," she said, "I think you are the most honest man in the world. You must take a reward."

Neboschik said he did not want any reward. "If you want to buy something—well, all right," he said.

Molly looked over the stock, but found nothing that seemed quite enough, as a mere purchase, to pay Neboschik all she thought she owed him. So she said:

"Mr. Neboschik, it is late and I must be getting to work. I am going to leave this for you. You must take it."

She laid a five-dollar bill on the counter. Then she went back to the store in West Twenty-seventh street, where the boss promptly forgave her for not getting the money herself in the first place. They were so glad to get it back and all so surprised at what had happened, they were even ready to forgive the new errand girl who had lost it.

"What are you going to do with it, Israel?" asked Morris Socoloff, who has a pushcart near Neboschik's store.

"Keep it?"

"No," said Israel. "I think I do not keep it. I think I know pretty well what to do with it. There is an old countrywoman of mine, back in the old country. She has a husband who is no good and he sends her no money at all. I think I just send it to her. You like that?"

"It would make one fine present all right," said Morris.

HIPLESS TROUSER IS COMING

Also "Hobbie" Pants and Many Other Feminine Things for Men, Says "Finest Formed Man Alive."

Boston.—Dan Coghlin, whom tailors and designers know as the finest formed man alive, said that before long men will look more like our modern hipless women than anything else. Mr. Coghlin has the distinction of having worn more clothes than any other man in the country. In fact, he has changed his attire as many as twenty times a day and has never worn the same suit twice.

"Every year men's clothes are imitating more and more those of woman," he said. "I do not hesitate to predict that in a few years men's attire will be as feminine as women's attire will be masculine.

"Men are becoming more fond of gay colors, extravagant cuts, giddy trimmings—they are getting to like buckles, belts, form fitting lines, flare-skirts—they are becoming more butterflylike than women, and it will not be long before men will be having 'hipless' trousers, 'princess' overcoats, 'hobbie' pants, 'gored' jackets, silk gloves, laces and ribbons—all the finery hitherto saved to womankind."

is one who lovely in face, form, mind and temper. But it's hard for a woman to be charming without health. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation and kidney poisons show in pimples, blotches, skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. But Electric Bitters always prove a godsend to women who want health, beauty and friends. They regulate Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood; give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth velvety skin, lovely complexion and perfect health. Try them. 50c at all druggists.

Miss Martha Julia Anna Bassett, who died in Indianapolis Thursday, was the last of a family that many years ago was prominent in the affairs of Dearborn county and of the state of Indiana. Her father was Horace Bassett, who in the twenties and thirties was a prominent attorney in Dearborn county and served as a representative in the legislature from the county from 1822 until 1830. He moved to Indianapolis in 1840 to fill the position of clerk of the district court of the United States, where he continued to reside until his death. They resided at that time on the corner of Ohio and Pennsylvania streets, where the postoffice building now stands. Miss Bassett was reputed to have been in her girlhood the most beautiful woman in Indiana. She was born in Aurora Aug. 28th, 1828.—Lawrenceburg Press.

The most of the land is a fertile lime stone soil, lies so it can be easily cultivated, and produces large crops.

Farm No. 1 contains about thirty acres, and has a good house, a barn, crib, orchard, etc., on it. Price—thirty-five dollars per acre.

Farm No. 2 contains about seventy-five acres, and has a good five-room house on it, and good out buildings, and is offered at forty-five dollars per acre.

Farm No. 3 contains about one hundred and fifteen acres, and is improved with house, stable, crib, etc., and a large tobacco barn 90 ft. by 40 ft. by 20 ft. to the eaves, which cost about fifteen hundred dollars. This fine farm is offered for fifty-five dollars an acre.

Farm No. 2 will not be sold until farm No. 3 is disposed of.

All of these farms containing about two hundred and twenty acres are offered as a whole at forty-five dollars per acre.

I consider these farms worth the money asked, and I have put a low price on them to make them sell quickly.

Liberal terms will be given.

COME TO COVINGTON AS OFTEN AS YOU LIKE, WE'LL PAY your Railroad Fare in Cash or We'll pay you three cents a mile if you drive in.

OUR PROPOSITION:

We refund Railroad fares, Trolly Car fares and Steam Boat fares, or will allow three cents per mile for persons driving into Covington and purchasing goods from any or all of the stores of the members of the Retail Merchants' Association of the Industrial Club of Covington, on a basis of one mile for each dollar's worth of goods purchased. To illustrate:—If you travel, say ten miles, you would be required to purchase at least $30.00 worth of goods in order to have your entire Railroad fare refunded, you having traveled ten miles each way, making a total of twenty miles.

If your total purchase amounts to a less number of dollars than miles you travel, we will refund as many miles of your fare as the number of dollars you spend with members of our Association.

On the other hand, if you spend a greater number of dollars than miles you travel, in addition to your entire fare or mileage, we will refund one percent on the purchase you make in excess of the amount necessary to secure the refund of your fare.

By this plan you not only have your Railroad fare or mileage paid, but you can take advantage of many Special Sales that the members of our Association continually offer.

Covington merchandise has a State-wide reputation for excellence and up-to-dateness.—Covington values are always a bit better than most people expect.—Covington prices are always a shade lower. And there is a reason for these better values and lower prices. Come to Covington and see.

We are members of the Retail Merchants' Association of Covington, and will rebate fares on plan outlined above.

Ask for Refund Book at any of these Stores. Notice—In order to obtain Rebate, Rebate Book must be asked for at time of purchase.

CIRCUIT COURT.

The December term of the Circuit Court convened last Monday at 10 a. m, Judge J. W. Cammack, presiding, and Circuit Clerk, Alvin Steiger, of Owen county on hand to assist Circuit Clerk J. A. Duncan to keep his record. Sheriff Hume was at his place in the bar, having all the processes for the term executed and returned, and upon the request of the court called the grand jurors summoned for the term, and the grand jury as organized is composed of the following gentlemen:

H. G. Cropper, Bullittsville, foreman.
Harry Kilgour, Francesville,
Frank Craig, East Bend,
Fillmore Ryle, Rabbit Hash,
Ed. Stephens, Richwood,
Joe L. Stephens, East Bend,
Holt White, Plattsburg,
John Hogan, Union,
E. E. Utz, Big Bone,
Sam Hall, Burlington,
Joseph Green, Big Bone,
W. T. McGlasson, Hebron.

Judge Cammack gave the jury the usual charge, when it retired to its room to consider of indictments, there being but one prisoner in jail for it to investigate.

Constable N. W. Burkett, of Union, is doorkeeper for the grand jury.

Commonwealth's Attorney E. E. Winn was unable to be present, having been sorely afflicted with carbuncles on his neck for several weeks.

John Jackson, charged with housebreaking, plead guilty and was sentenced to the penitentiary for from two to ten years.

William Starr, charged with forgery, got one year in the penitentiary.

Atty. Sidney Gaines was appointed Commonwealth's Attorney pro tem.

Following are the petit jurors:

The following attorneys have been attending court this week: Hon. W. W. Dickerson, Thornton Snyder, Hon. John W. Gaunt, O. M. Rogers, D. E. Castleman, J. G. Tomlin, J. L. Vest, B. F. Menefee.

The jurors will probably be discharged to-day.

The case of C. L. Best against James Cleek, occupied the attention of the court and a jury Tuesday and part of the day Wednesday. Best sued Cleek for $307 commission for selling his farm in Verona neighborhood to a Mr. Williams, and the jury returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for the full amount claimed.

Several men took advantage of their age and were excused from jury service at this term, among them one bachelor. Under the law you are not subject to jury service if you are over 60 years of age.

E. C. McMillan, of Williamstown, official stenographer for this judicial district, was present at yesterday's session of the court.

It has been said that all Kentuckians have hankering for office and if they cant get a big one they will take a little one. This is not true at least so far as Clark county Democrats are concerned; Clark county is entitled to seven constables. We believe a Republican was elected and qualified in the only Republican magisterial district in the county, but the six Democratic districts have no constables. Since the resignation of Clay Aldridge as County Surveyor to take the Circuit Clerk's place we have no County Surveyor. Any good Democrat with the proper qualifications could doubtless get these positions, but no one appears to care for them.—Winchester Democrat.

The reception given at the Universalist church by the Bible Class, last Saturday night, was attended by a fairly good sized crowd. The program was highly interesting and quite instructive and was enjoyed by all. The duet by little Misses Lillian Carver and Kathryn Kelly delighted the audience, while the vocal music on the part of other members of the class was of a very high order. The recitation by the Bible Class was interesting thruout. At the conclusion of the program chocolate and wafers were served by Mrs. Edgar Riley and an efficient corps of assistants.

Wins Fight For Life.

It was a long and bloody battle for life that was waged by James B. Mershon, of Newark, N. J., of which he writes: "I had lost much blood from lung hemorrhages, and was very weak and sundown. For eight months I was unable to work. Death seemed close on my heels, when I began three weeks ago to use Dr. King's New Discovery. But it has helped me greatly. It is doing all that you claim." For weak, sore lungs, obstinate coughs, stubborn colds, hoarseness, la grippe, asthma, hay-fever or any throat or lung trouble its supreme. Guaranteed by all Druggists. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

The Poultry Yard.

Winter eggs and exercise go together.

Do not neglect the laying hens' exercise.

Judge not a hen by her beauty, but by the way she does her duty.

You may feed all the food your hens can possibly use, but if you are short of grit, the results will not be satisfactory.

It is not good for hens to dust in coal or wood ashes only, some folks claim, but we find that a few ashes lighten up the dirt.

Noon is a good time to supply the stock with some green stuff, such as cabbages or roots of any kind. The latter can be cut in half, and the hens will then pick them to pieces.

Have the floors of the houses well bedded with some light litter, so that the biddies will be induced to scratch, and thus warm up their bodies these cold, frosty mornings.

Drafts in the chickens' home are more dangerous when the fowls are quiet on the roost than when they are stirring around during the day; but a cold air current sweeping through the house is a bad thing at any time.

As the cold winds come in the fall, it is noticed that the flocks do not take so wide a range as they did in milder weather, but instead, congregate in the cornfields and along the stone fences in the pastures, where they can get the benefit of the warm sun, and at the same time be shielded from the raw winds.

Poultry feeding has been much improved and simplified by the introduction of the hopper method. The old-fashioned way of preparing and mixing a wet mash is done away with, on account of its tedious and needless expense of time and labor. The hopper is filled with a variety of ground grains, and placed where it is accessible to the fowls at all times. With this arrangement the hens need never go to roost without sufficient food.

—Farm Jornal.

Had any one of several young Democrats living in the Third Railroad district yielded to the urgent pleas of Judge Jere Sullivan, of Richmond, that young man would now be Railroad Commissioner instead of Green Garrett, who was elected. The district, according to those who figured up the results in the various counties composing the district, went Democratic by a thousand majority and while the official figures have not been completed it is believed here to be certain that the district actually was carried by the Democrats. Mr. Sullivan saw the land slide that was due to come in Kentucky this fall and felt that there was a good chance for the Democrats to select a commissioner from the Third district. He talked to several young Democratic lawyers of the district and urged them to run. get on the ballot by petition. None would listen to him all saying that the Democrats had no chance to win. The tickets were made up without a Democratic nominee. The Democrats of the district did not think enough of their chances to make a nomination so it went by default. Mr. Garrett won because he did not have opposition.—Frankfort Journal.

"Best on Earth"

This is the verdict of R. J. Howell, Tracy, O., who bought Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for his wife. "Her case was the worst I have ever seen, and look ed like a sure case of consumption. Her lungs were sore and she coughed almost incessantly and her voice was hoarse and weak. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound brought relief at once and less than three bottles effected a complete cure." Let Us Help You Do —YOUR—
Christmas Shopping

Between now and Christmas most of you will make from one to a dozen shopping trips. List in hand, you will make your way through the crowded stores looking for suggestions, comparing prices and striving for the attention of salespeople; you will return to your home tired and disgusted. There is no use of this if you will come to our large storerooms. We will assist you in selecting an article that will please any one in your household.

MAKE APPROPRIATE REMEMBRANCES.

"If 'tis worth doing, 'tis worth doing well."

If a person's love or friendship is the occasion for a gift, surely 'tis a matter for careful thought and deliberate choosing.

"Do unto others as you would have them do unto you." Choose your Christmas gifts with the same care and spirit you would want others to exercise in choosing gifts for you. Shop early, shop now, look about, choose and avoid the crowds and bustle that always come later in the month.

FIRST CHOICE IS BEST.

It always has been—ever since the world began—it's as true in choosing Christmas gifts as it is in locating a government claim.

The stores of Dine-Schabell Co. are brimful of beautiful Christmas gifts now—ready for your choice; today's advertisments teem with offerings at special prices to induce early shopping.

First choice is best—and now its economy.

A PROBLEM IN MATHEMATICS.

THIS WEEK—One wise shopper plus alert, willing salespeople, any morning this week, equals comfort, satisfaction even temper—a true Christmas spirit.

WEEKS TO FOLLOW means a crowd of hurried, anxious shoppers divide the attention of one saleswoman; result—loss of time, dissatisfaction, neglect.

THIS WEEK—Start out with a determination to multiply comfort, satisfaction, good feeling in every store you enter. Add Dine-Schabell Co.'s name to your list tonight—then shop early.

Watch paper for our next week's list of holiday articles. We solicit charge accounts.

Miss Vaughan, of Adair county was employed to teach a country school; after teaching a while the school house was burned. Will Be Better Men.

December 12, 1911.

Through the columns of this paper, I wish to say to the people of Boone county that it is easy to get into trouble, but not very easy to get out of it; but, still it is not so hard to get out of it if you will make up your mind to that effect, and go at it in the right way, but the hardest part of being in trouble is carrying it with you and on your mind, wherever you go. I have been carrying my troubles now from about the 30th of March 1910 until the 12th day of December, 1911, a period of 21 months, from one place to another, and over the roads for several thousand miles, and had received no relief whatever until I proved to the people that I honestly and sincerely desired to be once more a free man. Then I found plenty of friends ready to offer all in their power to give me liberty, so I can thank God to-day that I am now on the road for a free life and a free man once more. I obtained this great opportunity, thru the kindness and mercy of the Honorable Judge J. W. Cammack, the Commonwealth Atty. Sidney Gaines and his assistant, W. S. Riddell, my defending attorney, D. E. Castleman, the honorable gentlemen of the jury and my many friends in Boone county. I feel that to thank them myself for the opportunity they have given me for my liberty is beyond my power, but I will from this day on, prove to them that I highly appreciate their friendship and kindness and thank them to the greatest of my ability. I hope the people that were against me are now satisfied, that I without money still have as many or a few more friends than they have with plenty of money, and thank God my friends are people that are an honor to anyone and this country. I will also say that the Honorable Jailer, Samuel Adams, is an honor to his office and a man to be appreciated by his prisoners, and I have taken this trouble all on myself and released everybody else, therefore nobody can hold vengeance against me for anything. I will stand it all and get through with it too. Good-bye to all.
WILLIAM STARR.

I want to ask the people of this community to forgive me of the crime of which I am guilty, and I will be a man from this on. I have certainly learned a lesson, so forgive me as I am going to do better and live as a man should live.

Across The Rockees.

Rapidly the familiar scenes of the Ohio hills receded; we dried our good-bye tears and settled ourselves to the pleasure of the trip before us.

We went thru numerous towns on our way to Chicago but as we went thru the railway section were not prepossessed with many of them; Shelbyville is quite a pretty little town with such wide, clean streets even tho the railroad runs through the middle of it. Its court house is a quaint old building. The court house at Greensburg has a tree growing out of the cupola, in plain view of the train.

We reached Chicago at 8:30 p. m., having an hour and a half to wait for our west bound train, so we struck out to see as much of the city as we could in so short a time and at night, but we did see the elevated railway (electric) and the Blackstone, the largest hotel in the city. We found snow very much deeper than what we left at home.

When we got on the train our berths were ready and we had the experience of "sleeping on the move," which was a disappointment to us.

The next day we traveled in Missouri and soon passed the limit of the snow nor did we see one cloud after that to shut off the sunshine.

Here we came into the farming section, great acres of alfalfa with stone fences for protection from the wind. The bailing outfits at work right in the field.

We saw one great threshing, ever so much done and several stacks yet to be threshed.

The country is rich in rocks; school houses and churches made entirely of stone. We would whirl by the former standing entirely alone with not a house in sight and on the level land they could be seen for miles.

The Missouri river is so filled with sand that it is hardly navigable. We wound along in its valley, getting innummerable views of it.

At Topeka was a most ideal prairie scene for we reached there just at sunset. We made a stop there of twenty-five minutes and we took in the gigantic engines that were to furnish the power for our ascent up the mountains. Two were in front one in the rear.

We wanted to awake early on Thursday morning in order to see Pike's Peak away in the distance but did not. When we did awake we were in the desert land of Colorado with great streaks of alkali. We had been climbing all night and were hardly conscious of our altitude with the mountains looming up ahead of us in the distance. We kept climbing slowly, the engines puffing up the steep grades.

When we reached Raton Pass and tunnel, we had gained the highest point on the Santa Fe, 7,500 feet above sea level and were then in New Mexico. After that we passed for hours thru a broad, high plateau called Mesa Land, entirely surrounded by mountains, most of them snow capped. Here are seen the famous Pueblos rising out of the surrounding level.

The houses are mud, the only growth sage brush and cacti except where irrigation canals make prosperous farms.

We are soon lost in the mountains, a mere mote, so vast are they as we wind in and among them. They are beyond description, the sky of such a deep blue, the sun light so clear, the shadows so intense and the pure, rarified air, dry, cool and healthful. Then the blending of colors, the soil of a rich red with great ditches perfectly dry, washed out by melting snows; the vegetation, green and the rocks of many varied tints.

We saw the Spanish Peaks first, then circled in both front and rear of Starvation Peak. There is a legend attached to this peak that a large band of Spaniards was surrounded by Navajo Indians and starved to death.

There were acres and acres beyond number of pines, and the nearest we came to wild animals was an occasional bunch of coyotes or little prairie dogs with their mounds dotting the land on either side of the track. Above a village of mud huts was a grave yard with a wooden cross in the center and not a spear of grass. The red soil graves were made close to the fence each marked by a very small cross.

We would come upon cattle and ponies, some times in bunches and often a solitary pony with no other trace of human life or no boundary fence; or on red, barren knobs, in the midst of a wilderness of pines, the mud houses showing half breed homes.

Apache Canyon was the beginning of the great soul stirring scenery, bordered on either side by steep hills, at first wide enough to allow piles of R. R. ties cut from the plentiful scrub oaks, then the hills close in with barely room for the track, and the sides of solid rock where even the pines cannot find sustaining soil.

The train with its thirteen coaches wound like a great snake around the curves, sometimes making a complete figure eight or a double horse shoe, through ever shifting scenes, or the same thing from another view point. A great overhanging precipice of red rock would loom up before us, in a breath it is entirely lost to sight, then, suddenly, it reappears in greater perfection.

On Friday we traveled through a vast basin, the pines looked like apple orchards stretching off into infinity.

The Indians took up our attention at each stop in their odd clothing and fierce visages. We landed at Albuquerque Thursday night, and we found ourselves in a perfect nest of them. Mrs. Carter and myself were afraid of them, yet, we wanted to hear them talk. We picked out two squaws with a baby and little girl and followed them around one side of the great Alvardo Hotel, where they sat down on the pavement. They were much cleaner and nicer looking and did not have their faces covered with the stringy black hair. We coaxed the little girl to us and gave her a pretty pin which completed the friendliness, and at our signified desire the mother unwrapped the papoose to our delight. Such a pretty basket with the round top fitting the head and the bright shawl and there sound asleep was the little brown baby, but "all aboard," and we had to leave them and the most interesting hotel whose lobby was filled with their works.

On Friday our eyes ached with looking and there are no words to tell of what we saw; the track on narrow ledges, solid rock above and on the other side down into depths below; thru tunnels, around curves then down in the valley with range after range of brown mountains simply piled with rocks great and small till we could say, "Truly the Rocky Mountains are well named," then out of the valley and across Canyon Diablo a great gash over 200 feet deep and 500 feet wide with the Colorado river at the bottom, cutting its way deeper on till the greater Grand Canyon; across narrow trestles many feet from the rock bottom and finally we sped down and gradually out of the mountains, seeing the last of them at sunset and after the rays have left the lowland, they touch the tops of the old time worn wrinkled visaged landmarks, making them all shades of heliotrope.

Around a curve and a gray old cactus covered mountain nearer hides it from view then in a new aspect the purple hazy tops reappear.

Ridge after ridge, an impenetrable wall of rock and in all the vastness no sign of human life, but over the worst places, the rockiest ledges where the pines could not grow, there was man's achievement, the telegraph poles not to speak of the iron god that thunders through, the quiet recesses and leaves the trailing smoke for miles behind.

Truly, "we live in deeds not hours, in thoughts not figures on a dial."

When we awoke Saturday morning the deserts were past, the rocks and pines and we were in beautiful, balmy Southern California. Oranges, row after row, grove after grove, bungalows with roses trellised to their roofs heavy bloom.

We are in the land of sunshine, in easy reach of another wonder, the Pacific Ocean, and whether or not we are satisfied with life here or away from our Old Kentucky Home the trip has been worth it and is well worth the time and money of anyone to see the sunset in the prairie, then to sink out of sight behind the mountains and last to dip down in the ocean.

The first communication to arrive at our new home was the Recorder, which is always a "letter from home."

Observe the plumb bob on rear of the Tubular frame. It makes leveling quick, easy, accurate—enables you to keep the Tubular level and get the best work out of it.

There are, in this neighborhood agents for several "bucket bowl" cream separators. "Bucket bowl" separators are the kind with wide mouth bowls, full of parts, set on top of their spindles. These agents say, to the farmers intending to buy a separator, "Look out for the Tubular," or "Don't try the Tubular," or "Beware of the Tubular." To hear them talk you would guess right away that is the best cream separator made, and that these "bucket bowl" fellows are afraid of it. And they are afraid of it. The Tubular surpasses every other separator in every particular, and you should take mighty good care you do see a Tubular before you buy a separator. We will be pleased to show you the latest Tubular and give you an illustrated catalog.

TOBACCO SOLD.

Burley Society Sells 10,00,0000 Lbs. of 1909 Crop.

Lexington, Dec. 8.—About 10,000,000 pounds of Burley tobacco of the pooled crop of 1909 have been sold by the Executive Committee of the Burley Tobacco Society to the American Tobacco Company, and it is believed that pending negotiations will result in the sale of the remaining 10,000,000 pounds and thus wipe out the entire remaining holdings of the society's pool of 1909. The price received was 16 1-2 cents a pound, and as the tobacco will be delivered as soon as it can be graded the tobacco growers will receive a Christmas gift of about $1,650,000, with the prospect of probably securing a similar amount for New Year's day, if the delivery can be made that soon. The dicker for the sale of the 10,000,000 pounds had been in progress for several days between the Executive Committee of the Burley Society and Theodore H. Kirk, a tobacco broker of Cincinnati, who had gone to New York to get in direct touch with the officials of the American Tobacco Company. A telegram received from him to-day, it is understood, closed the sale. President LeBus and others of the Executive Committee of the society declined to-night either to affirm or deny the reported sale, but it is authoritatively known to be true. It is also learned on equally good authority that the deal is on for the sale of the remaining 10,000,000 pounds left in the pool.

What Good Roads Will Do.

The following figures on the subject of good roads from the North Dakota Station shows how improved roads pay for themselves in dollars and cents as well as increasing the value of our farms. The value of good roads becomes evident when we look at the financial side of the problem. The cost of hauling one ton one mile is nine cents in Germany and twenty-five cents in the United States; the difference is largely one of road bed. If we apply those figures to hauling, say 5,000 bushels of wheat five miles, the cost in Europe would be $67.50 in the United States $187.50, or $120.00 more. It will be safe to say that where 5,000 bushels of wheat is raised, as much more hauling will be done which would represent another $120, or $240, the extra outlay caused by poor roads.

This is only one item. Good roads increase the value of the land; $5 an acre is putting it too low, but at that it amounts to $1,600 for a half section. Then the convenience and the ability to market at any time so that advantage can be taken of the highest prices should not be overlooked. The man in town realizes the value of good roads and he gets them. He paves the sidewalks and streets. He knows that they will increase his business, his comforts and social advantages, but no more so than in the country for the farmer.—Indiana Farmer.

A Bit of History.

A bit of history was related to us recently by Henry Carrington, now of Cincinnati, but formerly of this place. It was at the time of the raid of Morgan thru this county during the civil war. His men were busy ransacking the town of Versailles, while they had all the men corralled in the court yard. The Masonic lodge did not even escape their depredations. All the officers' jewels of office were taken, and before Morgan left town this fact became known to David Carrington and several more citizens. It was David Carrington's father who made these jewels by hand, of solid silver, and they were highly prized by Carrington. Quick as he could get some of his brother Masons together they repaired to the tent of Morgan under a flag of truce and explained to him their mission. Morgan being a Mason, immediately got his men together and formed a line and personally searched every man until he found the jewels. They were promptly returned to Mr. Carrington, and Morgan remarked that from that time on they would again be enemies. These same jewels are being used today by Masonic lodge F. & A. M. No. 7, one of the oldest in the State of Indiana.—Osgood Journal.

Cured in His Own Home Town

Hopkinsville, Ky. J. W. Jordan, a well known dentist living on Kentucky Ave. near 7th Street, tells the way for his fellow townsmen to be cured of kidney and bladder trouble as he himself was cured. "I had kidney trouble in a very bad form and two doctors performed an operation, but the first relief I had was after taking Foley Kidney Pills. They have done me more good than anything else I have tried. I used to have a terrible pain across my back but since taking Foley Kidney Pills I have had no pain, and gladly recommend them to all who have kidney trouble. For sale at Jones' drug store, Walton.

Upon the death of Sister Myra Stephens respectfully submit the following: Whereas it has pleased our Heavenly Father to remove from our midst our loving sister therefore be it resolved. That we feeply fell the loss of one who was a loving friend and faithful member of our society.

Resolved, That we sincerely sympathize with the family in this dark hour of sorrow and commend them to "He who doeth all things well."

Resolved, That these resolutions be copied on our records and a copy sent to the sorrowing family, and to our county paper for publication.

Committee—Nellie Ryle, Laura Wilson, Lore VanNess.

I will sell privately my saw and grist mill at Limaburg, corn crusher, automatic saw swedge and two log wagons. For further information apply to W. R. Rouse, Hebron, Ky.

I have just received a very fine Guernsey bull from the herd of J. E. Rouse, of Scott county, and it is ready for service at my farm two miles west of Burlington.

CHAPTER XV.

Life at the office went on much the way it had always gone.

In spite of their high resolve, there was a very measurable degree of the furtive in their meetings. In essence, these meetings were stolen. They did not ride out brazenly together in the face of the world. On the contrary, they met always unobserved, she riding across the many-gated backroad from Berkeley to meet him halfway. Nor did they ride on any save unfrequented roads, preferring to cross the second range of hills and travel among a church-going farmer folk who would scarcely have recognized even Daylight from his newspaper photographs. He found Dede a good horsewoman—good not merely in riding, but in endurance. There were days when they covered sixty, seventy, and even eighty miles; nor did Dede ever claim any day too long, nor—another strong recommendation to Daylight—did the hardest day ever see the slightest chafe of the chestnut sorrel's back. "A sure enough hummer," was Daylight's stereotyped but ever enthusiastic verdict to himself.

His lifelong fear of woman had originated out of nonunderstanding and had also prevented him from reaching any understanding. Dede on horseback, Dede gathering poppies on a summer hillside, Dede taking down dictation in her swift shorthand strokes—all this was comprehensible to him. But he did not know the Dede who so quickly changed from mood to mood, the Dede who refused steadfastly to ride with him and then suddenly consented, the Dede in whose eyes the golden glow forever waxed and waned and whispered hints and messages that were not for his ears. In all such things he saw the glimmering profundities of sex, acknowledged their lure, and accepted them as incomprehensible.

But through it all ran the golden thread of love. At first he had been content just to ride with Dede and to be on comradely terms with her; but the desire and the need for her increased. The more he knew of her, the higher was his appraisal. Had she been reserved and haughty with him, or been merely a giggling, simpering creature of a woman, it would have been different. Instead, she amazed him with her simplicity and wholesomeness, with her great store of comradeliness. The latter was the unexpected. He had never looked upon woman in that way. Woman, the toy; woman, the harpy; woman, the necessary wife and mother of the race's offspring—all this had been his expectation and understanding of woman. But woman, the comrade and playfellow and joyfellow—this was what Dede had surprised him in. And the more she became worth while, the more ardently his love burned, unconsciously shading his voice with caresses, and with equal unconsciousness flaring up signal fires in his eyes. Nor was she blind to it, yet, like many women before her, she thought to play with the pretty fire and escape the consequent conflagration."

"Winter will soon be coming on," she said regretfully, and with provocation, one day, "and then there won't be any more riding."

"But I must see you in the winter just the same," he cried hastily.

She shook her head.

"I've been pretty good," he declared. "I leave it to you if I haven't. It's been pretty hard, too, I can tell you. You just think it over. Not once have I said a word about love to you, and me loving you all the time. That's going some for a man that's used to having his own way. I'm somewhat of a runner when it comes to traveling. I reckon I'd rush God Almighty if it came to a race over the ice. And yet I didn't rush you. I guess this fact is an indication of how much I do love you. Of course I want you to marry me. Have I said a word about it, though? Nary a chirp, nary a flutter. I've been quiet and good, though it's almost made me sick at times, this keeping quiet. I haven't asked you to marry me. I'm not asking you now. Oh, not but what you satisfy me. I sure know you're the wife for me. But how about myself? Do you know me well enough to know your own mind?" He shrugged his shoulders. "I don't know, and I ain't going to take chances on it now. You've got to know for sure whether you think you could get along with me or not, and I'm playing a slow conservative game. I ain't a-going to lose for overlooking my hand."

This was love-making of a sort beyond Dede's experience. Nor had she ever heard of anything like it.

"I'll see," he urged, "just for a whole deal we've got to see some of each other this winter. Most likely your mind ain't made up yet—"

"That is," she interrupted. "I will not permit myself to care for you, for me, would not like you, Mr. Harnish, and it can never be more

"It's because you don't like my way of living," he charged, thinking in his own mind of the sensational joy-rides and general profligacy with which the newspapers had credited him—thinking this, and wondering whether or not, in maidan modesty, she would disclaim knowledge of it.

To his surprise, her answer was flat and uncompromising.

"No; I don't."

"I know I've been brash on some of those rides that got into the papers," he began his defence, "and that I've been traveling with a lively crowd—"

"I don't mean that," she said, "though I know about it, too, and can't say that I like it. But it is your life in general, your business. There are women in the world who could marry a man like you and be happy, but I couldn't. And the more I cared for such a man, the more unhappy I should be. You see, my unhappiness, in turn, would tend to make him unhappy. I should make a mistake, and he would make an equal mistake, though his would not be so hard on him because he would still have his business."

"Business!" Daylight gasped. "What's wrong with my business? I play fair and square. There's nothing underhand about it, which can't be said of most businesses, whether of the big corporations or of the cheating, lying, little corner-grocerymen. I play the straight rules of the game, and I don't have to lie or cheat or break my word."

"Don't you see," he went on, "the whole game is a gamble. Everybody gambles in one way or another. The farmer gambles against the weather and the market on his crops. So does the United States Steel Corporation. The business of lots of men is straight robbery of the poor people. But I've never made that my business. You know that. I've always gone after the robbers."

"I missed my point," she admitted. "Wait a minute."

And for a space they rode in silence.

"I see it more clearly than I can state it, but it's something like this. There is legitimate work, and there's work that—well, that isn't legitimate. The farmer works the soil and produces grain. He's making something that is good for humanity. He actually, in a way, creates something, the grain that will fill the mouths of the hungry."

"And then the railroads and market-riggers and the rest proceed to rob him of that same grain," Daylight broke in.

"There ain't much difference between playing halfway robber like the railroad hauling that farmer's wheat to market, and playing all robber and robbing the robbers like I do. And, besides, halfway robbery is too slow a game for me to sit in. You don't win quick enough for me."

"But what do you want to win for?" Dede demanded. "You have millions and millions, already; why can't you do good with all your money?"

Daylight laughed.

"Doing good with your money! Ain't it funny, to go around with brass knuckles and a big club breaking folks' heads and taking their money away from them until I've got a pile, and then, repenting of my ways, going around and bandaging up the heads the other robbers are breaking? I leave it to you. That's what doing good with money amounts to. Every once in a while some robber turns soft-hearted and takes to driving an ambulance. That's what Carnegie did. He smashed heads in pitched battles at Homestead, regular wholesale head-breaker he was, held up the suckers for a few hundred million, and now he goes around dribbling it back to them. Funny? I leave it to you."

He rolled a cigarette and watched her half curiously, half amusedly. His replies and harsh generalizations of a harsh school were disconcerting, and she came back to her earlier position.

"I can't argue with you, and you know that. No matter how right a woman is, men have such a way about them—well, what they say sounds most convincing, and yet the woman is still certain they are wrong. But there is one thing, the creative joy; and it's a higher joy than mere gambling. Haven't you ever made things yourself—a log cabin up in the Yukon, or a canoe, or raft, or something? And don't you remember how satisfied you were, how good you felt, while you were doing it and after you had it done?"

While she spoke his memory was busy with the associations she recalled. He saw the deserted flat on the river bank by the Klondike, and he saw the log cabins and warehouses spring up, and all the log structures he had built, and his sawmills working night and day on three shifts.

"Why, dog-gone it, Miss Mason, you're right—in a way. I've built hundreds of houses up there, and I remember I was proud and glad to see them go up. I'm proud now, when I remember them. And there was Ophir—the most God-forsaken moose-pasture of a creek you ever laid eyes on. I made that into the big Ophir. Why, I ran the water in there from the Rinkabilly, eighty miles away. They all said I couldn't, but I did it, and I did it by myself. The dam and the flume cost me four million. But you should have seen that Ophir—power plants, electric lights, and hundreds of men on the pay-roll, working night and day. I guess I do get an inkling of what you mean by making a thing. I made Ophir, and she was a hummer."

"And you won something there that was more than mere money," Dede encouraged. "Now do you know what I would do if I had lots of money and simply had to go on playing at business? Take all the southerly and westerly slope of these bare hills. I'd buy them in and [illegible] on them. I'd do it for the [illegible] going it anyway; but suppose I had that gambling twist in me which you talk about, why, I'd do it just the same and make money out of the trees. And there's my other point again. Instead of raising the price of coal without adding an ounce of coal to the market supply, I'd be making thousands and thousands of cords of firewood—making something where nothing was before. And everybody who ever crossed on the ferries would look up at these forested hills and be made glad. Who was made glad by your adding four dollars a ton to Rock Wells?

It was Daylight's turn to be silent for a time while she waited an answer.

"Would you rather I did things like that?" he asked at last.

"It would be better for the world, and better for you," she answered non-committally.

ANGLER CATCHES GIANT CARP

Fish Weighing More Than Sixteen Pounds Is Landed by Englishman With Rod and Line.

London.—Hugh T. Sheringham, angling editor of the Field, probably caught the carp of his life, and certainly one of the largest, if not the largest, ever taken by rod and line in this country. It was caught in one of the Highbury Angling society's waters, Cheshunt (Herts) reservoir, and weighed sixteen pounds five ounces, was thirty inches long and twenty-one inches in girth, and gave great sport.

This more than makes up for the disappointment anglers experienced when they learned that the fifteen pound carp reported as taken from the Tiverton (Devon) canal on June 16 last was not caught by an angler, but shot in mistake for a big pike which had been devouring a farmer's ducks. Carp of over twenty-five pounds have been taken in this country, but not on rod and line.

BUILDS ROOF IN HIS SLEEP

Workman Is Surprised at Wielding Hammer When Noise Attracts Others—Tacked Three Rows.

Wooster, O.—John Hoover, tinner, employed by Jacob Kauffman in Wayne county, is the prize somnambulist. The other day Kauffman was engaged in putting a roof on a barn near Reedsburg. Rain stopped him and he spent the night in the barn with his employes. They intended to finish the work in the morning.

Kauffman was awakened during the night by sounds from the roof and found Hoover at work. When Hoover came down for more tin he dropped a hammer on his foot. He rubbed his eyes and looked surprised. He had tacked on three rows of tin while asleep.

The workmanship was perfect.

Encouragement.

"Why should you be despondent?" asked the poet's friend.

"Why shouldn't I be despondent?" the poet replied. "I've been trying to add a bit of cheer to the world. I have written some things that men who ought to know have said were sublime. I have endeavored to describe the beauties of nature, to spread the gospel of brotherhood, to teach kindness and goodness and hopefulness. But the people persist in ignoring me; the publishers decline to accept my poems; my genius is unrecognized; I am left to starve in my attic."

"Cheer up, old man. A hundred years from now your poems may be illustrated by some artist who will get $500 for each of the pictures."

A Maine Record.

"I think I can safely lay claim to having hauled more wood into Rockland than any other one man," says Otis Tolman of Rockville. "I have been at it sixty years, hauling an average of 200 loads a year with an average of seven feet to the load. I brought my first load into town behind a pair of steers in 1850 and sold it to the late S. H. Burpee for two dollars a cord."—Kennebec Journal.

A crop of beans can be grown and marketed cheaper than a crop of corn and are much easier on the land, being a nitrogen gatherer.

Wins Fight For Life.

It was a long and bloody battle for life that was waged by James B. Mershon, of Newark, N. J., of which he writes: "I had lost much blood from lung hemorrhages, and was very weak and rundown. For eight months I was unable to work. Death seemed close on my heels, when I began three weeks ago to use Dr. King's New Discovery. But it has helped me greatly. It is doing all that you claim." For weak, sore lungs, obstinate coughs, stubborn colds, hoarseness, lagrippe, asthma, hay-fever or any throat or lung trouble its supreme. Guaranteed by all druggists.

"Best on Earth"

This is the verdict of R. J. Howell, Tracy, O., who bought Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for his wife. "Her case was the worst I have ever seen, and looked like a sure case of consumption. Her lungs were sore and she coughed almost incessantly and her voice was hoarse and weak. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound brought relief at once and less than three bottles effected a complete cure." WHERE GOLD ORE ABOUNDS

Untold Wealth in Minerals Hidden in Plains and Mountains of Colorado.

"Untold wealth in gold, silver and copper lies hidden in the plains and mountains of Colorado, awaiting only discovery by the prospector," said John A. Herron, a wealthy miner of Denver. "I make this assertion on the authority of mining experts and engineers who have gone over nearly every foot of territory in the state. One old miner of Colorado recently declared that the San Juan country in Colorado is so full of minerals that to tell of it would sound like a fairy tale. He declared that he discovered the riches of that section so long ago as 1860, but that it has never been touched because the region where ore abounds is almost inaccessible. When it becomes possible to develop the mines of San Juan, I believe it will be found to be the best mineral field in Colorado.

"This statement may seem inconsistent with the recent figures of the census bureau in Washington, which show that the last eight years the number of men employed in mining, milling and smelting in Colorado has been cut almost in half. In 1902 these industries had more than 35,000 men on the pay rolls, but in 1910 the number had been reduced to less than 20,000.

"I believe that the time is not far distant when there will be a revival of the great mining boom which years ago induced thousands of persons to flock to Colorado in search of wealth. Skilled miners and scientific engineers and geologists agree that hundreds of miles of the mountains of Colorado are mineralized. Quantities of gold are awaiting those who will search for it."

WINDMILL AS MOTIVE POWER

French Invention Applies the Principle to Vehicles Which Move at High Speed.

Long ago the patent offices of the world came to the conclusion through experts that few basic principles are embodied in new inventions. Adaptations of old and well known laws of physics merely are applied in a new form in mechanical contrivances. What shall be said of M. Constantin, a French inventor who has applied a windmill wheel to the front of vehicles which move at high speed, or which have to move against heavy head winds? To the end, too, of conserving the energies which drive the vehicle.

As we understand it, the inventor has gone no further than the building of a small model wagon. The wagon is of aluminum and weighs about four pounds. But with its wind wheel mounted in front and turned toward the air-driven from an ordinary electric fan, the vehicle takes a shoot into the wind. With a large fan of the general office or restaurant type, the small wagon takes a 6 per cent grade with a load of 20 pounds in the wagon box.

The principle of the invention takes for granted that the wheel mounted in front of a huge van imposes a minimum of additional wind pressure. But as the wind blows strong, or as the movement of a power driven vehicle creates its own head pressure, the axis of the wind wheel, engaging geared wheels through a spiral groove in the axle, returns from air friction a marked quantity of energy which may be of great value in automobiles, motor trucks, electric cars, and railroad trains.

The Detective Was Great.

Running his bow lightly or heavily across his old violin, according as he wanted light or heavy music, the great detective, fully dressed, leaned back in his chair and ruminated.

The door opened and an excited but otherwise healthy woman entered.

"I knew it was you who opened the door as soon as you entered the room," remarked the great detective, and the woman immediately became lost in wonder.

Feeling aronnd, however, until she found herself again, she exclaimed: "They tell me you can find anything!"

The great detective bowed modestly.

"Oh, sir, my baby has swallowed a valuable needle. How can I find it?"

Without even pausing for reflection the wonderful man spoke: "Have the child swallow a thimble."

It was a pretty case!

Wasted Sarcasm.

After a week in the country a prominent lawyer returned to town, determined to stay during the summer. But before coming home he had the satisfaction of telling the keeper of the "real old country boarding farmhouse" just what he thought of things. "There is one thing on your table," said the lawyer, "which is not to be excelled by the best hotels of New York or Philadelphia." "What is it?" asked the farmer. "The salt," answered the attorney, with a fine display of biting sarcasm. "Well, I'm glad ye liked it," returned the farmer. "It's the best Jimsons' kegs, an' I ain't particular about the price."

Forehanded and Intelligent.

Storekeeper—Well, my little man, what can I do for you?

The Kid—Say, when I comes in here this afternoon with a lady and asks you for a dollar's worth of your best chocolates, just pass me out a penny's worth of them little things in the corner, will you?—Puck.

Farm No. 2 contains about seventy-five acres, and has a good five-room house on it, and good out buildings, and is offered at forty-five dollars per acre.

COME TO COVINGTON ... IF YOU LIKE, WE'LL PAY your Railroad Fare in Cash or We'll pay you three cents a mile if you drive in.

—OUR PROPOSTION:—

We refund Railroad fares, Trolly Car fares and Steam Boat fares, or will allow three cents per mile for persons driving into Covington and purchasing goods from any or all of the stores of the members of the Retail Merchants' Association of the Industrial Club of Covington, on a basis of one mile for each dollar's worth of goods purchased. To illustrate:—If you travel, say ten miles, you would be required to purchase at least $20.00 worth of goods in order to have your entire Railroad fare refunded, you having traveled ten miles each way, making a total of twenty miles.

If your total purchase amounts to a less number of dollars than miles you travel, we will refund as many miles of your fare as the number of dollars you spend with members of our Association.

On the other hand, if you spend a greater number of dollars than miles you travel, in addition to your entire fare or mileage, we will refund one percent on the purchase you make in excess of the amount necessary to secure the refund of your fare.

By this plan you not only have your Railroad fare or mileage paid, but you can take advantage of many Special Sales that the members of our Association continually offer.

Covington merchandise has a State-wide reputation for excellence and up-to-dateness.—Covington values are always a bit better than most people expect—Covington prices are always a shade lower. And there is a reason for these better values and lower prices. Come to Covington and see.

We are members of the Retail Merchants' Association of Covington, and will rebate fares on plan outlined above.

Ask for Refund Book at any of these Stores. Notice—In order to obtain Rebate, Rebate Book must be asked for at time of purchase.

CHAPTER XV.

Life at the office went on much the way it had always gone.

In spite of their high resolve, there was a very measurable degree of the furtive in their meetings. In essence, these meetings were stolen. They did not ride out brazenly together in the face of the world. On the contrary, they met always unobserved, she riding across the many-gated backroads from Berkeley to meet him halfway. Nor did they ride on any save unfrequented roads, preferring to cross the second range of hills and travel among a church-going farmer folk who would scarcely have recognized even Daylight from his newspaper photographs. He found Dede a good horsewoman—good not merely in riding, but in endurance. There were days when they covered sixty, seventy, and even eighty miles; nor did Dede ever claim any day too long, nor—another strong recommendation to Daylight—did the hardest day ever see the slightest chafe of the chestnut sorrel's back. "A sure enough hummer," was Daylight's stereotyped but ever enthusiastic verdict to himself.

His lifelong fear of woman had originated out of nonunderstanding and had also prevented him from reaching any understanding. Dede on horseback, Dede gathering poppies on a summer hillside, Dede taking down dictation in her swift shorthand strokes—all this was comprehensible to him. But he did not know the Dede who so quickly changed from mood to mood, the Dede who refused steadfastly to ride with him and then suddenly consented, the Dede in whose eyes the golden glow forever waxed and waned and whispered hints and messages that were not for his ears. In all such things he saw the glimmering profundities of sex, acknowledged their lure, and accepted them as incomprehensible.

But through it all ran the golden thread of love. At first he had been content just to ride with Dede and to be on comradely terms with her; but the desire and the need for her increased. The more he knew of her, the higher was his appraisal. Had she been reserved and haughty with him, or been merely a giggling, simpering creature of a woman, it would have been different. Instead, she amazed him with her simplicity and wholesomeness, with her great store of comradeliness. The latter was the unexpected. He had never looked upon woman in that way. Woman, the toy; woman, the harpy; woman, the necessary wife and mother of the race's offspring—all this had been his expectation and understanding of woman. But woman, the comrade and playfellow and joyfellow—this was what Dede had surprised him in. And the more she became worth while, the more ardently his love burned, unconsciously shading his voice with caresses, and with equal unconsciousness flaring up signal fires in his eyes. Nor was she blind to it, yet, like many women before her, she thought to play with the pretty fire and escape the consequent conflagration.

"Winter will soon be coming on," she said regretfully, and with provocation, one day, "and then there won't be any more riding."

"But I must see you in the winter just the same," he cried hastily.

She shook her head.

"I've been pretty good," he declared. "I leave it to you if I haven't. It's been pretty hard, too, I can tell you. You just think it over. Not once have I said a word about love to you, and me loving you all the time. That's going some for a man that's used to having his own way. I'm somewhat of a rusher when it comes to traveling. I reckon I'd rush God Almighty if it came to a race over the ice. And yet I didn't rush you. I guess this fact is an indication of how much I do love you. Of course I want you to marry me. Have I said a word about it, though? Nary a chirp, nary a flutter. I've been quiet and good, though it's almost made me sick at times, this keeping quiet. I haven't asked you to marry me. I'm not asking you now. Oh, not but what you satisfy me. I sure know you're the wife for me. But how about myself? Do you know me well enough to know your own mind?" He shrugged his shoulders. "I don't know, and I ain't going to take chances on it now. You've got to know for sure whether you think you could get along with me or not, and I'm playing a slow conservative game. I ain't a-going to lose for overlooking my hand."

This was love-making of a sort beyond Dede's experience. Nor had she ever heard of anything like it.

"You see," he urged, "just for a deal we've got to see some of each other this winter. Most [illegible] mind ain't made up yet—"

"It is, is," she interrupted. "I will not permit myself to care for [illegible] for me, would not lie [illegible] like you, Mr. Harnish. [illegible] but it can never be more

"It's because you don't like my way of living," he charged, thinking in his own mind of the sensational joy-rides and general prodigacy with which the newspapers had credited him—thinking this, and wondering whether or not, in maiden modesty, she would disclaim knowledge of it.

To his surprise, her answer was flat and uncompromising.

"No; I don't."

"I know I've been brash on some of those rides that got into the papers," he began his defence, "and that I've been traveling with a lively crowd—"

"I don't mean that," she said, "though I know about it, too, and can't say that I like it. But it is your life in general, your business. There are women in the world who could marry a man like you and be happy, but I couldn't. And the more I cared for such a man, the more unhappy I should be. You see, my unhappiness, in turn, would tend to make him unhappy. I should make a mistake, and he would make an equal mistake, though his would not be so hard on him because he would still have his business."

"Business!" Daylight gasped. "What's wrong with my business? I play fair and square. There's nothing underhand about it, which can't be said of most businesses, whether of the big corporations or of the cheating, lying, little corner-grocerymen. I play the straight rules of the game, and I don't have to lie or cheat or break my word."

"Don't you see," he went on, "the whole game is a gamble. Everybody gambles in one way or another. The farmer gambles against the weather and the market on his crops. So does the United States Steel Corporation. The business of lots of men is straight robbery of the poor people. But I've never made that my business. You know that. I've always gone after the robbers."

"I missed my point," she admitted. "Wait a minute."

And for a space they rode in silence.

"I see it more clearly than I can state it, but it's something like this. There is legitimate work, and there's work that—well, that isn't legitimate. The farmer works the soil and produces grain. He's making something that is good for humanity. He actually, in a way, creates something, the grain that will fill the mouths of the hungry."

"And then the railroads and market-riggers and the rest proceed to rob him of that same grain," Daylight broke in.

"There ain't much difference between playing halfway robber like the railroad hauling that farmer's wheat to market, and playing all robber and robbing the robbers like I do. And, besides, halfway robbery is too slow a game for me to sit in. You don't win quick enough for me."

"But what do you want to win for?" Dede demanded. "You have millions and millions already; why can't you do good with all your money?"

Daylight laughed.

"Doing good with your money! Ain't it funny, to go around with brass knuckles and a big club breaking folks' heads and taking their money away from them until I've got a pile, and then, repenting of my ways, going around and bandaging up the heads the other robbers are breaking? I leave it to you. That's what doing good with money amounts to. Every once in a while some robber turns soft-hearted and takes to driving an ambulance. That's what Carnegie did. He smashed heads in pitched battles at Homestead, regular wholesale head-breaker he was, held up the suckers for a few hundred million, and now he goes around dribbling it back to them. Funny? I leave it to you."

He rolled a cigarette and watched her half curiously, half amusedly. His replies and harsh generalizations of a harsh school were disconcerting, and she came back to her earlier position.

"I can't argue with you, and you know that. No matter how right a woman is, men have such a way about them—well, what they say sounds most convincing, and yet the woman is still certain they are wrong. But there is one thing, the creative joy; and it's a higher joy than mere gambling. Haven't you ever made things yourself—a log cabin up in the Yukon, or a canoe, or raft, or something? And don't you remember how satisfied you were, how good you felt, while you were doing it and after you had it done?"

While she spoke his memory was busy with the associations she recalled. He saw the deserted flat on the river bank by the Klondike, and he saw the log cabins and warehouses spring up, and all the log structures he had built, and his sawmills working night and day on three shifts.

"Why, dog-gone it, Miss Mason, you're right—in a way. I've built hundreds of houses up there, and I remember I was proud and glad to see them go up. I'm proud now, when I remember them. And there was Ophir—the most God-forsaken moose-pasture of a creek you ever laid eyes on. I made that into the big Ophir. Why, I ran the water in there from the Rinkabilly, eighty miles away. They all said I couldn't, but I did it, and I did it by myself. The dam and the flume cost me four million. But you should have seen that Ophir—power plants, electric lights, and hundreds of men on the pay-roll, working night and day. I guess I do get an inkling of what you mean by making a thing. I made Ophir, and she was a hummer."

"And you won something there that was more than mere money," Dede encouraged. "Now do you know what I would do if I had lots of money and simply had to go on playing at business? Take all the southerly and westerly slope of these bare hills. I'd buy them in and—"

"THE" [illegible] them. I'd do it for the [illegible] doing it anyway, but suppose I had that gambling twist in me which you talk about, why, I'd do it just the same and make money out of the trees. And there's my other point again. Instead of raising the price of coal without adding an ounce of coal to the market supply, I'd be making thousands and thousands of cords of firewood—making something where nothing was before. And everybody who ever crossed on the ferries would look up at these forested hills and be made glad. Who was made glad by your adding four dollars a ton to Rock Wells?

It was Daylight's turn to be silent for a time while she waited an answer.

"Would you rather I did things like that?" he asked at last.

"It would be better for the world, and better for you," she answered non-committally.

ANGLER CATCHES GIANT CARP

Fish Weighing More Than Sixteen Pounds Is Landed by Englishman With Rod and Line.

London.—Hugh T. Sheringham, angling editor of the Field, probably caught the carp of his life, and certainly one of the largest, if not the largest, ever taken by rod and line in this country. It was caught in one of the Highbury Angling society's waters, Cheshunt (Herts) reservoir, and weighed sixteen pounds five ounces, was thirty inches long and twenty-one inches in girth, and gave great sport.

This more than makes up for the disappointment anglers experienced when they learned that the fifteen pound carp reported as taken from the Tiverton (Devon) canal on June 16 last was not caught by an angler, but shot in mistake for a big pike which had been devouring a farmer's ducks. Carp of over twenty-five pounds have been taken in this country, but not on rod and line.

BUILDS ROOF IN HIS SLEEP

Workman Is Surprised at Wielding Hammer When Noise Attracts Others—Tacked Three Rows.

Wooster, O.—John Hoover, tinner, employed by Jacob Kauffman in Wayne county, is the prize somnambulist. The other day Kauffman was engaged in putting a roof on a barn near Reedsburg. Rain stopped him and he spent the night in the barn with his employes. They intended to finish the work in the morning.

Kauffman was awakened during the night by sounds from the roof and found Hoover at work. When Hoover came down for more tin he dropped a hammer on his foot. He rubbed his eyes and looked surprised. He had tacked on three rows of tin while asleep.

The workmanship was perfect.

Encouragement.

"Why should you be despondent?" asked the poet's friend.

"Why shouldn't I be despondent?" the poet replied. "I've been trying to add a bit of cheer to the world. I have written some things that men who ought to know have said were sublime. I have endeavored to describe the beauties of nature, to spread the gospel of brotherhood, to teach kindness and goodness and hopefulness. But the people persist in ignoring me; the publishers decline to accept my poems; my genius is unrecognized; I am left to starve in my attic."

"Cheer up, old man. A hundred years from now your poems may be illustrated by some artist who will get $500 for each of the pictures."

A Maine Record.

"I think I can safely lay claim to having hauled more wood into Rockland than any other one man," says Otis Tolman of Rockville. "I have been at it sixty years, hauling an average of 200 loads a year with an average of seven feet to the load. I brought my first load into town behind a pair of steers in 1850 and sold it to the late S. H. Burpee for two dollars a cord."—Kennebec Journal.

A crop of beans can be grown and marketed cheaper than a crop of corn and are much easier on the land, being a nitrogen gatherer.

Wins Fight For Life.

It was a long and bloody battle for life that was waged by James B. Mershon, of Newark, N. J., of which he writes: "I had lost much blood from lung hemorrhages, and was very weak and rundown. For eight months I was unable to work. Death seemed close on my heels, when I began three weeks ago to use Dr. King's New Discovery. But it has helped me greatly. It is doing all that you claim." For weak, sore lungs, obstinate coughs, stubborn colds, hoarseness, lagrippe, asthma, hay-fever or any throat or lung trouble its supreme. Guaranteed by all druggists.

"Best on Earth"

This is the verdict of R. J. Howell, Tracy, O., who bought Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for his wife. "Her case was the worst I have ever seen, and looked like a sure case of consumption. Her lungs were sore and she coughed almost incessantly and her voice was hoarse and weak. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound brought relief at once and less than three bottles effected a complete cure." WHERE GOLD ORE ABOUNDS

Untold Wealth in Minerals Hidden in Plains and Mountains of Colorado.

"Untold wealth in gold, silver and copper lies hidden in the plains and mountains of Colorado, awaiting only discovery by the prospector," said John A. Herron, a wealthy miner of Denver. "I make this assertion on the authority of mining experts and engineers who have gone over nearly every foot of territory in the state. One old miner of Colorado recently declared that the San Juan country in Colorado is so full of minerals that to tell of it would sound like a fairy tale. He declared that he discovered the riches of that section so long ago as 1860, but that it has never been touched because the region where ore abounds is almost inaccessible. When it becomes possible to develop the mines of San Juan, I believe it will be found to be the best mineral field in Colorado.

"This statement may seem inconsistent with the recent figures of the census bureau in Washington, which show that the last eight years the number of men employed in mining, milling and smelting in Colorado has been cut almost in half. In 1902 these industries had more than 35,000 men on the pay rolls, but in 1910 the number had been reduced to less than 20,000.

"I believe that the time is not far distant when there will be a revival of the great mining boom which years ago induced thousands of persons to flock to Colorado in search of wealth. Skilled miners and scientific engineers and geologists agree that hundreds of miles of the mountains of Colorado are mineralized. Quantities of gold are awaiting those who will search for it."

WINDMILL AS MOTIVE POWER

French Invention Applies the Principle to Vehicles Which Move at High Speed.

Long ago the patent offices of the world came to the conclusion through experts that few basic principles are embodied in new inventions. Adaptations of old and well known laws of physics merely are applied in a new form in mechanical contrivances. What shall be said of M. Constantin, a French inventor who has applied a windmill wheel to the front of vehicles which move at high speed, or which have to move against heavy head winds? To the end, too, of conserving the energies which drive the vehicle.

As we understand it, the inventor has gone no further than the building of a small model wagon. The wagon is of aluminum and weighs about four pounds. But with its wind wheel mounted in front and turned toward the air-driven from an ordinary electric fan, the vehicle takes a shoot into the wind. With a large fan of the general office or restaurant type, the small wagon takes a 6 per cent grade with a load of 20 pounds in the wagon box.

The principle of the invention takes for granted that the wheel mounted in front of a huge van imposes a minimum of additional wind pressure. But as the wind blows strong, or as the movement of a power driven vehicle creates its own head pressure, the axis of the wind wheel, engaging geared wheels through a spiral groove in the axle, returns from air friction a marked quantity of energy which may be of great value in automobiles, motor trucks, electric cars, and railroad trains.

The Detective Was Great.

Running his bow lightly or heavily across his old violin, according as he wanted light or heavy music, the great detective, fully dressed, leaned back in his chair and ruminated.

The door opened and an excited but otherwise healthy woman entered.

"I knew it was you who opened the door as soon as you entered the room," remarked the great detective, and the woman immediately became lost in wonder.

Feeling around, however, until she found herself again, she exclaimed: "They tell me you can find anything!"

The great detective bowed modestly.

"Oh, sir, my baby has swallowed a valuable needle. How can I find it?"

Without even pausing for reflection the wonderful man spoke: "Have the child swallow a thimble."

It was a pretty case!

Wasted Sarcasm.

After a week in the country a prominent lawyer returned to town, determined to stay during the summer. But before coming home he had the satisfaction of telling the keeper of the "real old country boarding farmhouse" just what he thought of things. "There is one thing on your table," said the lawyer, "which is not to be excelled by the best hotels of New York or Philadelphia." "What is it?" asked the farmer. "The salt," answered the attorney, with a fine display of biting sarcasm. "Well, I'm glad ye liked it," returned the farmer. "It's the best Jimsons' keep, an' I ain't particklar about the price."

Forehanded and Intelligent.

Storekeeper—Well, my little man, what can I do for you?

The Kid—Say, when I comes in here this afternoon with a lady and asks you for a dollar's worth of your best chocolates, just pass me out a penny's worth of them little things in the corner, will you?—Puck.

Three Farms For Sale.

Three valuable, improved Boone county farms for sale, all adjacent, and situated about two miles from Crittenden, Grant county, and the same distance from Verona, Ky.

The most of the land is a fertile lime stone soil, lies so it can be easily cultivated, and produces large crops.

Farm No. 1 contains about thirty acres, and has a good house, a barn, crib, orchard, etc., on it. Price—thirty-five dollars per acre.

Farm No. 2 contains about seventy-five acres, and has a good five-room house on it, and good out buildings, and is offered at forty-five dollars per acre.

Farm No. 3 contains about one hundred and fifteen acres, and is improved with house, stable, crib, etc., and a large tobacco barn 90 ft. by 40 ft. by 20 ft. to the eaves, which cost about fifteen hundred dollars. This fine farm is offered for fifty-five dollars an acre.

Farm No. 2 will not be sold until farm No. 3 is disposed of.

All of these farms containing about two hundred and twenty acres are offered as a whole at forty-five dollars per acre.

I consider these farms worth the money asked, and I have put a low price on them to make them sell quickly.

Liberal terms will be given.

COME TO COVINGTON ... IF YOU LIKE, WE'LL PAY your Railroad Fare In Cash or We'll pay you three cents a mile if you drive in.

OUR PROPOSTION:

We refund Railroad fares, Trolly Car fares and Steam Boat fares, or will allow three cents per mile for persons driving into Covington and purchasing goods from any or all of the stores of the members of the Retail Merchants' Association of the Industrial Club of Covington, on a basis of one mile for each dollar's worth of goods purchased. To illustrate:—If you travel, say ten miles, you would be required to purchase at least $20.00 worth of goods in order to have your entire Railroad fare refunded, you having traveled ten miles each way, making a total of twenty miles.

If your total purchase amounts to a less number of dollars than miles you travel, we will refund as many miles of your fare as the number of dollars you spend with members of our Association.

On the other hand, if you spend a greater number of dollars than miles you travel, in addition to your entire fare or mileage, we will refund one percent on the purchase you make in excess of the amount necessary to secure the refund of your fare.

By this plan you not only have your Railroad fare or mileage paid, but you can take advantage of many Special Sales that the members of our Association continually offer.

Covington merchandise has a State-wide reputation for excellence and up-to-dateness---Covington values are always a bit better than most people expect---Covington prices are always a shade lower. And there is a reason for these better values and lower prices. Come to Covington and see.

We are members of the Retail Merchants' Association of Covington, and will rebate fares on plan outlined above.

Ask for Refund Book at any of these Stores. Notice—In order to obtain Rebate, Rebate Book must be asked for at time of purchase.

...leaving immediately ... home in Owenton, while ... who kept the record ... Circuit Clerk J. A. Duncan, ... until Friday morning, ... when he left everything per... to the record for the ... was completed and in most excellent style.

In the suit of T. J. McNeal against T. J. Brown, the defendant was given a judgment for the colts which were claimed by both parties.

In the case of Best against Cleek the judgment was excepted to by the defendant. It was only at the last term that Mr. Cleek defeated W. E. Vest in a suit brought by him against Mr Cleek to recover a commission for the same sale of lande.

The petitions in the cases of the Boone County Board of Control against Lewis Abden and James Burns the petitions were dismissed and the defendants given judgment for their costs. The cases grew out of the sale of pooled tobacco.

Geo. Taube vs J. S. Asbury was a suit brought by the plaintiff to recover of the defendant $200. Some time since defendant Asbury, bought two horses of one Strouse, of Cincinnati, a dealer in horses, and for which he executed his check to Strouse for $200, the two horses to be delivered to Mr. Asbury at Anderson's Ferry. Mr. Asbury sent his brother-in-law Ben Houston to receive the horses but they did not come, Strouse claiming that one of the horses got lame and could not make the trip to the place of delivery as agreed upon. Mr. Asbury went to see about the horses, and found one of them in a very bad condition, when he demanded the return of his check which was refused, when he notified the bank at Petersburg not to pay it. The check was brought from Cincinnati by a party to be cashed, when payment was refused, but in a short time thereafter the check came back to the bank and went to protest, hence the bringing of the suit by Taube, who claims to be an innocent purchaser of the check, having cashed it without any knowledge of the circumstance that caused its execution. Having heard the evidence in the case the court held that it did not connect Taube with Strouse in any manner and instructed the jury to find for the plaintiff the sum of $200, which the jury did, reluctantly, believing that Mr. Asbury was the victim of a conspiracy, whereby he is the loser of both the $200 check and the horses. The case will be taken to the court of appeals.

The Ludlow Dramatic Club gave an excellent performance at the Walton opera house last Saturday evening for the benefit of the Lodge of the Daughters of America at Walton. The patronage was not near as good as the performance deserved as the entire show was praiseworthy.

Dr. and Mrs. B. K. Menefee entertained at progressive euchre recently, the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Menefee of Crittenden, Mr. and Mrs. I. L. Hopkins, Mr. and Mrs. W. Lee Gaines, Mr. and Mrs. Jno. L. Vest. Refreshments were served and a very happy evening was spent with Dr. and Mrs. Menefee who are most charming entertainers.

The members of the Sunday schools of the M. E. and Christian churches will have special Christmas services at the Christian church next Sunday evening, the first part of the evening being devoted to special music, Christmas anthems, and then a discourse on the beautiful subject for which the day is commemorated. The choirs of the two churches will have charge of the music, and that means a musical feast for all who attend the services.

The little son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Napier was burned to death at their home near Walton last Saturday. The little fellow was about nine months old and was able to toddle about. While his mother was out in the yard feeding the chickens the little boy's dress caught fire from the wood stove and when the mother returned she found the little one in the agonies of death. The heartfelt sympathy of everybody is tendered the grief stricken parents.

The enterprising flouring mill firm of W. O. Rouse & Co., has been considerably handicapped the past week in the operating department, a leaking boiler putting them out of commission and stopping the machinery. Rouse & Co. have a big trade and it is constantly growing because of the excellent flour they are making, and the stoppage was a great inconvenience to the mill and patrons, but the mill is now in active operation again the necessary repairs having been made.

Chambers Perry, of Mt. Olivet, Robertson county, was a visitor here last week enronte from his farm near Steeles Creek, Gallatin county, to Cincinnati. He had quite a difficult time getting to his destination. He started to drive to Verona to catch the early morning train, but he found the South Fork creek so high from the late rains that he was unable to get across and had to drive around, missing his train. Having an important engagement in Cincinnati he drove to Walton and had Wm. Brittenheim take him the balance of his journey in his automobile. Mr. Perry is a son of Rod Perry, a prominent citizen of Warsaw.

The Walton Lodge of Eastern Star had a very enjoyable meeting last Monday night when the members presented their Worthy Matron Mrs. B. K. Menefee with a beautiful Eastern Star Souvenir Silver spoon with gold bowl as a slight token of the great esteem with which they hold this excellent lady and the fine work she has done for the Lodge. Bro. A. Ritley Johnson made the presentation speech in his usual felicitous manner, and Mrs. Menefee most feelingly responded. The lodge re-elected all of the old officers. The appointive officers will be selected at the meeting on the evening of the 2nd Monday in January, when the installation will take place.

...DEATH...

...diphtheria last Thursday morning, and was buried last Saturday. He is survived by his mother, one brother, Milton and two half brothers, Felix and Lewis, the late Charles A. Gaines being their father. He was sick only a few days and it is not known where he contracted the disease, but it is supposed he got it in Cincinnati to which place he had been hauling hay. He was 25 years of age, and was an industrious young man, of good habits and deservedly popular with all with whom he was acquainted. Before the disease was clearly developed a large number of the neighbors had visited the young man, and there is naturally considerable uneasiness in that neighborhood, and every precaution possible is being taken to prevent any new cases. One of the several sad circumstances connected with the young man's misfortune was the illness of his mother and the neighbor women being afraid to visit the house to minister to the wants and necessity of either, but they were well cared for by two of their neighbor men, T. G. Willis and Elmo Gaines, who were constantly at the bedside of the young man, while neighbor women prepared food and other necessaries and left them at some distance from the residence to be taken in by Messrs. Gaines and Willis.

Local Happenings.

The Recorder is authorized to announce Hon. Arthur B. Rouse as a candidate for nomination and reelection to Congress from this district subject to the action of the Democratic Congressional Primary election called for February 3, 1912.

This is the shortest day of the year.

A. B. Renaker is having a new garage built for his auto.

You are not apt to forget that next Monday is Christmas.

There will be Christmas exercises by the Sunday school at the Baptist church next Sunday.

The crop of rabbits seems to be about exhausted, at least not many are being put on the local market.

The new directory for the Boone County Consolidated Telephone Company will be ready for distribution early in the new year. A rush of holiday advertising made it impossible to complete the work on it any sooner.

The Recorder was in error last week when it said Hon. Arthur B. Rouse and J. F. Blyth represented Burlington at the inauguration of Gov. McCreary, as they were ably assisted by Rev. Edgar Riley and Dr. Peddicord.

Grover Jarrell spent several days the past week with friends down on Woolper hunting and fishing. They do say that Grover went down Woolper on high speed, in order to reach the hunting and fishing grounds on time.

B. B. HUME, S. B. C.

Sheriff B. B. Hume took Jackson and Starr to the Penitentiary, last Friday. Pat Norman, of Union, accompanied Mr. Hume as guard. The two prisoners appeared to be perfectly reconciled to their fate, and were glad to commence doing time as soon as possible after sentence.

A Des Moines man had an attack of muscualr rheumatism in his shoulder. A friend advised him to go to Hot Springs. That meant an expense of $150 or more. He sought for a quicker and cheaper way to cure it and found it in Chamberlain's Liniment. Three days after the first application of this liniment he was well. For sale by all dealers.

Geo. E. McGlasson, of Bullittsville neighborhood, received a telegram from his son, Archie, a few days ago, in which he stated that he had successfully passed the required examination and would, in a short time, be promoted to the position of ensign in the navy, to which he belongs. Young McGlasson is a graduate of Annapolis Naval Academy, and, barring ill health and accident, will make his mark in naval circles.

Andrew Gaines son of the late Chas. A. and Anna L. Gaines died of diphtheria at his home near Bullittsburg church Friday morning, Dec. 15th, 1911, in the twenty-fifth year of his age. Death under any circumstances is sad, but especially is it sad when it comes to a young person apparently entering upon a life of usefulness. The many excellent traits of character with which he was endowed endeared him to all who knew him. He was a general favorite with all, both old and young. He was unselfish in every particular, always thinking and planning how he could be of some assistance to others. His self-sacrificing spirit in behalf of his mother, brothers, relatives and neighbors was his daily delight. His bereaved mother and brothers have the sympathy of the entire community in their sad affliction. May the taking of this young life be a warning to all, both young and old of the uncertainity of life, and admonish us to make preparation for the great change that will surely come.

LETTER FROM TEXAS,

Dear Editor:—

Will you please give space in your valuable paper for the following:

A letter from friends.

Thanks to the Recorder for suggesting a way out of a dilemma. We had begun to boast that we could keep up with our Boone county correspondence. We had actually resolved to answer each letter and card as received, so we would not get behind with our correspondence as we had done once before. But alas, that Thanksgiving party! We now have before us, from friends of Belleview and East Bend, something near 100 letters and post cards that have not been answered. We want to answer them all, and while we were puzzling over the problem, our eyes fell on the dear old Recorder, and it suggested that we ask for space in its valuable columns to show our appreciation to you all, for your kind remembrance and well wishes during Thanksgiving. We assure you there was nothing that gave us more pleasure than sitting down and reading all those letters and cards. We wish for you all, the very best there is in life and in the end, eternal joy with the Lord. We have been over 56 counties of this state since we left Kentucky, last March making 85 in all. Some of the country is good and some is bad, just like any other. Weatherford, where we have lived since the 5th of July, is a nice little town of about 6,000 souls with fine churches and good schools and no whisky. I have full time church work near this place, and the Lord is blessing my labors. We have had over thirty additions to my churches, by baptism since September.

A word to the editor. We never knew how to appreciate you and your good paper, until we were separated by 1,200 miles. Now we anxiously await for Monday morning to come, as it always brings a "letter" from home and we scan its pages with pleasure and interest. In our minds, if any of your readers should leave home, the money spent best, is that that brings the Recorder to them once a week. We think now that you may consider us among your life time subscribers. May God's richest blessings rest upon you and your valuable paper.

Yours Truly,
M. E. and H. B. Hensley.

LAND OF FLOWERS.

Petaluma, Cala.,

Boone county friends you miss a beautiful country by not living in California. I suppose you have plenty of ice and cold there by this time, while flowers are blooming, lovely night and mornings are cooler then I expected to find, but the days are warm and beautiful. This is not a large town but a busy one. There are eight churches, all have their Sunday schools and pastors. I attended the M. E. church, 177 Sunday school pupils; collection for one Sunday $5.50. The M. E. pastor gets $1,500 per year. He is a fine speaker and a friendly man. He always hunts out the strangers who come to this town and makes them welcome in his church. I was here three days when he called. The members are so friendly you feel at home. All shake hands with you when you go to church. Prayer meeting on Wednesday night with large attendance. All take part.

I attended a lecture on advancement of Missionary Work in China that was grand. The pictures were perfect. The school of 500 boys and the same of girls. I must move on. I want to tell you my trip. Last Sunday J. S. Peoples and daughter, Josephene Ryle, Lee Stephens, Floyd Stephens and I took a trip to San Francisco and golden gate Park, starting from Santa Rosa. After driving eight miles then came to Petaluma where I took the train. At Bardell station Floyd was waiting. Riding 36 miles to San Francisco bay there we walked to Fort Baker, eight miles, where we took the big steamer, crossed the bay to the big city, taking a car ride six miles, for five cents, to the park where we enjoyed two hours of beautiful flowers and ferns, and grand statues. Leaving there we went to the Beach House which reminded me of the St. Louis Exposition. We enjoyed the bathing pools, and went to the beach, where we ate our lunch. The sun was very hot. At eight o'clock the tide came in, the waves rolling as high as houses, breaking on the rocks in white foam. Josie stood at the edge of the water and let the foam roll around her shoes. There were hundreds of people there. We then went to Denman park to see the large bears, buffalo, deer, Moose and other animals. We came back to the city, and took the steamer for the bay. I landed in Petaluma at 7:20 and Francis was waiting and we went to church. The other part of the crowd did not get in until 10 that night. Josephene Ryle and Lee Stephens are not married. We live on the same ranch.

With love to all,
HESTER RYLE.

A Charming Woman

is one who lovely in face, form, mind and temper. But its hard for a woman to be charming without health. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation and kidney poisons show in pimples, blotches skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. But Electric Bitters always prove a godsend to women who want health, beauty and friends. They regulate Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood, give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth velvety skin, lovely complexion and perfect health. Try them. 50c at all druggists.

An Alarm at Night

That strikes terror to the entire household is the loud, hoarse and metallic cough of croup. No mistaking it, and fortunate then the lucky parents who keep Foley's Honey and Tar Compound on hand. H. W. Casselman, Canton, N. Y., says: "It is worth its weight in gold. Our little children are troubled with croup and hoarseness, and all we give them is Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. I always have a bottle of it in the house."

ARE THEY AFRAID?

There are, in this neighborhood agents for several "bucket bowl" cream separators. "Bucket bowl" separators are the kind with wide mouth bowls, full of parts, set on top of their spindles. These agents say, to the farmers intending to buy a separator. "Look out for the Tubular," or "Don't try the Tubular," or "Beware of the Tubular." To hear them talk you would guess right away that is the best cream separator made, and that these "bucket bowl" fellows are afraid of it. And they are afraid of it. The Tubular surpasses every other separator in every particular, and you should take mighty good care you do see a Tubular before you buy a separator. We will be pleased to show you the latest Tubular and give you an illustrated catalog.

Observe the plumb bob on rear of the Tubular frame. It makes leveling quick, easy, accurate—enables you to keep the Tubular level and get the best work out of it.

Cured In His Own Home Town

Hopkinsville, Ky. J. W. Jordan, a well known dentist living on Kentucky Ave, near 7th Street, tells the way for his fellow townsmen to be cured of kidney and bladder trouble as he himself was cured. "I had kidney trouble in a very bad form and two doctors performed an operation, but the first relief I had was after taking Foley Kidney Pills. They have done me more good than anything else I have tried. I used to have a terrible pain across my back but since taking Foley Kidney Pills I have had no pain, and gladly recommend them to all who have kidney trouble. For sale at Jones drug store, Walton.

I have just received a very fine Guernsey bull from the herd of J. E. Rouse, of Scott county, and it is ready for service at my farm two miles west of Burlington.
KARL ROUSE.

M. M. Degree Conferred.

Bros. F. L. Sayre, Wm. Goodridge, Sam Aylor, Robt. McGlasson, Chas. Clore, Leon Loder, Leslie Harrison and Hubert Rouse, members of the Hebron Masonic Lodge, attended Burlington Lodge last Saturday night, and participated in the ceremonies of the M. M. degree, which was conferred upon Bro. F. H. Rouse. Bro. Sayre had charge of the work, and, assisted by the members of his lodge, it was put on in the most impressive and entertaining manner, everything going thru from start to finish without the slightest hitch. It was nearly eleven o'clock when the work was completed, after which light refreshments were served and the hour of low twelve came near finding the members yet in social session at the hall. The presence of the brethren from Hebron was appreciated by Burlington lodge which hopes to see them in their excellent team work again soon.

Almyra Stephens Dead.

Almyra Agnes Stephens, (nee Ryle,) daughter of T. C. B. and America Ryle, was born Dec. 24, 1854, in this county; died Dec. 6th, 1911, aged 56 years, eleven months and eleven days.

She was united in marriage to James Russell Stephens, Sept. 20, 1871. To this union were born two children, Elmo, who was called from this earth at the early age of six months; and Miss Bettie, an only daughter, who, with her father, is left to mourn the loss of her who was most dear to them. Besides a husband and daughter, she leaves three brothers, one sister and a host of relatives and friends who mourn with them.

She professed faith in God and united with the M. E. church South at an early age, and lived a most earnest and consistent christian life. She was a faithful member and worker in the Ladies' Aid Society, and in the the activities of her church, as far as her delicate health permitted her. For many years she was a great sufferer from a malady, the nature of which was hard to determine. Through all she was always patient and hopeful.

The funeral services were conducted by the writer, who has been her pastor nearly four years in the Methodist church, Dec. 8th. Text—Rev. 14-13, "And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saieth the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them." The singing was conducted by some friends from Rising Sun, by her own request, and her own selections. The church was crowded with sympathizing friends, who came showing their love and friendship for "Sister Mira" and bringing words of comfort and consolation to the bereaved father and daughter. The floral tributes were many and beautiful.

By loving hands her body was tenderly laid to rest in the old church-yard to await the resurrection of the just, her soul having gone to join its Maker. She lived as she died—In the Lord, and she has left to her friends and loved ones a most precious legacy of Faith, and Obedience, of Patience and Duty, while though she be dead yet her life speaketh and its influence will last through eternity, and the generations will rise up and call her blessed.
S. J. Bradley.

Felix Gaines, who is in the life insurance business in Philadelphia, spent a few days last week with relatives in Bullittsville neighborhood, having been called home on account of the death of his half brother, Andrew. Mr. Gaines is doing well in the business he is pursuing.

W. N. Masters, of Woodland, California, called on the Recorder, while in Burlington, last Thursday. He has been visiting his brother, Joshua Masters, and other relatives in Bullittsville and Petersburg neighborhoods, for a few weeks. He left for his California home, last Tuesday, thoroughly disgusted with the weather he encountered while here, although his visit was a source of great pleasure to him, his relatives and friends. Mr. Masters went from this county to California thirty-one years ago, where his share has been good health and lots of prosperity, which is very gratifying to his old friends and acquaintances in Kentucky.

Bought Them Too High.

The local turkey dealers, have, in the last few years, run the price up until the turkey is now the millionaire's bird. The price has gone beyond the means of the masses of the people, simply because of the eagerness of local dealers to excel eachother in the number handled. When turkeys sell on foot for 12 or 13 cents a pound the man of ordinary means can afford to purchase one occasionally, but when they go above 15 cents a pound they are out of the domain of the man of moderate means, and the demand for them is bound to go below the normal. Speculation in turkeys has been rampant for several years, but this year it operated backward as regards many of the buyers.

President Taft is following the Democrats in Congress. They asked for a reduction of the wool schedule when he vetoed the bill, but has found since that he was in error and last week he sent to the House a message asking that the wool schedule be revised downward. He also drops in line very nicely after the House had demanded the abrogation of 1832 treaty with Russia. It looks like the President is willing to do the right thing after the Democrats point it out to him.

CHAPTER XVI.

All week every one in the office knew that something new and big was afoot in Daylight's mind. On Sunday Dede learned all about it.

"I've been thinking a lot of our talk," he began, "and I've got an idea I'd like to give it a flutter. And I've got a proposition to make your hair stand up. It's what you call legitimate, and at the same time it's the gosh-dangdest gamble a man ever went into. How about planting minutes wholesale, and making two minutes grow where one minute grew before? Oh, yes, and planting a few trees, too—say several million of them. You remember the quarry I made believe I was looking at? Well, I'm going to buy it. I'm going to buy these hills, too, clear from here around to Berkeley and down the other way to San Leandro. I own a lot of them already, for that matter. But mum is the word. I'll be buying a long time to come before anything much is guessed about it, and I don't want the market to jump up out of sight. You see that hill over there. It's my hill running clear down its slopes through Piedmont and halfway along those rolling hills into Oakland. And it's nothing to all the things I'm going to buy."

"Look at it," Said Daylight, Extending His Arm in a Sweeping Gesture.

He paused triumphantly.

"The ferry system between Oakland and San Francisco is the worst one-horse concern in the United States. You cross on it every day, six days in the week. That's say, twenty-five days a month, or three hundred a year. How long does it take you one way? Forty minutes, if you're lucky. I'm going to put you across in twenty minutes. If that ain't making two minutes grow where one grew before, knock off my head with little apples. I'll save you twenty minutes each way. That's forty minues a day, times three hundred, equal to twelve thousand minutes a year, just for you, just for one person. Let's see: that's two hundred whole hours. Suppose I save two hundred hours a year for thousands of other folks—that's farming some, ain't is? Come on. Let's ride up that hill, and when I get you out on top where you can see something, I'll talk sense."

A small footpath dropped down to the dry bed of the canyon, which they crossed before they began the climb. The slope was steep and covered with matted brush and bushes, through which the horses slipped and lunged. Showers of twigs and leaves fell upon them, and predicament followed predicament, until they emerged on the hilltop the worse for wear but happy and excited. Here no trees obstructed the view. The particular hill on which they were, out-jutted from the regular line of the range, so that the sweep of their vision extended over three-quarters of the circle. Below, on the flat land bordering the bay, lay Oakland, and across the bay was San Francisco. Between the two cities they could see the white ferry-boats on the water. Around to their right was Berkeley, and to their left the scattered villages between Oakland and San Leandro. Directly in the foreground was Piedmont, with its desultory dwellings and patches of farming land, and from Piedmont the land rolled down in successive waves upon Oakland.

"Look at it," said Daylight, extending his arm in a sweeping gesture. "A hundred thousand people there, and no reason there shouldn't be half a million. There's the chance to make five people grow where one grows now. Here's the scheme in a nutshell. Why don't more people live in Oakland? No good service with San Francisco, and, besides, Oakland is asleep. It's a whole lot better place to live in than San Francisco. Now, suppose I buy in all the street railways of Oakland, Berkeley, Alameda, San Leandro, and the rest—bring them under one head with a competent management? Suppose I cut the time to San Francisco one-half by building a big pier here almost to Goat Island and establishing a ferry system with boats up-to-date boats? Why, folks will want to live over on this side. Very good. They'll need land on which to build. So, first I buy up the land. But the land's cheap now. Why? Because it's in the country, no electric roads, no quick communication, nobody guessing that the electric roads are coming. I'll build the roads. That will make the land jump up. Then I'll sell the land as fast as the folks will want to buy because of the improved ferry system and transportation facilities.

"You see, I give the value to the land by building the roads. Then I sell the land and get that value back, and after that, there's the roads, all carrying folks back and forth and earning big money. Can't lose. And there's all sorts of millions in it. I'm going to get my hands on some of that water front and the tide-lands. Take between where I'm going to build my pier and the old pier. It's shallow water. I can fill and dredge and put in a system of docks that will handle hundreds of ships. San Francisco's water front is congested. No more room for ships. With hundreds of ships loading and unloading on this side right into the freight cars of three big railroads, factories will start up over here instead of crossing to San Francisco. That means factory sites. That means me buying in the factory sites before anybody guesses the cat is going to jump, much less, which way. Factories mean tens of thousands of workingmen and their families. That means more houses and more land, and that means me, for I'll be there to sell them the land. Then there's the water. I'll come pretty close to owning the watershed. Why not the waterworks too? There's two water companies in Oakland now, fighting like cats and dogs and both about broke. What a metropolis needs is a good water system. They can't give it. They're stick-in-the-muds. I'll gobble them up and deliver the right article to the city. There's money there, too—money everywhere. Everything works in with everything else. Each improvement makes the value of everything else jump up. It's people that are behind the value. The bigger the crowd that herds in one place, the more valuable is the real estate. And this is the very place for a crowd to herd. Look at it. Just look at it! You could never find a finer site for a great city. All it needs is the herd, and I'll stampede a couple of hundred thousand people in here inside two years. And what's more, it won't be one of these wildcat land booms. It will be legitimate. Twenty years from now there'll be a million people on this side the bay. Another thing is hotels. There isn't a decent one in the town. I'll build a couple of up-to-date ones that'll make them sit up and take notice. I won't care if they don't pay for years. Their effect will more than give me my money back out of the other holdings. And, oh, yes, I'm going to plant eucalyptus, millions of them, on these hills."

"But how are you going to do it?" Dede asked. "You haven't enough money for all that you've planned."

"I've thirty million, and if I need more I can borrow on the land and other things. Interest on mortgages won't anywhere near eat up the increase in land values, and I'll be selling land right along."

In the weeks that followed, Daylight was a busy man. It meant quick work on a colossal scale, for Oakland and the adjacent country was not slow to feel the tremendous buying. But Daylight had the ready cash and it had always been his policy to strike quickly. Before the others could get the warning of the boom, he quietly accomplished many things. At the same time that his agents were purchasing corner lots and entire blocks in the heart of the business section and the waste lands for factory sites, Daylight was rushing franchises through the city council, capturing the two exhausted water companies and the eight or nine independent street railways, and getting his grip on the Oakland Creek and the bay tide-lands for his dock system. The tide-lands had been in litigation for years, and he took the bull by the horns—buying out the private owners and at the same time leasing from the city fathers. By the time that Oakland was aroused by this unprecedented activity in every direction and was questioning excitedly the meaning of it, Daylight secretly bought the chief Republican newspaper and the chief Democratic organ, and moved boldly into his new offices. Of necessity, they were on a large scale, occupying four floors of the only modern office building in the town—the only building that wouldn't be torn down later on, as Daylight put it. There was department after department, a score of them, and hundreds of clerks and Stenographers. As he told Dede:—

"I've got more companies than you can shake a stick it. There's the Alameda & Contra Costa Land Syndicate, the Consolidated Street Railways, the Yerba Buena Ferry Company, the United Water Company, the Piedmont Realty Company, the Fairview and Portola Hotel Company, and half a dozen more that I've got to refer to a notebook to remember. There's the Piedmont Laundry Farm, and Redwood Consolidated Quarries. Starting in with our quarry, I just kept a-going till I got them all. And there's the ship-building company I ain't got a name for yet. Seeing as I had to have ferry-boats, I decided to build them myself. They'll be done by the time the pier is ready for them."

For months Daylight was buried in work. The outlay was terrific, and there was nothing coming in. Beyond a general rise in land values, Oakland had not acknowledged his irruption on the financial scene. The city was waiting for him to show what he was going to do, and he kept to close about it. The best skilled brains on the market were hired by him for the different branches of the work. Initial mistakes he had no patience with, and he was determined to start right, as when he engaged Wilkinson, almost doubling his big salary, and brought him out from Chicago to take charge of the street railway organization. Night and day the road gangs toiled on the streets. And night and day pile-drivers hammered the big piles down into the mud of San Francisco Bay. The pier was to be three miles long, and the Berkeley hills were denuded of whole groves of mature eucalyptus for the piling.

At the same time that his electric roads were building out through the hills, the hay-fields were being surveyed and broken up into city squares, with here and there, according to best modern methods, winding boulevards and strips of park. Broad streets, well graded, were made, with sewers and water-pipes ready laid, and macadamized from his own quarries. Cement sidewalks were also laid, so that all the purchaser had to do was to select his lot and architect and start building. The quick service of Daylight's new electric roads into Oakland made this big district immediately accessible, and long before the ferry system was in operation hundreds of residences were going up. The profit on this land was enormous. In a day, his on-slaught of wealth had turned open farming country into one of the best residential districts of the city.

But this money that flowed in upon him was immediately poured back into his other investments. The need for electric cars was so great that he installed his own shops for building them. But no matter what pressure was on Daylight, his Sundays he reserved for his riding in the hills. It was not the rainy winter weather, however, that brought these rides with Dede to an end. One Saturday afternoon in the office she told him not to expect to meet her next day, and, when he pressed for an explanation.—

"I've sold Mab."

Daylight was speechless for the moment. Her act meant one of so many serious things that he couldn't classify it. It smacked almost of treachery. She might have met with financial disaster. It might be her way of letting him know she had seen enough of him. Or . . .

"What's the matter?" he managed to ask.

"I couldn't afford to keep her with hay forty-five dollars a ton," Dade answered. "My brother's expenses have been higher, as well, and I was driven to the conclusion that since I could not afford both, I'd better let the mare go and keep the brother."

"Who bought her?" he asked.

Dede's eyes flashed in the way long since familiar to him when she was angry.

"Don't you dare buy her back for me," she cried. "And don't deny that that was what you had in mind."

"I wish you would reconsider, Miss Mason," he said softly. "Not alone for the mare's sake, but for my sake. Money don't cut any ice in this. For me to buy that mare wouldn't mean as much as it does to most men to send a bouquet of flowers or a box of candy to a young lady. There's nobody I feel chummy with except you, and you know how little we've chummed—once a week, if it didn't rain, on Sunday. I've grown kind of to depend on you. If you'd just let me buy her back—"

"No, no; I tell you no." Dede arose impatiently, but her eyes were moist with the momery of her pet. "Please don't mention her to me again. If you think it was easy to part with her, you are mistaken. But I've seen the last of her, and I want to forget her."

"If You'd Just Let Me Buy Her Back."

Daylight made no answer, and the door closed behind her.

Half an hour later he was conferring with Jones, an erstwhile elevator boy and rabid proletarian whom Daylight long before had grubstaked to literature for a year. The resulting novel had been a failure. Editors and publishers would not look at it, and Daylight was now using the disgruntled author in a little private secret service system he had been compelled to establish for himself. Jones, who affected to be surprised at nothing after his crushing experience, betrayed no surprise now when the task was given him to locate the purchaser of a certain sorrel mare.

"How high shall I pay for her?" he asked.

"Any price. You've got to get her, that's the point. Drive a sharp bargain so as not to excite suspicion, but get her. Then you deliver her to that address up in Sonoma County. The man's the caretaker on a little ranch I have there. Tell him he's to take whacking good care of her. And after that forget all about it. Don't tell me the name of the man you buy her from. Don't tell me anything about it except that you've got her and delivered her. Savvee?"

But the week had not passed, when Daylight noted the flash in Dede's eyes that boded trouble.

"Something's gone wrong—what is it?" he said boldly.

"Mab," she said. "The man who bought har has sold her already. If I thought you had anything to do with it—"

"I don't even know who you sold her to," was Daylight's answer. "And what's more, I'm not bothering my head about her. She was your mare, and it's none of my business what you did with her. You haven't got her, that's sure, and worse luck. And now, while we're on touchy subjects, I'm going to open another one with you. And you needn't get touchy about it, for it's not really your business at all. It's about that brother of yours. He needs more than you can do for him. Selling that mare of yours won't send him to Germany. And that's what his own doctors say he needs—that crack German specialist who rips a man's bones and muscles into pulp and then moulds them all over again. Well, I want to send him to Germany and give that crack a flutter, that's all."

"If it were only possible!" she said, half breathlessly, and wholly without anger. "Only it isn't, and you know it isn't. I can't accept money from you—"

"Now look here, Miss Mason. You've got to get some foolish notions out of your head. This money notion is one of the funniest things I've seen. Suppose you was failing over a cliff, wouldn't it be all right for me to reach out and catch you by the arm? Sure it would. You're standing in your brother's way. No matter what notions you've got in your head, you've got to get out of the way and give him a chance. Will you let me go and see him and talk it over with him? I'll make it a hard and fast business proposition. I'll stake him to get well, and that's all, and charge him interest."

She visibly hesitated.

"And just remember one thing, Miss Mason: it's his leg, not yours."

Still she refrained from giving her answer, and Daylight went on strengthening his position.

"And remember, I go over to see him alone. He's a man, and I can deal with him better without women-folks around. I'll go over tomorrow afternoon."

CHAPTER XVII.

For six weeks hand-running Daylight had seen nothing of Dede except in the office, and there he resolutely refrained from making approaches. But by the seventh Sunday his hunger for her overmastered him. It was a stormy day. A heavy southeast gale was blowing, and squall after squall of rain and wind swept over the city. He could not take his mind off of her, and a persistent picture came to him of her sitting by a window and sewing feminine fripperies of some sort. When the time came for his pre-luncheon cocktail to be served to him in his rooms, he did not take it. Filled with a daring determination, he glanced at his note-book for Dede's telephone number, and called for the switch.

At first it was the landlady's daughter who was raised, but in a minute he heard the voice he had been hungry to hear.

"I just wanted to tell you that I'm coming out to see you," he said. I didn't want to break in on you without warning, that was all."

"Has something happened?" came her voice.

"I'll tell you when I get there," he evaded.

She came herself to the door to receive him and shake hands with him. He hung his mackintosh and hat on the rack in the comfortable hall and turned to her for direction.

"They are busy in there," she said, indicating the parlor, from which came the boisterous voices of young people, and through the open door of which he could see several college youths. "So you will have to come into my rooms."

She led the way through the door opening out of the hall to the right, and, once inside, he stood awkwardly rooted to the floor, gazing about him and at her and all the time trying not to gaze. In his perturbation he failed to hear and see her invitation to a seat.

"Won't you sit down?" she repeated.

"Look here," he said, in a voice that shook with passion, "there's one thing I won't do, and that's propose to you in the office. That's why I'm here. Dede Mason, I want you, I just want you."

So precipitate was he, that she had barely time to cry out her involuntary alarm and to step back, at the same time catching one of his hands as he attempted to gather her into his arms.

"Oh, I know I'm a sure enough fool," he said. "I—I guess I'll sit down. Don't be scairt, Miss Mason. I'm not real dangerous."

"I'm not afraid," she answered, with a smile, slipping down herself into a chair.

"It's funny," Daylight sighed, almost with regret; "here I am, strong enough to bend you around and tie knots in you. Here I am, used to having my will with man, beast or anything. And here I am sitting in this chair, as weak and helpless as a little lamb. You sure take the starch out of me."

"I—I wish you hadn't asked," she said softly.

"Mebbe it's best you should know. a few things before you give me an answer," he went on, ignoring the fact that the answer had already been given. "I never went after a woman before in my life, all reports to the contrary notwithstanding. The stuff you read about me in the papers and books, about me being a lady-killer, is all wrong. There's not an iota of truth in it. I guess I've done more than my share of card-playing and whisky-drinking, but women I've let alone. There was a woman that killed herself, but I didn't know she wanted me that bad or else I'd have married her—not for love, but to keep her from killing herself. She was the best of the boiling, but I never gave her any encouragement. I'm telling you all this because you've read about it, and I want you to get it straight from me."

"I can't marry you," she said. "I like you a great deal, but—"

He waited a moment for her to complete the sentence, failing which, he went on himself.

"I haven't an exaggerated opinion of myself, so I know I ain't bragging when I say I'll make a pretty good husband. You could follow your own sweet will, and nothing would be too good for you. I'd give you everything your heart desired—"

"Dede Mason, I Want You, I Just Want You."

"Except yourself," she interrupted suddenly, almost sharply. "Don't you see?" she hurried on. "I could have far easier married the Elam Harnish fresh from Klondike when I first laid eyes on him long ago, than marry you sitting before me now."

He shook his head slowly.

"That's one too many for me. The more you know and like a man the less you want to marry him. Familiarity breeds contempt—I guess that's what you mean."

"No, no," she cried, but before she could continue, a knock came on the door.

His eyes, quick with observation like an Indian's, darted about the room while she was out. The impression of warmth and comfort and beauty predominated, though he was unable to analyze it; while the simplicity delighted him—expensive simplicity, he decided, and most of it left-overs from the time her father went broke and died.

She re-entered the room, and as she crossed it to her chair, he admired the way she walked, while the bronze slippers were maddening.

"I'd like to ask you several questions," he began immediately. "Are you thinking of marrying somebody else?"

CONCRETE SAVES OLD TREE

Elm Is Preserved by Construction of Concrete Wall, So That Entire Trunk Was Free From Dirt.

C. L. Miller, in Suburban Life for August, writes of the preservation of an old elm through the medium of concrete. The street on which this particular elm was growing had been filled up all of four feet, and in the course of a few years this began to affect the tree, which showed unmistakable signs of dying. So, in order to save it, the ground was dug away from the tree to the street's original level, and a concrete wall, together with a rustic railing, was placed around the tree, so that the entire trunk might be free from dirt, as it was originally.

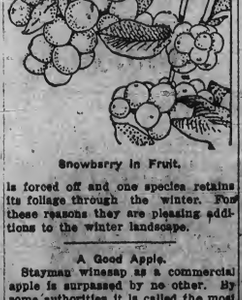
The construction of the reinforced concrete wall is very simple. After the hole was dug to the desired width and squared properly, the posts for the railing were set so that they rested on the bottom of the hole and extended about four feet above the ground. These posts were connected each by four cross-pieces, two below the ground and two above, which made a sort of fence around the tree. The false work to hold the cement in place until it was set was so constructed that the part of the posts below the ground, as well as the cross-pieces connecting them, would be half embedded in the concrete. This concrete wall, approximately nine inches in thickness, was reinforced with strong iron wire cut to the required length, and put in place in the manner of open network while the concrete was being poured. Braces extended from the tree to the boards wherever it was deemed necessary, so that the false work might be strong enough to hold the concrete back of it.

Above the ground, a rustic railing was carried out, constructed so that it might be strong enough to permit of the small boys' climbing over it.

LITTLE SNOWBERRY IS HARDY



Small Shrub Bears Fruit in Clusters and Is Easy of Propagation by Seeds or Cuttings.

The snowberry is a small shrub which bears fruit in clusters and is easy of propagation by suckers, seeds or cuttings.

These shrubs are excellent for covering the ground under trees, or planting in masses or in borders where a low-growing plant is desired.

They are very hardy and thrive well in almost any soil, even in heavy clay or dry gravelly banks. Their habit of suckering enables them to cover the ground rapidly and effectively.

The snowberry is practically effective because it retains its fruit until it is forced off and one species retains its foliage through the winter. For these reasons they are pleasing additions to the winter landscape.

Stayman winesap as a commercial apple is surpassed by no other. By some authorities it is called the most successful apple grown. It is of medium size, a beautiful dark, rich red, good eating as well as good keeping fruit. It is far superior to and the tree much stronger than the original winesap; long lived, early bearer, good yielder, a later winter variety.

Protect Fruit Bushes.

Currant and other bushes that are liable to be broken down by heavy snows, may often be protected from such damage by simply tying them together in an upright position so that the snowdrifts cannot bend and break the canes.

FIND SKELETON IN MOUND

Another Murder Mystery of Early Kansas Days Believed to Have Been Unearthed.

Another murder mystery of the early days of Kansas is believed to have been uncovered when workmen leveling what was supposed to be a natural mound on the farm of John Noland, near Junction City, uncovered a tomb 30 feet in diameter which contained portions of three skeletons believed to be those of white people.

The skulls do not resemble those of Indians, and in one skull a small hole such as could be made by a bullet was found. The forehead bone of each is prominent, like that of the white race. One man was of unusual stature, as is shown by the bones found in a corner of the room.

There is a tradition among the older residents of Junction City that a family of whites disappeared mysteriously years ago and was thought to have been murdered, but this cannot be verified.

When the first white settler came to this section the mound was there. Recently John Nolan decided to level it and use the land. The workmen struck what appeared to be a stone wall. They dug deeper and around it and soon uncovered a tomb 30 feet in diameter with stone walls 10 feet thick. The top, which had been arched over at one time, had caved in. It was 4 feet high.

Entrance was gained to the tomb by a passageway 3 feet wide and a chamber 10 feet long. The tomb had been constructed of natural surface rock.

The tomb contained no trinkets, guns or other articles by which identification could be made possible. The authorities who have taken charge of the find have not yet been able to tell whether any one of the three skeletons is that of a female.

COUNT HAD OTHER PROSPECTS

Financial Smash-Up of Prospective Father-in-Law Did Not Cause Him to Worry.

Col. Alexander S. Bacon, president of the Men's Equal Suffrage League of Brooklyn, said the other day to a reporter:

"Yes, it's true that you won't find many American peeresses enrolled under the suffrage banner. The girl who lets a foreigner marry her for money is, anyways, a rather poor specimen."

Colonel Bacon frowned.

"There's a New York man," he said, "whose daughter, during a winter in Nice, got engaged to a certain Count Beau de Beaumont. The New York man was rich at that time, but a few weeks before the date set for the wedding he went to smash.

"'My dear Count Beau de Beaumont,' he groaned that night, 'I'm very sorry for you. You are to marry my daughter—you were to have had $35,000 a year—but the crash has come. I'm ruined now. How sorry I am, count!'

"But Count Beau de Beaumont gave the New York man a reassuring slap on the back.

"'Oh, don't you worry about me, sir,' he said, with an easy laugh. 'With a title like mine, you know, I can find another heiress tomorrow.'"

"Made It So."

At Fort Monroe some time ago (this is an old story), where one of the vessels of the navy was temporarily awaiting orders, a delegation of army officers stationed at the fort came aboard. There is a set naval regulation that nothing can be so on board ship until the commanding officer orders it. While the army party were looking over the ship, twelve o'clock arrived. A junior officer approached the captain and said, with a salute: "It is twelve o'clock, sir." "Make it so," responded the captain, and eight bells were struck. The army officers suspected that the navy men wanted them to ask some questions and get sold, or that this was a bit of foolery got up to joke the land warriors. Some time after, a party of the army officers invited the officers of the warship to dine with them. The dinner was progressing when a lieutenant entered and, saluting the senior officer present, said, gravely: "Colonel, the major's blind horse is dead." "Make it so," responded the colonel, with the greatest gravity, and the dinner proceeded. Nothing was said at the time, but the navy officers tell the story.

More Pay, More Love.

"New York city school ma'ams are going to be an attractive target for Cupid's shafts in the near future?" said a principal the other day. "With salaries ranging from $1,650 to $2,400 yearly, even an extravagant spinster will be able to boost the credit side of a savings account. Some of my women teachers already report an increase in the number of suitors, and they say there is an appreciable increase in the fervor of their beaus' protestations of affection."

An Endless Chain.

"We're kind of irritated in our flat," said the worried-looking man.

"What's the trouble?"

"Our children keep the next-door neighbors awake, so they pass the time by playing the piano; that makes the pet dog next door to them bark, and that keeps the children next door awake, and there's so much noise through the building that there's no chance whatever of our children going to sleep."

BUT WHAT WAS THE ANSWER?

Instance of the Remarkable Encyclopaedic Knowledge of Dr. Talcott Williams.

It has been said that no pretension is more dangerous than to lay claim to encyclopaedic knowledge; it only needs the casual question of a six-year-old to knock you from your pedestal. But occasionally there develops a man reasonably well fitted to be set upon such an intellectual elevation, and such a one is Dr. Talcott Williams, journalist and publicist, of Philadelphia. He seems to know all about most things, and pretty nearly all of some things besides, and within the month the Quaker City has heard another instance of his practical infallibility, "right off the hat."

During an evening conversation at the home of a suburban hostess the talk, upon art, centered on Michael Angelo. Then passing reference was made to the great master's broken nose—and some had never known his nose was broken, while none of the few who had acquired that fact could recall how the accident occurred. The daughter of the house started for the library to look up the matter, but some one said:

"Call up Dr. Williams; he'll know, and I've an idea it sort o' pleases him to help the world along that way."

So the 'phone book was turned to instead of Vassari's "Lives," and when the sought-for "party" was on the wire and the question put to him, the answer was delightfully instant.

Then the apology was sent in with the thanks, and Dr. Williams replied: "I'm only too glad to have been of any help—and, believe me, I've often been called up on matters of far less importance than Michael Angelo's nose."—W. J. P.

MUST LEARN NEW LANGUAGE

Amusing Difficulties of English People in Making Themselves Understood in This Country.

In his recent book, "Memories of a Labor Leader," Mr. John Wilson, M. P., gives an amusing instance of the confusion which arises from the differences between the names of articles of home use in England and their names in America.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson formerly lived in America. They had as a neighbor, in a Pennsylvania mining town, an old lady who had left Tynedale some years prior to their acquaintance with her. She gave them an account of her first attempt to make herself understood at the general store. She described to them the many misunderstandings which arose between her and the storeman until she came to the last article, which was treacle. She had never changed her dialect, but spoke the pure Wallsend, with the burr untouched.

"Aa want some treacle," she demanded, in unadulterated Northumbrian.

"I don't understand what you mean, ma'am."

"That in there," she said, pointing to a hogshead.

"That is molasses."

"That's what Aa want. Gi' me a pund of it."

"We don't sell it by weight, ma'am; we sell it by measure."

The old lady gasped in utter amazement.

"Dee ye mean to say," she faltered, "that we sell treacle by the yard in this country?"—Youth's Companion.

Joseph Pulitzer's Ambition.

One day while cruising off the Atlantic coast our talk had drifted from actors whose performances we had seen and heard to the plays of Shakespeare, and Mr. Pulitzer spoke of the beautiful scene between Brutus and his wife. He began to repeat it, and never have I heard a finer recitation. It was so full and rounded, so tense with proper emphasis. From that he gave both Forum speeches. I grew more and more surprised. He would stop at the corner of the deck and while still holding my arm, he declaimed to the open sea.

"It was my desire once to be an orator, my great ambition. I used to practice those speeches by the hour."

It was the only time in all my acquaintance with him that I found him in this mood. But I never shall forget it—his tall, gaunt figure on the swaying deck, and the strength and melody that seemed so suddenly to have been born into his voice. It was a note that I cannot remember ever hearing again.—James Barnes, in Collier's Weekly.

To the Manner Born.

Max Muller, the famous Sanskrit scholar, was fond of recalling that he had once seen Queen Victoria and the Empress Eugenie enter a Paris theater together. The audience cheered itself hoarse; but what interested Professor Muller was the contrast in the conduct of the two royalties.

Both bowed in answer to the plaudits, and then sat down; but whereas Eugenie glanced behind her, much as you or I would do, to make sure of the chair being there to receive her, Victoria kept her eyes to the front, and took the chair for granted.

That was the difference between being born into the purple and marrying into it.—Youth's Companion.

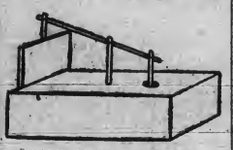
AVOID DANGER FROM FROST

Formation of Ice Around Base of Trees Keeps Ground in Frozen Condition, Retarding Growth.

Last year there was a scarcity of fruit in the middle states because the prematurely warm weather thawed the ground and warmed the trees, causing them to blossom. This was followed by frosty weather that froze the blossoms which contained the germs necessary to produce fruit.

This is a frequent occurrence and farmers have used fires and oil stoves under the branches of the trees in their orchards to keep the blossoms from being frost bitten.



There is danger of frost in our region until April 15 or later, and by delaying the budding these trees until that time this danger would be avoided, or there is ample time in the fall of the year for the ripening of the fruit, writes Chas. Dietz in the Chicago News.

In order to do this all that would be necessary is to scrape a small ridge of dirt about six inches high, forming a circle around the base of the tree about five feet from it. After the ground has thoroughly frozen in the latter part of January fill this bowl or space with water, which would be directly over the root of the tree. The cold weather would cause the water to become ice. Then place a layer of straw or hay over this ice. The device would keep the sun from thawing the ice, as the snow and ice ridges on the shady or north side of our fences now show. As ice is a nonconductor of heat, this would keep the dirt around the roots and base of the tree in a frozen condition, retarding the circulation or flowing of the sap until it was thawed and warmed up. The straw or hay could be removed about April 15 with safety.

OLD-FASHIONED RABBIT TRAP

Can Be Made by Any Boy Handy With Tools Inside Half an Hour and It Never Fails to Work.

Make a box with a sliding door to work up and down easily. Run a stringer over the center peg and fasten the trigger which has a little notch in it to hook behind the top board and to hold up the trap-door. When the rabbit gnaws at the bait he pushes the trigger back, which slides through the hole and lets the slide-door fall. This can be made out of any strong box by a boy who is handy with tools in half an hour and it never fails to work.

A Handy Diagram.

Where different varieties of apples are stored together in the same pit, or, if several sorts of vegetables are buried together, keep a diagram of the pit, something like this:

Ben Davis. Jonathan. Willow Twig. Pippin.

By this plan when fruit is wanted in the winter, one may now exactly what part of the pit to open to secure the varieties desired.

HORTICULTURAL NOTES

It does not pay to crowd trees in planting.

Encourage the boys to kill every rabbit they can this winter.

The damage done by rabbits does not stop with the trees they girdle.

The peach and plum are short-lived trees. The pear and apple are long-lived.

Grapes are still trodden under the bare feet in many of the vineyards of Italy and Spain.

Young orchards are injured by borers, rabbits and mice and should be protected against these pests.

Preparations should now be made to protect the younger trees in the orchard from rabbits and sunscald.

Wood ashes are alkaline and not acid in any degree and are very good for strawberry and other fruit plants.

One secret of success in getting grafts is to have the scions entirely dormant when they are placed in the limbs.

A good deal depends upon what a certain market prefers, in the matter of fruit packages, as well as in fruit varieties.

Experiments have shown that peach growers should not wait until the trees leaf out before they spray with Bordeaux mixture.

The rabbit is a carrier of several parasitic diseases of animals. Like some other things they look more innocent than they are.

Frequently ornamental shrubs that are not pruned each year, as they should be in most cases, grow too tall and become obstructed and lose much of their beauty.

Keep the apples in a cool dry place until danger of freezing occurs, then move them to the cellar, but be sure to keep the cellar as cold as possible without danger of freezing.

The Roman stem apple is very easily affected with bitter rot, but this may be prevented by spraying with Bordeaux mixture or lime-sulphur solution before the apples are full grown.

The Kentucky Legislature Must Redeem Party Pledges.

The coming session of the Kentucky Legislature is the most important ever held, not only in its bearing upon the material progress of the State, but in its effect upon the future of the Democratic party. In the flush of success we must not lose sight of the fact that the progressive principles advocated by Gov. McCreary and his associates on the State ticket were responsible for the signal triumph of November 7th. The overwhelming majority was not so much a partisan victory as it was the expression of the opinion of practically every Democrat in the State, and many thousands of independents, that they had faith in the sincerity and honesty of the Democratic platform, and in the men who publicly proclaimed that ever pledge in it would be sacredly kept. Had the voters believed for an instant that Gov. McCreary, would, after election, betray them and prove false to his vows they would have swept him and his associates into oblivion. Had there been an intimation that the Democratic members of the House, or Senate would repudiate the vital planks in the platform the whole ticket would have gone down to merited defeat.

Parties, like individuals, should be held to strict account. They can no longer trifle with the people. If they secure votes by promise of reforms they must keep their pledges, or suffer the punishment that an outraged electorate will visit upon them at the first opportunity. What are the conditions on the eve of the assembling of the Legislature? Gov. McCreary, with a life-time record of promises redeemed and pledges kept, can be relied on to do his duty. He will face every public question squarely, and will urge upon the Democrats in both Houses that the promises of the platform be translated into deeds. He is not responsible for the Legislature, nor can he command, or coerce its members, but he is ready to co-operate with them in enacting into laws the principles which won the commendation of the voters and restored the government of the State to the Democracy.

But what of the Legislature itself? How do its members stand on the grave problems that confront them? Will they strengthen the arm of the Chief Executive in his effort to further the interests of the State and elevate the Democracy to a place of power, where it will have the respect and confidence of the whole people, or will they listen to the voice of the tempter, repudiate their obligations and bring disaster to the party and disgrace upon themselves? If that question is not promptly answered it will be too late to save the Democracy from the perils that environ it. While there is yet time to appeal to the conscience, the intelligence and the patriotism of the General Assembly let the press of the State join the voters in their demand that the lobby shall stay its corrupting hand and permit the members of both Houses to honestly interpret the hopes of the people as expressed at the polls.

One of the determinate issues of the last campaign was the County Unit question. Both parties put it in their platforms and gave solemn assurance to the friends of temperance that the law would be extended to meet their wishes. Judge O'Rear questioned the sincerity of the Democrats in every speech that he made. Gov. McCreary and Mr. McDermott and other Democratic nominees thundered back at him that they were in earnest, and denounced him for misrepresenting their motives and questioning their honesty. The Democratic papers stilled the fears of their readers by constant promises that their party would have control of both Houses, and that the Democracy alone could and would give the people the relief the Constitution declared them entitled to.

But that was before election. What do we hear and see now? The liquor lobby are playing their pestilential activities all over the State, using every argument and influence to get Democratic legislators to repudiate the platform upon which their party was swept into power. The same interests that have blocked legislation year after year to prevent the County Unit law from coming to vote are making a last desperate effort to thwart the will of the majority. They are burrowing in dark places; cajoling the weak and threatening the strong; pleading with Senators to violate sanctity of their platform declarations; combining with predatory corporations that have legislative favors to ask; working selfishly always without a care for the future of the Democracy, or the honor of the State.

It will make every true Democrat hang his head in shame when he realizes that these conspirators against the integrity of a great party and the peace and happiness for a great State have found supporters ready to further their nefarious design. What salve they can apply to their conscience that will ease them under the burden of their betrayals I know not, but I do know that no Democrat in this enlightened day can prove a traitor to the principles of his party and again face the people without getting his just deserts.

The extention of the County Unit has the sanction of a Democracy that has renewed its youth, its success in Kentucky presaging its supremacy in the nation. We must keep our word, every man of us in and out of office, must come clean. We must live and honest and true, or be stripped like unclean things in the Temple.

I appeal to my fellows of the press and to my fellow Democrats everywhere to urge with one voice, the Kentucky Legislature, which is overwhelmingly Democratic, to do its full duty. —H. A. Sommers.

Victims of a Loathsome Disease.

Esther Martin, the ten year-old daughter of Lewis Martin, of near Cordova, died of al athsome disease last Friday morning. What the disease is or how it came to afflict the Martin family, is a mystery to physicians, but from earliest childhood the girls of the family have been afflicted with it, and one by one, before they reach maturity, they die. Three girls have already it died of the disease and one yet lives, but she is so badly afflicted that no hope of her recovery is entertained.

The disease is a skin and blood disease which attacks the face and head. Only the exposed parts of the flesh are attacked, and that part under the flesh is as sound as that of the average child. The disease first made itself apparent twelve or fifteen years ago, when the eldest girl of the family was attacked. Members of the county board of health were called in many believing that the disease was leprosy. Nothing could be done to save the child and gradually the awful canker ate thru the flesh and into the head causing death.

The next girl was then attacked and she too, died in the same way. The last girls face was practically eaten up and she suffered untold agonies. Now the fourth and only girl of the family is a victim, and the disease has almost reached the acute stage.

Specialists have seen the children but could give no name for the disease, which is as much a mystery today as ever.

A singular fact is that none of the boys of the Martin family have been attacked and all are sound and well. Neither of the parents have ever suffered with the disease. The mother died a few years ago from tuberculosis.—Grant County News.

Featuref of Message.

President Taft says in his wool message, that present tariff methods exclude high-grade wools from the American market, thereby crippling American manufacturers.

Suggests changes whereby clean, low-priced foreign wools may be imported, thus displacing cheap substitutes.

Favors a specific duty on grease wool in terms of its scoured contents, thus meeting the basis upon which manufacturers make their calculations. Claims, this would bring to American market wools of high and low quality now excluded.

Holds that the duties on many classes of wool are prohibitory, especially the higher grades demanded by Americans. Competition is thus eliminated even in times of extreme [illegible]

Cites the report by the tariff Board to show ample reason for the downward revision of Schedule K, in accord with protective principles, and urges that it be undertaken at once.

Admonishes Congress to bear in mind, during revision, the necessity of not injuring the independent and established wool industry in this country.

Battle Creek, Mich., Dec. 20.—John Hefster, 73 years old, a human chameleon, died here to-day. He formerly was a farmer in this county. Fifteen years ago his skin turned red. Since then he had been under the observation of physicians constantly, a good part of the time in hospitals.

When death came Hefster was almost black. The color of his skin changed seven times altogether, but never resumed its natural color.

Hefster had been brown, yellow, red, black, blue and three different shades of some of these colors.

TOBBCCO NEWS.

(Courier-Journal.)

Owensboro was said to be flooded with tobacco Monday. More than 500 wagon loads were awaiting their turn to unload at the various receiving points. The amount on hand was the largest that was ever in Owensboro at one time for a score or more of years, and growers rejoiced at the way the tobacco was graded as it brought top prices.

The last week has been a fine season to strip tobacco and the farmers of Trigg county have been quite busy making good use of the season. Several crops near Montgomery have been sold. Prices $8.50 to $9.00 crop round. After a good deal of rain we had a nice day too for killing hogs and everybody has tried to kill.

Several large sales of tobacco were reported at Carlisle, Monday, some of the best crops bringing $10 per hundred all around. The growers who are finishing the work of stripping, are making application for the sale of their crops on the loose leaf market, which will open at Carlisle January 2. That the opening market here will see a large offering of tobacco is already assured.

At a meeting at Bowling Green, of representatives of the fifty-one unions comprising the Bowling Green One-sucker Tobacco District the sale of 10,000,000 pounds of tobacco, comprising the amount pooled in the five counties of the district, was ratified. The average price for all grades is $7.

The Executive Committee of the Burley Tobacco Society met last Tuesday at Lexington, and it is believed will ratify the sale of 10,000,000 pounds to T. H. Kirk, representing the American Tobacco Company and foreign interests and may make a sale of the remaining 13,000,000 pounds in the pool, for which Kirk and associates have been negotiating.

On the eve of closing down the local loose leaf tobacco warehouses, at Richmond, the floors of both were crowded for Wednesday's sales, which will be the last until after the holidays. One hundred and twenty-five thousand pounds were sold from both houses Tuesday, and averaged $8. A crop of Prewitt & Burnside, of Garrard county, averaged $21, some of it bringing over $30.

Matrimonial Sahara.

Ulysses, Kan., Dec. 21.—Scarcity of marriageable young women in Grant County, 35 miles from a railroad, has caused all of the young bachelors of the county to form a society which will seriously engage in the business of wife-getting for its members. When the plans of the society have been carried out it is hoped that Grant County will cease to be matrimonial Sahara.

Thirty-five good looking young men, all of them well fixed and able to support wives, have organized the Grant County Bachelor's Club for the purpose of getting into correspondence with eligible young women, "object, matrimony."

A part of the program of the club in getting suitable mates for its members is the issuance of a catalogue containing the photographs and the complete descriptions of each of the bachelors, giving in detail particulars of income, property and all qualifications. These are to be sent over the country, and women contemplating matrimony are urged to correspond and to communicate with the members of the club.

The banks, and offices at the court house, were closed Monday.

The mud has been too numerous to mention this month.

Are you getting all those debts liquidated for the new year.

There has been an abundance of good weather for stripping tobacco this fall.

It makes no difference from which way the wind comes it brings rain.

No new cases of diphtheria in Bullittsburg neighborhood, and all danger is considered past.

The weather last Thursday and Friday was hard on the dealers in turkeys who have been paying fancy prices for them.

The use of fireworks as reminders of Christmas time began last Friday, and was well under way by Saturday afternoon.

Christmas day in Burlington was very quiet, with plenty of mud, a dismal appearance and a raw, damp atmosphere prevailing.

Some of those who have tobacco in the 1909 pool say two years is too long for them and they will not consider the proposition for a ten year's pool.

In the footing of the liabilities in the Erlanger Deposit Bank report last week there was a mistake. The several items were correct, but the total was erroneous.

O. S. Crisler, veterinary, visited several of the towns up in the Blue Grass section of Kentucky, last week, and thinks it is the garden spot of all creation.

The packages, &c., with which the rural mail carriers were encumbered last Saturday and last Monday, would have made a Santa Claus robe very becoming to them.

Winter after winter the southern tourists from this county have increased until there are quite a number who wend their way south about this time of the year.

If you are troubled with chronic constipation, the mild and gentle effect of Chamberlain's Tablets makes them especially suited to your case. For sale by all dealers.

It is a pleasure to the Recorder to announce that Elmo Gaines, of the Idlewild neighborhood, will get a $1,500-a-year position under the new Auditor H. M. Bosworth, who will take possession of his office the first of the new year. Mr. Gaines is a native of this county, and a son of the late John W. and Mary Rogers Gaines, and a most excellent gentleman. He is 38 years of age and a bachelor. The only office he ever held was deputy under Assessor T. G. Willis during his first term, and he performed the duties of that position in a most satisfactory manner, being able to list property at its taxable value without incuring the displeasure of the property owner, which is generally a difficult task. It was largely through the influence of Assessor T. G. Willis that Mr. Gaines was chosen for the job upon which he will enter with the best wishes of every Democratic voter in Boone county. Mr. Gaines is a very quiet yet a most affable gentleman and to appreciate his many good traits of character it is only necessary to become thoroughly acquainted with him. Here's to you, Elmo.

Occupying their New Home.

Mr. and Mrs. George Kreylich are now occupying their new residence on the Petersburg pike near Idlewild, having moved into it the latter part of last week. It is a two story, ten room residence, with numerous halls, presses, bath room, basement under the entire building, up-to-date heat, water and light plants. It is decidedly the most modern residence in this part of the county, and occupying an elevated location can be seen for miles in any direction. Jesse Kirkpatrick of Burlington, was the architect and builder of this elegant residence, the workmanship on which can not be excelled. Mr. Kirkpatrick is a young man and this is the first fine residence he ever undertook, and it is a most excellent testimonial to his ability as both an architect and a builder, and establishes for him a reputation that is difficult to attain. To say Mr. and Mrs. Kreylich are delighted with their new home only partially expresses it, and they being such excellent people have a host of friends who share with them that delight.

The Sunday school Christmas exercises at the Baptist church, last Sunday, were somewhat out of the ordinary and were highly pleasing to all. The program consisted of recitations and vocal and instrumental music, the violin duet by Prof. Dix and Miss Patty Revill, accompanied by Miss Sherley Tolin on the organ charmed the audience. Mrs. M. L. Riddell presented each member of her class with a nice hat pin, while Mrs. E. E. Kelly's class gave her a handsome picture. Mr. R. S. Cowen treated the school to delicious oranges.

Dr. O. S. Crisler, veterinary, seeing two or three good locations in which to practice his profession, is thinking seriously of leaving the county. The doctor has a good practice here, but the locations he has under consideration have several advantages over this, the chief of which is good roads. Bad roads are getting in their work to the detriment of Boone county all the time.

Herbert Kirkpatrick, the local dealer in furs, made a tour of the fur-bearing territory in Woolper neighborhood, last Monday, and had a narrow escape. When crossing the creek he fell and in floundering around got into water that was deep enough to swim a horse. When he reached the shore he was thoroughly wet but still in possession of his purchase of furs.

It is said that there are several parties who will bid for the carrying of the Burlington, Florence and Erlanger mails under the contract to be let in a few weeks. It is hopped that none of the bids will be placed at a figure below what will be a reasonable compensation for the labor and capital required to perform the work.

A Charming Woman

is one who lovely in face, form, mind and temper. But its hard for a woman to be charming without health. A weak, sickly woman will be nervous and irritable. Constipation and kidney poisons show in pimples, blotches skin eruptions and a wretched complexion. But Electric Bitters always prove a godsend to women who want health, beauty and friends. They regulate Stomach, Liver and Kidneys, purify the blood; give strong nerves, bright eyes, pure breath, smooth velvety skin, lovely complexion and perfect health. Try them. 50c at all druggists.

"Best on Earth"

This is the verdict of R. J. Howell, Tracy, O., who bought Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for his wife. "Her case was the worst I have ever seen, and looked like a sure case of consumption. Her lungs were sore and she coughed almost incessantly and her voice was hoarse and weak. Foley's Honey and Tar Compound brought relief at once and less than three bottles effected a complete cure." For sale at Jones' drug store, Walton.

Jailer Adams had a housecleaning at the jail the day his two prisoners left for Frankfort, and the county's hostelry is ready to entertain guests again, but winter boarders are not so numerous as they used to be. Years ago it was that the jail generally contained from one to five petty criminals all winter, who would come forth fat and sleek in the spring.

CLOSE CALL FROM DEATH

Boston Boy Has Hair-raising Experience at Night in Manila Bay.

Letters received by E. S. Perkins of Jarvis Hill from his twenty-one year-old son Lester, brother of the kite expert and aeronaut, Samuel F. Perkins, tell of an experience which he calls more "hair-raising" than kite flying. Young Perkins visited one of the fortified islands in Manila bay last month on a 60-foot tug.

On the return trip a storm came up and the boat was wrecked on a fish trap. Perkins managed to get hold of a life preserver and drifted about all night, being at one time within a mile of shore, but prevented from landing by a shift of wind. He clung some time to a fish trap, fought off a Chinaman and a Filipino woman, who sought his life preserver, and was finally picked up in the morning completely exhausted after having been 14 hours in the water. After ten days in the hospital he wrote to his father that it was a "grand experience."

Young Perkins had done considerable kite flying with his brother and had developed a strong physique, which undoubtedly enabled him to come through the ordeal. He went out to Manila last September and is employed in the custom house there.—Boston Transcript.

END OF VACATION ARGUMENT

Wife Agrees to Separate Outing Plan, but Hubby Drops the Subject.

In the garden, over the Sunday paper and a pitcher of iced tea, they were holding a vacation argument.

"Yes," he said, "Doc Sawyer tells me a separate vacation is the best thing for married folks."

"Humph."

"Well, look at the matter calmly. Here we are, married nearly twenty years, and always together. Think what a change it would be for both of us to get away alone—to see nothing but new scenes, nothing but new faces."

"Humph."

"A change, a thorough change, that is what we require, Doc Sawyer says."

"William, look here. I consent. I consent providing you make this change really thorough by letting me go off on my vacation by myself, and you take with you on yours the six children that I haven't had out of my sight for ten years."

But this time it was William who said:

"Humph."

Universal Joke.

This might go—perhaps it has gone—undoubtedly it will—in New York about Chicago, in Chicago about St. Louis, in Cleveland about Cincinnati, in Minneapolis about St. Paul, and so on. At any rate, a teacher in Portland, Ore., was about to tell the primary class the story of "The Miraculous Pitcher," and as a preliminary she asked: "Now, how many of you children have ever been in a very small town? Of course, Portland is a large city; but who has been in what we call a small country village?" Numerous hands were raised. "Well, Oscar," said the teacher, "what little town have you been in?" "Seattle!" answered the eager Oscar.

Story of Border.

Speaking of the southwest, we heard a story from the Arizona-Mexican border that seems to be timely. One of the Americans damaged by bullets from across the line gave his name as Patrick O'Ryan y Vasquez. When carried into the zone of safety he was found to be armed to the teeth.

"Are you an American or a Mexican?" he was asked.

"Jist enough of an American to shoot on th' slightest provocation," he groaned, "an' jist enough av a Mexican to miss ivrything Oi shoot at."—Boston Traveler.

Spooning Spots.

Jerome S. McWade, the Duluth philanthropist, paused in an eloquent appeal for a fresh-air fund to tell an appropriate story.

"A little country-weeker," he said, "was questioned on his return home about the lovely countryside he had visited.

"'I seen trees,' he said, 'and flowers, and cows, and hedges, and—'

"'Hold on. Wot's hedges? Wot are they made of?' asked another boy.

"'Where I wuz,' said the little fellow, 'the hedges wuz made of bushes and leaves and sweethearts.'"

Man's Preposterous Appetite.

Herbert W. Fisher in the World's Work for July gives a very uncomfortable simile as an illustration of the surplus quantities of food we consume.

"Two generations ago a Dutch physician, out walking with his child, called the lad's attention to a passing hay load as big as a mastodon. 'There, my son,' said he, 'is the equivalent of what one man eats in a year in excess of what he needs.'"—World's Work.

A Hard Court.

Circuit Judge Lewis, having heard some comments to the effect that he was holding "a hard court" in Perry county, recently took occasion to say that he was simply doing his best to administer the law exactly in all matters coming before him. Judge Lewis also said: "If men are guilty of committing offenses against the laws of our State and the good of our community the intention and purpose of our laws is that they shall be punished. If witnesses are unwilling to give testimony, as their duty as citizens requires them to do, then it is the purpose of the law that they shall be required to do so."

The statement should be sufficiently clear to any person of ordinary intelligence. Courts are held for the purpose of administering the laws and punishing infractions thereof. Those who observe the laws need not fear the courts, whether they be "hard" or "easy." It is undeniably true that some of our courts have been too "easy" and it is rather seldom that a complaint is recorded to the effect that they are too "hard." It is well to "temper justice with mercy" wherever the conditions warrant such action, but in so doing there should be no compromises with crime. Laws are made for the protection of society and for the preservation of "the peace and dignity of the Commonwealth." If courts wink at crime they fail utterly to fulfill the purpose for which they were established.

If the law is to have any potency as a deterrent force it must be faithfully administered. The judge who runs a "hard" court in a county or locality where there is laxity of law observance is performing a solemn and important duty and is rendering good service to the people who elected him. Judge Lewis' platform is unimpeachable, and lawabiding people will indorse his utterances and his acts so far as they are in line with the simple principles laid down. As for persons who fear "hard" courts, policy, at least would seem to dictate that they should "stand from under."—C.-J.

Do not expect success with house plants unless you give them enough room and enough sunlight.

Wins Fight For Life.

It was a long and bloody battle for life that was waged by James B. Mershon, of Newark, N. J., of which he writes: "I had lost much blood from lung hemorrhages, and was very weak and rundown. For eight months I was unable to work. Death seemed close on my heels, when I began three weeks ago to use Dr. King's New Discovery. But it has helped me greatly. It is doing all that you claim." For weak, sore lungs, obstinate coughs, stubborn colds, hoarseness, lagrippe, asthma, hay-fever or any throat or lung trouble its supreme. Guaranteed by all druggists.

ARE THEY AFRAID?

There are, in this neighborhood agents for several "bucket bowl" cream separators. "Bucket bowl" separators are the kind with wide mouth bowls, full of parts, set on top of their spindles. These agents say, to the farmers intending to buy a separator. "Look out for the Tubular," or "Don't try the Tubular," or "Beware of the Tubular." To hear them talk you would guess right away that is the best cream separator made, and that these "bucket bowl" fellows are afraid of it. And they are afraid of it. The Tubular surpasses every other separator in every particular, and you should take mighty good care you do see a Tubular before you buy a separator. We will be pleased to show you the latest Tubular and give you an illustrated catalog.

Observe the plumb bob on rear of the Tubular frame. It makes leveling quick, easy, accurate—enables you to keep the Tubular level and get the best work out of it.

OFFICIALS TO GET SIGNATURES

Burley Society To Begin Campaign for New Ten-Year Pooling Contract.

GREAT INTEREST TAKEN

Present Agreement Offers New Advantages, and by First of March It Is Expected Every Grower in Central Kentucky Will Have Signed.

The campaign for signatures to the new ten-year pooling contract of the Burley Tobacco Society will begin next week, and it is believed by the officials of the society that by March 1, the time set for the closing of the pool, that nearly every burley tobacco grower in Central Kentucky will have signed.

Copies of the new contracts, embodying, as they do, all the advantages of easy handling and prompt payment for tobacco delivered, and at the same time insuring to the proposed new Burley Tobacco Company an adequate supply for the next ten years for the proposed mammoth factory at Lexington, will be distributed by chairmen of the county boards in each county in the Burley district.

Interest has awakened surprisingly since the district board adopted in Lexington last Tuesday the amendments of the executive committee, which were based upon suggestions of growers who did not believe the first pooling plan contracts were complete. Under the new contracts, which preserve, in the main, all the advantages of the original, but which add a number of decided advantages in the interest of both landlord and tenant, the grower may select his own market, and when he delivers his tobacco will get his money at once.

The new contracts, which must be signed between now and March 1, when the pool closes, are as follows:

Book No. Pledge No.

.....County

.....Ky., ...1911

This contract made this day witnesseth:

That in consideration of the benefits to be derived herefrom by the parties hereto and that this contract is made by the undersigned and accepted by the hereinafter named Burley Tobacco Society as a mutual contract with other contracts of like import, taken and to be taken and entered into by and with many other growers of tobacco, which are of mutual benefit to all, the undersigned grower of tobacco owning and expecting to own Burley tobacco of the 1911 to 1920 crops inclusive grown and to be grown on his farm, containing .....acres (the usual crop grown on this land is..... acres), bounded on the North by .....on the East by .....on the South by .....and on the West by .....in..... County, Kentucky, hereby constitutes and appoints the Burley Tobacco Society, a corporation under the laws of Kentucky, as sole agent for the purpose of receiving and selling one-half of all the said tobacco and for such purpose hereby transfers and assigns to and invests in said agent the title and right of possession to said tobacco and agrees to deliver the same on demand at such point in said county, or in the county where the tobacco is stored, as said society may designate.

The undersigned, however, reserves the right any time prior to March 1, of the second year following the year in which the tobacco is grown, to select the market on which he prefers his tobacco to be sold and the house in which it is to be sold, unless the Burley Tobacco Company has a house on the selected market, in which event it is to be sold at the company's warehouses, and it is further understood and agreed that after the stock subscribed for herein is paid for to the Burley Tobacco Company and all charges for the selling of the tobacco, the remainder of the proceeds is to be paid to the undersigned then and there.

The tobacco pooled above is one-half of all the tobacco grown on the land above described, as well as on all land owned by the undersigned in the State of Kentucky with the exception of partnership or joint ownership land.

The undersigned further subscribes for shares of the capital stock to an amount equal to not less than twenty per cent nor more than fifty per cent of the gross sales of the tobacco hereby pledged in the Burley Tobacco Company, incorporated, or some other company to be incorporated, to be left to the decision of the District Board of the Burley Tobacco Society prior to October 1, 1912; the stock subscribed by him being.....per cent of the gross sales of his tobacco, and in case of the failure of the undersigned to indicate at the time of the signing of this pledge the amount of stock subscribed for by him, his signature to this contract shall be construed as a subscription to said stock to an amount equal to twenty per cent of the gross sales of his tobacco. When tobacco is sold the undersigned authorizes the Burley Tobacco Society to pay for said stock out of the proceeds of said tobacco. The shares of said stock to be issued to the undersigned, but no fractional shares shall be issued.

The undersigned by reason of this contract becomes and is entitled to all the privileges of a member of the said Burley Tobacco Society.

Upon his failure to fully comply with the terms and conditions of this contract, the undersigned hereby agrees to pay to said society as liquidated damages twenty per cent of the value of said tobacco for the benefit of the members of said society; but this shall not be construed as a waiver of the right of said agent to enforce this contract or to enjoin its breach in equity.

The Board of Directors of the Burley Tobacco Society shall dissolve the pool in any year provided two-thirds in interest of those who were members in the preceding year and are still members in the year in which the vote is taken vote accordingly, the proportionate interest of each voter to be determined by the quantity of tobacco which he may have grown and delivered to the pool in the preceding year.

The Board of Directors may in any year order and provide for such election to be held at the time of the annual precinct election and shall do so upon the written demand of one-fourth of the members of the society, said demand to be made by written notice to the society thirty days before the annual precinct election.

Should the undersigned make a bona fide sale of any farm or farms pooled under the pledge or should the title thereto pass from him by descent or devise, then and in that event this contract shall be cancelled on the first day of January following the sale, or change of ownership by descent or devise, as to any tobacco grown on such farm or farms after such date; but the purchaser, heir or devisee of such farm or farms shall have the option to become a party to this contract and to comply with and carry out its terms and conditions, the exercise of which option shall be indicated by him on or before such date, to-wit: January 1, by endorsing his signature on this pledge; but before a purchaser can exercise such option the vendor must indicate his assent thereto by his signature endorsed on this contract.

If he does not consent to the exercise of such option by the purchaser, the vendor shall have the right to substitute in the pool in lieu of the land sold by him an approximately equal number of acres of land; but his desire to make such substitution must be indicated on or before January 1 following the sale of his pooled land by a written endorsement signed by him on the back of this pledge, which endorsement shall describe the land substituted.

It is further understood and agreed that the pool will be closed, so far as landlords are concerned, on or before March 1, 1912, in the discretion of the District Board, and that thereafter no new members can be admitted; but the District Board of the Burley Tobacco Society at their regular annual meeting in October of each year by two-thirds vote, may open the books of the Society for the admission of new members at such time and upon such terms and conditions as the Board may prescribe. The time for closing the books for the admission of new members shall be left to the discretion of the Board.

It is distinctly agreed that the earnings, income and surplus made by the Burley Tobacco Company upon the 1909 crop shall belong to the members of the 1909 pool and that the Board of Directors of the Burley Tobacco Society may invest the same for their benefit in the discretion of said Board. On the 1st of October in each year the Board of Directors of the Burley Tobacco Company shall have the right and authority in their discretion to pro rate the estimated earnings and surplus of the company among the various stockholders of record on the books of the company at such date and either to pay same to the stockholders in cash or to issue stock to them for their proportionate part of same.

The undersigned further agrees to leave his stock in the Burley Tobacco Company and to vote same so as to continue that company; but authorizes the Board of Directors of the Burley Tobacco Society to invest same in the stock of such other company as they may in their discretion organize.

The undersigned further agrees that the Board of Directors of the Burley Tobacco Society may handle and manage said Burley Tobacco Company and any other company in which the proceeds of his tobacco or his stock is invested, as provided by this contract, as in their judgment is best.

As stated before, the pool is closed on or before March 1, 1912; that is, so far as landlords are concerned. It is further understood and agreed that any tenant or tenants growing tobacco on the pooled farm shall have the right to pool any crop on crops in any year prior to a division thereof, if he or they may so desire, and it is left optional with said tenant as to whether or not he will take stock in such company; but he can do so if he desires to an extent not to exceed fifty per cent of the tobacco he pools; but in the event the undersigned has a crop or crops of tobacco upon pooled land, in which he has no tenant, he is to the extent of the remaining fifty per cent of the crop not hereinbefore provided for, to have the privilege of a tenant in pooling same.

The Solicitor has no authority to change in any way the terms of this contract.

The proposed rearranging of the Congressional districts in Kentucky is not at all satisfactory to the Democrats of the Sixth District, which, under the new arrangement will put Gallatin, Carroll and Trimbel counties in the Seventh District, while Robertson, Bracken and Mason will be added to the Sixth. The Sixth District does not want to be disturbed. Of course it will be impossible to redistrict the State so as to suit everybody.

Robert H. Nowlin was made glad and sad at the same time over the results of the township election. He was elected road supervisor of Miller township, and his driving horse "old Jack" he drove during the day electioneering dropped dead in the harness when the results of the voting was announced.—Lawreneeburg Register.

Tobacco Is Moving.

Dispatches from various quarters of the State bring the important news that "tobacco is moving." Such reports always are cheering for activity in the tobacco market in Kentucky is reflected in all other commercial channels.

The numerous accounts of a "record-breaking rush" and the frequent references in the dispatches to the "satisfactory prices" that are being received are assurances that call for general congratulation. That the tobacco growers should get good prices for their product is greatly to be desired. Kentucky grows a tremendous amount of "the narcotic weed." Of the entire production of the United States more than one-third is grown on the hills, in the valleys and along the alluvial plains that lie within the borders of Kentucky. Satisfactory returns for the corn, therefore, have significance for many thousands of Kentuckians, members of that vast army which lives near the soil and is directly and intimately connected with the industry. The prosperity of the State is largely dependent upon the prosperity of the tobacco farmer, since every resident of the State profits to some degree in some way when tobacco is moving and when the prices are satisfactory.

Surely no class of our fellow citizens is more deserving of just reward for labor than is the rank and file of the tobacco raisers, constituting as they do, the very bone and sinew of the Commonwealth, and making up with their dependents "a great multitude which no man may number." Every crop of tobacco that is brought to maturity represents months of patient and onerous toil, extending at times thru all hours of the day and through all conditions of climate. There is no plant so exacting of unremitting attention as is this green and gummy annual of the genus nicotiana.

Verily, the grower deserves all he gets and if, in this season of the hurried movement of leaf, lugs and trash, he sees vialons of a Merry Christmas in the vine-clad cottage no one should begrudge him any good cheer that may follow the materialization of his dream.
